Interesting Mystery of Miss Milo and How She Covers Herself with a Secret Enamel to Give an Air of Chaste Severity to Her Living Reproductions of Classic Statues.

Miss Milo as Venus.

As the Huntress Goddess Diana.

The Enameled Modern Venus.

PROBABLY the greatest object of attraction and curiosity in England just now is Miss Milo, the modern Venus.

Miss Milo appears every night at the Pavilion Theatre in reproductions of the most famous types of womanly beauty in ancient and modern sculpture. She is, in fact, a living statue.

Two things especially about Miss Milo excite curiosity. One is the mystery of her identity. The other is the secret white enamel with which she covers herself so that her living flesh presents the appearance of dead white Parian marble.

Nobody knows who Miss Milo is. She has preserved her incognito in spite of the most determined efforts to find it out. Every night she drives to the theatre in a closed automobile, steps out, completes her performance and leaves immediately afterward. No one has been able to make her acquaintance, although the gilded youth of London and many members of the House of Lords have been striving for the honor. She is very modest, and is evidently a gentlewoman. It is credibly reported that she is the daughter of a well-known nobleman in reduced circumstances, although it has also been stated that she is the daughter of a deceased bishop.

The preparation with which Miss Milo covers her face and figure is a puzzle to everybody. It has been scrutinized by hundreds of thousands of eyes, with the finest opera glasses obtainable, but no one has been able to discover its nature. It is

TOM JOHNSON PLAYS 'ANGEL' FOR HIS DAUGHTER BESSIE

"So, Behold Miss Bessie Johnson, Daughter of the Multi-Millionaire Mayor of Cleveland, Absorbed with Her Prettiest of Toys, Moving About in Little Scene Models Tiny Puppets Which Represent the Characters of Her Creation, and Preparing to Exhibit Them in Flesh and Blood on the Stage of Her Own Theatre."

How Would You Like to Have a Famous Rich Papa Who Would Not Only Let You Be a "Star," But Pay for Your Players, and Then Build You a Beautiful Real Play-House for You and Your Players to Play in? Wouldn't That Be Ideal?

"ANGELS and ministers of "grace defend us," is, perhaps, the prayer from Shakespeare which Miss Bessie Johnson, daughter of Mayor "Tom" Johnson, of Cleveland, Ohio, addressed to her father when she forsook a brilliant position in the society of that city to go on the stage.

Mayor "Tom" Johnson certainly defended her most graciously upon the occasion of her debut—and now the secret is out that he is her "Angel."

The Cleveland multi millionaire Mayor and champion of cheap trolley fares, is building a theatre, whose stage his daughter will tread as a star, and in other expensive essentials of dramatic star-making is said to be going the "Angelic" limit.

It is no slight upon the ability of an actress to proclaim her need of a financial backer when she sets out to be a star. Whenever there is a star at least one "Angel" must be hov'ring 'round. Theatrical managers, lavish in their expenditures for scenery, costumes and all that, where established public favorites are concerned, are wont to fight shy of raw stellar material—hence "Angels."

"Mayor Tom" did not rush hastily and blindly in where managers fear to tread. It was a long time before he would listen at all to his pretty and ambitious daughter's pleadings to be allowed to study for the stage. Finally he let her go to New York and take lessons in a school of acting, probably hoping that she would tire of it and be glad to return to Cleveland, where she had won a fine record as one of the "little mothers" appointed by the Children's Court.

Loved by Cleveland Waifs.

Miss Bessie Johnson was dearly beloved by the waifs of Cleveland, who, led into wrongdoing at a tender age, were condemned to give to her frequent accounts of all their actions, on pain of having a harsher sentence imposed. When she went away to learn to be an actress they were grieved. But now doubtless they are proud of her increasing fame, and eager to scramble for seats in the gallery whenever her name is on the bills.

It is remembered by every one in Cleveland that Miss Johnson's dramatic debut there was quite a tremendous social occasion. The boxes and the orchestra contained the shining lights of the city—including "Mayor Tom" himself in a stage box—and the balcony and gallery were literally packed.

The affair had real professional significance, too, for Charles Frohman, the Napoleonic manager of New York and London, was present, and Miss Annie Russell, in the play, "Brother Jacques," was the star—everywhere except that night in Cleveland. Upon that occasion Miss Bessie Johnson, trembling out upon the stage once or twice in each act, got all the applause and most of the flowers.

There were flowers enough to stock a good-sized florist's shop, and a line of carriages long enough to spell prosperity at the Metropolitan Opera in New York. In short, everybody that was anybody was there, and most of the others stood in line for gallery tickets.

When Miss Bessie got tired responding to curtain calls, she stamped her foot near her father's box, whereupon "Mayor Tom" would rise in his official dignity but with a beaming face, and hold up his hand to command silence. When Miss Bessie, at last, was loudly called upon for a speech, she stamped her foot at her father again, and he obediently got up and bowed his thanks and hers to the audience.

Annie Russell Was Amiable.

Miss Russell, the star, took it all most amiably—she was in full sympathy with the manager and the buzzing box office till. And when it was all over, Miss Bessie Johnson had a contract which made her one of Mr. Frohman's thousand or so actors and actresses.

But, as already remarked, to be a star is quite another matter. Of course every actor and actress who is really serious asks forward to being at the head of his her own company—to have all the biggest on the bills, all the photographs in newspapers, most of the press notices, the lion's share of the receipts.

Has Miss Bessie Johnson's desires in direction had better warrant than some other young actresses. She less student of everything that ke the painstaking, successful note than that, she possessed quite out of the common.

She has written two or three plays which are said to exhibit the rare talent of the born dramatist.

Probably it was this demonstration of literary ability in connection with talent for acting that overcame the last of "Mayor Tom's" objections. To be a successful dramatist is distinction enough for anybody. Kings and queens with their heirs apparent and presumptive form a considerably larger percentage of the world's population than do the really capable dramatists.

So it was not surprising, at the close of his daughter's engagement with Miss Roesch, that the multi-millionaire Mayor of Cleveland should go forth in search of an experienced manager who would consent to take Miss Johnson to one hand and a million or so of "Mayor Tom's" money in the other, and, by use of the legerdemain at which theatrical managers are expert, manipulate the lady and the million into something that would resemble a star of the first magnitude.

The Architect's Plan for the Theatre Which Tom Johnson Is to Build and Equip to Please His Daughter.

Miss Bessie Johnson, from Her Latest Photograph.

Building a Theatre for Her.

Whether or not Mayor Johnson found this wonder worker is not yet certain, but it would be a wonder if he did not eventually. The manager who does not dearly love an "Angel" is a curiosity yet to be discovered. But it is known that the doting father and Mayor did not stop there.

Just as all actors yearn to be stars, so all stars crave a theatre of their own, where no uncongenial house manager will interfere with their pursuit of art for art's sake. So just now the good people of Cleveland are enjoying the spectacle of Mayor Johnson becoming the principal shareholder in a company organized to build a fine new theatre to be called "The Majestic," for which ground will be broken in a few days.

This will be the professional home of Bessie Johnson, star and dramatist. In the building, with easy access to the stage, she will have her play-writing den, where she will work out her play problems, with a stage manager, a stage carpenter, a property man and a scene painter ever at her beck and call.

So, behold Miss Bessie Johnson, daughter of the multi-millionaire Mayor of Cleveland, absorbed with her prettiest of toys—moving about in little scene-models tiny puppets which represent the characters of her creation and preparing to exhibit them in flesh and blood on the stage of her own real theatre.

Papa "Tom" can pay the bill, and never miss the money, and—who knows?—some day he may see in his daughter a feminine Sardou or Rostand. Perhaps more than that—even an American Bernhardt, who writes her own plays!

MISS MILO, THE TALK OF LONDON.

not plaster or paste, because it is evident that no thick substance is laid over her delicate skin. It is not a greasy or shiny preparation. It simply gives to her skin the color and tone of white marble, without disguising her form in any way.

This white enamel imparts to the slightly draped form of Miss Milo an air of chaste and classical severity, which accords perfectly with the character of her poses and relieves the exhibition of any suggestion of sensuality which would offend the taste of the most refined.

The perfect illusion of a marble statue is completed by the device of covering her eyes with the white preparation, so that the color of her eyes, eyelashes and eyebrows is completely concealed. The eyes have exactly the same sightless appearance that those of marble statues have.

The fame and mystery of Miss Milo have attracted many persons to the Pavilion Theatre besides the usual frequenters of that institution. The King himself has been to see her. Artists, writers, ladies of rank and many lovers of the beautiful have been delighted with her exhibition.

Among the many famous statues which Miss Milo impersonates are the Venus de Milo, the Venus de Medici, the Diana of the Louvre, the Venus of Canova, the modern Italian sculptor, Hebe, Psyche, Dorothea and a Bacchante. She wears dull black gloves against a background of the same color to convey the illusion of the lost arms of the Venus de Milo.

Miss Milo has been pronounced by Mr. Hamo Thornycroft, the most prominent sculptor in England, to be the most perfect embodiment of womanly beauty he has ever seen. She resembles the Venus de Milo more closely than any of the famous types of beauty. That means that she is of a solid and majestic appearance. She is, however, by a skilful manipulation of light and poise, able to represent the more fragile types of beauty.

She is five feet eight inches in height, measures thirty-eight inches round the bust and forty-two inches round the hips. Her head is eight and one-half inches high, and her figure is just eight times the height of her head, which is the perfect classical proportion. She measures two heads, or seventeen inches, across the shoulders, and one head and three-quarters across the hips.

Her arms are robust and powerful but graceful, and exquisitely proportioned. Her upper arm is one and a half heads or twelve and three-fourths inches in length, her forearm to the knuckles the same length.

Her muscular and beautifully molded leg is four heads, or thirty-four inches, in length. Her foot is one and an eighth heads in length, or nine and nine-sixteenths inches. This is a good-sized foot, but looks small on such a massively proportioned Venus.

Her throat is strongly formed, but its length and soft outlines give it a graceful appearance. From the pit of her throat to the centre of her breast is exactly one head, or eight and a half inches, and from the centre of one breast to the other exactly the same distance.

She weighs exactly 130 pounds in her statuesque poses.

It is understood that Mr. Thornycroft has obtained permission to transfer Miss Milo's proportions to permanent marble. It is probable that he is at work on the statue now, but the fact is kept very secret, like everything else concerning this remarkable beauty. The statue will be of intense interest to artists and the art-loving public. It will be compared with all the most famous types of beauty, ancient and modern. It should be far more interesting than "The Dancer" of the sculptor Falguiera, which was supposed to represent the form of Cleo de Merode. That departed from true beauty in the excessive development of bust and hips.

In these pages recently Mr. Henry T. Finck, the aesthetic expert on love and beauty, explained why the American woman was more beautiful than the most perfect type of ancient Greek beauty.

"We may not have any sculptors equal in skill to the best of those in ancient Greece," he wrote, "but we have women with more exquisitely chiselled features than any to be seen in Greek statues; and a living woman, after all, is preferable to a statue. She has the advantage, also, of varied expression and mobility of features. And this brings us back to the beginning of our discussion. Why are American women the most beautiful in the world?

"Because they combine the health of the Greeks with the spiritual life of the mediaevals, but add to these an intellectual charm of expression that no other race of women has ever possessed—a fascination that makes it possible to recognize an American woman wherever you see her, especially if you have a chance to converse and to note how the brilliancy of her mind illumines and beautifies her face."

Will the mysterious Miss Milo realize Mr. Finck's ideal of Greek symmetry and modern intelligence?

MISS THOROLD'S SELECT FITTING SCHOOL FOR BRIDES-ELECT

It's Very English, Very Smart and Most Exclusive, This Unique Preparatory School for Marriage, and Has at Present 300 Pupils, Being "Finished" to Make Husbands Happy.

HIDDEN away in the gentle hills of Mifflin County, half way across the State of Pennsylvania, secluded within a great estate in Logan Township, miles and miles from any fragment of a madding throng, inaccessible to all but a lumbering stage that runs mostly semi-occasionally, and guarded like a dorecote, is—what?

It's really such a tremendous thing that it deserves a whole paragraph to its name.

Here it goes:

THE SCHOOL FOR BRIDES-ELECT.

It is the place of the vestal virgins of the twentieth century, with the vast difference that all those within, instead of forswearing matrimony, are pledged to it.

It is the place where maidens, timid and mercurial, are fashioned into beings warranted to make the matrimonial yoke a dreamlike thing for mere men to bear.

It is the Place of the Destruction of the Servant Problem, the Annihilation of the Enigma of the Butcher and the Grocer, the Solving of the Mystery of the Punch and the Cocktail, the utter and entire Dissolution of the Sphynx of the Cook Stove.

It is the Greater Conspiracy against the Great American Divorce.

It is the unique Human Laboratory of Miss Katherine Lee Thorold, an English woman, who deserves a shrine built by grateful Benedicts of two continents.

Lovers Banished From This School.

Only two places of the kind are there in the world, and both were founded by Miss Lee Thorold. One is at Euston on the outskirts of London and is the parent institution. The other is that nestling down in Logan Township. Miss Lee Thorold divides her time between the two and is out in Mifflin now preparing for the fall campaign.

Apears at the door of the vine-covered temple to greet a visitor from this newspaper Miss Lee Thorold, slim, straight—a typical English woman of the best class. A man feels like taking off his shoes as at a mosque.

Miss Lee Thorold smiles compassionately and with understanding nod in very gentle, quiet tone begins to discuss the thing.

Mrs. Lee-Thorold is a Church of England woman and a practical, social philosopher, with a capacity for action. As she talks one begins to experience the most delightful feeling of security—even though on hasn't the faintest intention of becoming a bridegroom. All the gloom and uncertainty of the most ceremony time begins to fade away. One's soul purrs and says: "Well, it wouldn't be so bad after all."

As she talks one learns that the regime is very strict. Even the lover is banished.

"Why, think what it would be with a household of entranced couples," says Miss Lee Thorold in horror.

It's Motto: To Make Men Happy.

Even the lover is banished. It is Cupid who leads the brides-elect to the door, but once she enters Cupid must either run himself gracefully on the door mat or retire gracefully to the woods. As a concession to the little god's patronage, however, each bride-elect is permitted one letter a day from the benedicary to be.

There is an ancient mail box down by the gate and it is one of the sights of the school, the procession of maids in simple morning gowns, each eager for her share of the weighty bundle that the old carrier has left and grinned maliciously over as he left it.

Man, thinks the directress of Cupid's College, needs a guardian. Hence the need of an institution that will train women not to look out for themselves but to look out for man, erroneously believed to be the mainstay of womankind.

In this respect Miss Lee Thorold's school differs from all others of its kind in the world. The old idea of sex at war with sex is blown away. In fact, such a struggle, according to the tenets taught there could be only one result—crushing defeat for the men. It is rather to protect the traditional protector, to place him in an atmosphere where his natural best will be given freedom—where the inspiring genius may launch his thought, the business man be not hindered by narrow domesticity in his Napoleonic advance—that the future wives are gathered together and drilled.

Men are studied in the abstract, and then to each student under the personal tutelage of Miss Lee Thorold is emphasized the necessity of tempering this general knowledge with a minute consideration of the specific husband to be.

All this in a measure atones for love's exile during the period of learning.

Miss Lee Thorold arises and with her one goes to the second floor of the old mansion. There is a quaint succession of dens modelled for the comfort of masculinity. If they are a trifle too studied in their decorum, lacking the true Rathskeller touch that is the spirit of the real den, if the pillows and magazines are in too apple pie order, if they aren't really dens at all, what of that? It has been said that the brides-elect are but students after all.

"The den," says Miss Lee Thorold, "should take the place of the club."

She does not specify what kind of a club, but instinctively one knows.

And then there are the kitchens. Miss Lee Thorold knows the intimate connection between a man's heart and his stomach. Hence cooking is one of the most important features of the school curriculum. From plain roast up to chafing dish it ranges. There is no diploma for any bride who does not possess this real white magic. To contemplate the dishes the brides-elect go under the direction of Daphne, Miss Lee Thorold's famous Southern mammy. There are full course dinners served on state occasions with snappy cocktails and delectable punches.

The brides-elect do it all.

Miss Lee Thorold doesn't encourage the grape, but thoroughly wise in her generation she says: "No husband who has ever tasted one of my bride's cocktails will ever want to go to a club for one."

Of her great idea now let Miss Lee Thorold speak.

First she opens that book of gratitude and shows it. In it are letters from every part of America, for from all parts come quietly her students. There will be seventy-five new faces at the old mansion in the Fall.

But hush! She reads:

"Believe me, I am grateful to you. Mabel is a living example of the force of your training. If I felt lonely at her absence, let me say that what you have made her fully atones for it."

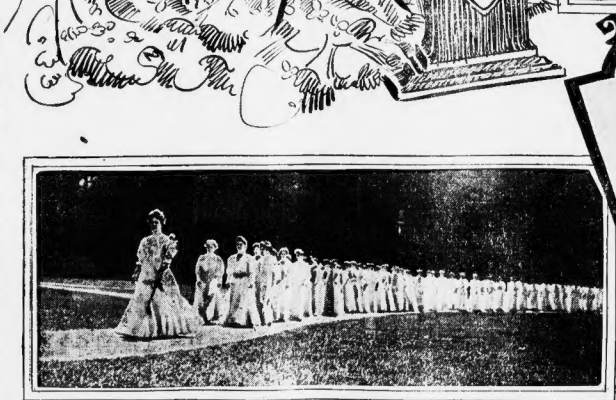
And this from a Montana rancher:

"I thought my wife was O. K. before marriage, but now I know she is absolute perfection."

And now let Miss Thorold tell about it.

Miss Lee Thorold, the Director.

The Nest Where the Brides-elect Are Immured from the World.



The Morning March to the Mail for the Sweetheart's Daily Letter.

The Chapel at Logan.

BY MISS KATHERINE LEE THOROLD.

(Founder of the Schools for Brides-Elect.)

TRUE trouble the average bride experiences the first year or so of marriage is all due to the fact that she has had no pre-marital training. Most brides-elect spend their time between the engagement ring and the wedding ring in the clouds instead of at the hearth. There is no thought of the new life. She thinks "Will he always love me?" instead of "How can I make him always love me?"

Now let it be understood at the outset that I am not in favor of a woman converting herself into a drudge. But the personal side of marriage is a business partnership in which the woman's obligation is just as binding as the man's. It is his place to provide the home, hers to care for it. Woman has been petted into a false ideal.

Marriage is the only occupation in the world in which usually the fitness for it comes after the fact. That is all wrong. Technical training is as necessary for the bride-elect as it is for a physician to have had hospital experience before beginning general practice. If marriage is an art, one should learn how to handle the tools before one begins to practice.

I began my school with one pupil, the daughter of a friend in London. The success I made of her was so great that I became bold and hired a small place at Euston in the suburbs of London. My first year I had only three pupils. In five years I was forced to move into the large building the school now occupies there. Then I was a matrimonial agency and I was delighted. I fit out the selected.

I met an American woman and established the place here. At first people thought it was a matrimonial agency and I was deluged with letters from men. I replied that the task of picking wives was not in my line. Selection in marriage belongs to the designed solely to make the husband happy. be termed purely didactic. For instance, I psychological. Cooking and marketing are two important details of our work. We have a special course for each meat. Each girl is required to prepare menus each day. We use the chafing dish a great deal, as men are fond of rarebits, shirred eggs, lobster Newburg and similar dishes.

Marketing is a matter to which too much attention cannot be given. I teach my brides by actual purchases how to buy meat and vegetables, how much is required for a given number of persons, what to pay. Vegetables and their condition, fowls and how to pick them out are special courses. I try to teach economy in buying food. Each bride keeps a weekly account of all her living expenses—laundry, marketing and all the rest of them. They are footed up and gone over weekly. Then either myself or one of my instructresses points out the extravagance and similar defects. Big household bills will undermine the best of masculine tempers.

The sewing class takes up darning and mending first and then the pupils have a thorough grounding in the import and details. We teach them how to make their husbands' shirts. What man is there who will not appreciate a well-fitted neglige shirt? Most of the brides-elect have made the greater part of their trousseaux by the time they graduate, and then are happy because they have saved a tidy sum. Economy is our keynote in all of this.

The servant-girl problem is one that we

THE KING'S STRANGE SLEEPING SICKNESS

All England Worried by the Mysterious Malady of King Edward, Who Falls Asleep At Most Awkward Moments and Has to Be Officially Pinched.

His Majesty King Edward.

His Majesty Sleeps While the German Emperor Discourses on Matters of Vast Moment.

A RECENT cable despatch to The ... New York American stated that ... King Edward was suffering from a ... mysterious malady known as "the sleeping sickness."

It is not, of course, the sleeping sickness of Africa, which is due to a specific parasite, but it is an ailment of nervous or mental origin, which causes the King to fall asleep at the most inopportune moments, entirely against his will.

The illness is a very rare one. Its nature is only partially understood, and there is no treatment for it that promises any definite probability of cure. It ends frequently in insanity and death.

It is an entirely different affection from the excessive sleepiness which is common in persons of slothful disposition or suffers from sluggish liver. No one could be less slothful by nature than the King of England, the newspapers have contained a record of his tremendous activity all his life. Although he is very stout and has a great fondness for the pleasures of the table, he has never willingly allowed these things to interfere with his prompt attention to all duties and engagements.

The sleeping sickness attacks him, not when he desires a nap, but just at the very moment when he wishes to be particularly wide awake. He is not able to shake off the lethargy, however hard he tries, and he has given orders that his attendants shall keep him awake forcibly by pinching him, and, if necessary, by sticking pins into him. An old and trusted valet has been instructed to stand close by the King's side at all social ceremonies of importance and to use all necessary means to keep him awake.

It is feared that the malady may progress, as it has done in some other cases, until it will be impossible to ... awake the King even by violence from a ... his involuntary sleep. His surgeon and Empire, when, to everybody's consterna- physicians, Sir Frederick Treves, Sir Felix tion, His Majesty was heard to be snoring. Semon and Sir William Broadbent, have been in frequent consultation, and it is said that they have grave doubts of a ... would venture to ... ken His Majesty, and the Prime Minister was forced to continue his eloquent periods to a sleeping monarch.

Perhaps the first time he manifested symptoms of this ailment was on the occasion of his meeting with the German Emperor in the Kiel Canal in June, 1904. He had lunch with the Emperor on the latter's yacht, and afterward when the German Emperor was expressing views of vital concern to the whole human race the English King was seen to be softly sleeping. It is said that the much talked-of disagreement between the Kaiser and the King is not unconnected with this episode.

Since then the ailment has grown steadily worse. It attacked him when he was dining on March 8 of this year with the new President of the French Republic and Mme. Fallieres. King Edward, of course, sat by her side. He has always been known as a gallant and amiable man, and began to act the part very nicely. The first lady of France thought she had waited rather long for an answer to her last remark, when she discovered that the King was wrapped in slumber.

The attacks sometimes come upon the King when he is taking exercise. He goes to sleep as he walks. This explains why he stepped in a rabbit hole and broke a tendon of his ankle in Windsor Park last Autumn, and why he slipped over a partridge while inspecting the warship Cumberland.

Not even the conversation of women whose beauty and wit he admires above all others now has power to keep the King from sleeping. He has often said that the most entertaining woman in England, but that did not prevent him from sleeping soundly while she was addressing her cheerful chatter to him. Mrs. George Cornwallis West, Consuelo Duchess of Manchester and the Duchess of Devonshire have all had the cruel experience of seeing the sovereign slumbering while they were doing their best to amuse him.

The rare and obscure disease from which the King is suffering has been made the subject of special study by Dr. Charles L. Dana, who is professor of nervous and mental diseases in the Post-Graduate Medical School, New York. He says that there is a form of morbid somnolence quite different from that arising from indolence, obesity, bad air or organic disease. He has collected a record of some fifty cases, including those that have occurred in his own practice. Some sufferers go to sleep for prolonged periods, lasting perhaps for weeks, others have regular daily attacks of irresistible somnolence, while still others only suffer at irregular intervals. The pupils are generally dilated instead of contracted, as in normal sleep.

Morbid somnolence is much more serious than insomnia. The condition is generally a chronic one, lasting for years. It may end in insanity, suicide or in death from malnutrition or starvation. Some of the patients suffer from excess of blood in the brain and others from lack of it.

Dr. Dana says that the predisposing causes in these forms of somnolence are a neuropathic constitution, which is in some cases acquired and in some cases inherited. The disease itself may be directly inherited. It is to be recalled that there have been many cases of mental and nervous disease in King Edward's family; his great grandfather, George III., died insane.

The immediate causes that bring on the disease are difficult to determine, but Dr. Dana says that they may be violent emotions, fright, injury, great exhaustion, overwork or excesses.

Under the head of treatment Dr. Dana mentions noises to arouse the patient, cupping, blisters, rubefacients, sternutatories of castor, emetics and purges. It is rather shocking to think of all these violent remedies being administered to the poor King of England, especially the sternutatories of castor to make him sneeze violently.

The physician will also remedy cerebral anaemia or hyperaemia, reduce obesity, correct the diabetic troubles and relieve the epileptic or hysterical taint.

If there is anaemia he would use iron, arsenic, nitrate of amyl, glonoin, digitalis, hydrotherapy, electricity and general hygienic measures and tonics. Change of occupation or travel and a course of mineral waters at some resort have proved successful.

As symptomatic remedies he recommends coffee, coffein, coca, belladonna, nitrate of amyl and sternutatories. Lavocke's sternutatory, composed of powdered cinchona and white hellebore, is an excellent one. The ancient authorities, like Galen and Aretaeus, recommend castor.

In hysterical cases tartar emetic has been very successfully used.

Systematic and persistent attempts should be made to break up the special somnolent attacks. Some cases need to be fed with the stomach tube.

Dr. Dana describes the case of a patient of his, a man, twenty-eight years old, unmarried:

"There is a history of phthisis in the family, but no serious trouble of any kind except that a younger brother had ... when about ten years of age, several general convulsive attacks, probably epileptic, which later disappeared entirely.

"He had always been a late sleeper, but when awake was bright, active, intelligent and of excellent business capacity. There was not the slightest trace of hysteria about him. About eight years ago his family began to have serious trouble in getting him up in time for his work in the store where he was a salesman. He would be easily roused mornings but would go to sleep again and would not get out of bed, despite all arguments and urging, until ten, eleven, or twelve o'clock in the morning.

"The trouble seemed to grow upon him, until finally he would stay in bed all day, getting up at about five or six o'clock in the evening.

"The several attacks of somnolence came on periodically. He would get up at a tolerably good hour for two or three weeks. He would then, after going to bed at the usual hour, about eleven or twelve o'clock, stay in bed until noon or evening of the next day. He would repeat this for several days, and would then get up at the ordinary hour.

"The frequency and severity of the attacks have of late been increasing. When he awakes and up he seems as bright as ever and apparently feels well. He states that he goes to bed feeling as usual and expecting to get up to his work. The next morning, however, he is unable to do so. I saw him several mornings when in this lethargic state. He could be easily aroused to a certain extent, and could be made to sit up in bed, but his mind seemed to be in an abnormal state. If left entirely to himself he would finally get into a downstairs, he would finally get into a normal state of mind. When examined by me some months ago he seemed in perfect physical health. He drinks and smokes very moderately."

At a meeting of the New York Neurological Society, Dr. William J. Morton reported a case of morbid somnolence in which the persistent drowsiness was apparently a symptom of cerebral anaemia or some nutrition defect of the nervous system.

Threats of a Wireless War of Nations.

THERE now threatens a wireless war among the nations. With the invention of wireless telegraphy come sanguine predictions that this new and wonderful discovery would serve to link more firmly together the peaceful interests that should unite all peoples.

But it now promises to promote discord instead of the hoped-for harmony.

There are a number of wireless systems in existence, and, of course, the promoters of each claim for it merits superior to those of all others.

Some have won favor in one country and some in others.

There is apparently little prospect of ... a harmonious adjustment of differences which would finally get into a ... conference by an uncontrollable desire ... to sleep during the daytime, no matter ... how inappropriate the time or place; this ... desire he would fight against with all his ... power of control, but would finally yield to ... sleep. Even in the dentist's chair, while ... a sensitive tooth was being "scraped," he ... had fallen asleep. Often in the rounds ... of daily practice he would feel this left ... arm creeping over him at critical moments ... as, for instance, when his services were ... most needed at confinements, and would ... be forced to yield to it and sleep. It was ... impossible, for the same reason, for him ... to read for but a short time, and he had ... been obliged to abandon study and mental ... work entirely.

The case was that of a physician in New York City who had suffered from this condition for fifteen years. He was habitually overcome by an uncontrollable desire ... to sleep during the daytime, no matter ... how inappropriate the time or place; this ... desire he would fight against with all his ... power of control, but would finally yield to ... sleep. Even in the dentist's chair, while ... a sensitive tooth was being "scraped," he ... had fallen asleep. Often in the rounds ... of daily practice he would feel this left ... arm creeping over him at critical moments ... as, for instance, when his services were ... most needed at confinements, and would ... be forced to yield to it and sleep. It was ... impossible, for the same reason, for him ... to read for but a short time, and he had ... been obliged to abandon study and mental ... work entirely.

Conferences that would result in the use of a combined system that would be common to all.

Instead they are waging war with one another and certain of the systems have made it obligatory upon the governments with which they have secured contracts that all others be rigidly excluded.

This is notably the case in England.

Ships and stations using the system adopted by England refuse to receive or answer communications from ships using any other system.

Naturally this has produced much irritation, and the subject promises to become one of the liveliest and most acrimonious to be discussed at the coming International Wireless Congress at Berlin.

JAPAN'S TRAGEDY OF LOVE, JEALOUSY, LEPROSY AND WHOLESALE POISONING.

Osaburo Kills the Mother of Soye.

THE police of Tokio, the capital of Japan, are engaged in investigating a series of extraordinarily grewsome murders, all the work of one man—the student Osaburo Takebayashi.

It is a case that reminds the world vividly that the old Japan—the Japan of feudalism, mystery, romance, black art, wizardry, torture and superstition—still lives side by side with the new Japan, the Japan of compulsory education, science, democracy, industrial progress and quick-firing guns.

Osaburo was a student in the Imperial University. He belongs to an ancient family of samurai, in the interior, and came to the capital from a remote mountain castle with all the ancient ideas and superstitions of feudal Japan strongly bred in him.

The young student wandered through the streets of a poor quarter of Tokio one day and saw a girl stoned by a mob of street ruffians. He did not understand what the trouble was, but he rescued her and took her to her home, a wretched place. She thanked him, went in and shut the door in his face.

The girl was beautiful. Osaburo saw that. Japanese men do not often fall in love as Europeans understand it, but when they do their passion sometimes becomes tremendous. Osaburo fell furiously in love. The mystery of the girl's surroundings, her silent home, the mob's attack upon her, all helped to excite his ardent imagination.

He went to the house the next day, but was not allowed to pass the door. He hung about the house in the evening and then late at night he saw the girl creeping furtively out. He spoke to her and she talked to him in a friendly but frightened fashion. She seemed as charming as she was beautiful. Her name was Soye Noguchi. She told him that it was impossible for him to come into her home. She would not tell him why.

Osaburo formed the habit of waiting for her in the evenings and they talked and walked together under the trees. Thus they came to be lovers, but she would never let him enter her home.

Then one day he found out from the neighbors why she maintained such secrecy about her family. They were lepers. Father, mother, brothers, sisters, aunts and uncles—every single member of the Noguchi family except herself was hopelessly afflicted with the dreadful disease. She apparently was untouched, but there could not be the slightest doubt that she would eventually acquire it through living with the afflicted family.

Leprosy is regarded in Japan as a disease inflicted by the gods. Those who suffer from it are called unclean. Their neighbors will not touch them or have anything to do with them. That was why the street urchins stoned Soye Noguchi. She was considered tainted and they resented her appearing in the streets by daylight. The lepers are excluded from the ordinary life of the city. No shopkeepers will allow the lepers to go into their shops, but before closing at night they place food in a gutter where the poor creatures may go and get it. In this way, doctors say, the Japanese protect themselves from infection as thoroughly as it could be done by isolating the lepers in an institution. The lepers rarely venture out of their houses by daylight. If they do, they are threatened. The discovery of the curse that rested upon his beloved did not shake Osaburo's affection in the least, but only made him more passionately devoted to her. He urged her to go away with him to some distant country where the dreadful affliction of her family would be unknown. She hesitated to do this because of her devotion to her parents, which is the strongest sentiment in the Japanese nature.

Then one day there appeared on her neck the white spot that is the forerunner of the disease that will invade the whole body until it has removed from it all semblance of human form.

Modern science regards leprosy as incurable, but ancient Japanese magic or black art claims to possess the secret of curing it. It is a secret known to but few men, and is sold only for a fabulous price.

There was no hope of saving his love so wild or slight that Osaburo would not have clutched at it. He repaired to an ancient apothecary and wizard, who occupied a mysterious den full of human skulls and skeletons in a blind alley in the oldest part of Tokio. This man compounded for him a potion that appears to have included snake venom, bat's liver, human blood and the tears of a newly made widow. It was to be taken by the sufferer regularly at midnight upon the grave of her grandfather. The wizard prescribed an elaborate ceremonial that was to be performed with the taking of the draught. The sufferer was to offer up prayers to the lords of the black art, and to the spirits of her ancestors. For all this the wizard required the sum of 200 yen (about $200)—an enormous amount for a poor Japanese.

The poor girl took the magic potion with all the forms prescribed, but so far from having any healing effect the disease showed evident signs of progress after a few months. Osaburo went back to the wizard, who said that she had not performed the ceremonies properly. The lover then obtained a new supply at the same cost as before, and they proceeded to another trial of it with minds in an agony of doubt, wavering between hope and fear.

Once more it was of no avail. Then Osaburo went to the wizard and upbraided him as a thief, a liar and a traitor. The old wretch threatened him with the most horrid enchantments and tortures, both in this world and hereafter.

"I will end your power for evil now," said Osaburo.

Then he drew his sword and cut off the wizard's head. He threw the remains into the courtyard in the centre of the house, and went down and buried them. On account of the wizard's secret and mysterious manner of life his death was only discovered by accident some months afterward.

Still Osaburo believed firmly that the wizards possessed the secret of curing leprosy. It was only a question of finding the right wizard and paying him enough money. He was now penniless, and at this very moment he discovered a wizard who he was assured possessed the great secret.

Osaburo asked for money from home in vain. He pawned all his books, his porcelain and his other little treasures, but still he had not enough money to begin to satisfy the demands of the wizard. As a last resort, his thoughts turned upon a childless old uncle and his wife, living in Tokio, from whom he was sure to receive a small inheritance. Upon the pretext of preparing a specially dainty dish for them he inserted into their food a deadly poison well-known to the Japanese, the effects of which cannot be distinguished from an attack of apoplexy. The old people died, as he had planned, and he obtained possession of their money as soon as possible and repaired with it to the wizard.

The new wizard told him that the only cure for leprosy was human flesh. It must be that of a young and healthy boy belonging to the ancient caste of bonesetters, who are hereditary enemies of the wizards. He directed Osaburo how to obtain this thing and how to prepare it.

Although Osaburo had once been a man of honorable character, he resorted to this dreadful crime in the mad hope of curing the girl. He killed a poor boy at night and carried his body into the garden of a deserted house, where he prepared portions of it in the manner prescribed, and buried the rest beneath the earth in order to keep it fresh. He gave the hideous preparation to Soye Noguchi under the pretext that it was ordinary food, and she partook of it for many weeks, but without any beneficial result.

Now Osaburo conceived the idea that there was no hope of curing Soye as long as she remained with those who were afflicted with the disease. He determined that he would remove all of them and thus free her from them forever. He broke into the house of the lepers for the first time. A frightful spectacle must have awaited him. There were six persons in all stages of the disease, one a mere shapeless white mass without hands, feet, nose or eyes; another merely swollen, but otherwise human, and another but recently marked with the deadly white spots. Osaburo was so frenzied with passion that he was not daunted by these sights. The first object of his fury was the brother of Soye, who was less affected by the disease than any other member of his family except his sister. Osaburo was particularly incensed against this youth because the sister was fond of him and the lover believed that it was the brother who had originally dissuaded the girl from leaving her family.

Osaburo killed the young man with a stroke of his sword and then despatched the mother. At this point the girl rushed into the room. When she saw what he had done the sentiment of family devotion proved stronger than her affection for him and she cursed him horribly.

This brought him to his senses, and in an instant he realized the awful predicament he was in—a murderer, an outcast, the lover of a leper.

He turned and fled, and with the tremendous endurance for which the Japanese mountaineers are noted, he did not stop until he reached a remote mountain region two hundred miles from the capital. It is not supposed that he wished to escape death, but that he intended to kill himself before a temple where his ancestors had worshipped for centuries.

The police had already discovered the murder of the poor boy, and from that point they rapidly traced the long series of crimes in which Osaburo had been concerned. They were on his track at the moment he killed the lepers, and would have arrested him that evening had he not escaped. They pursued him into the mountains, surprised him and captured him before he could resist or do himself any harm.

He has been brought back to Tokio, and lodged in the jail here to await trial.

Great sympathy is expressed for him by some people because his crimes were committed from a sincere passion and a mistaken devotion to his beloved, but this is not the view of the soberminded classes, and justice will certainly be done to him.

How the Surgeon's Knife Cuts the WICKED SP
Cut Out the "BAD SPOT

New Miracles of Surgery to Make GOOD Children out of BAD Children.

THEN surgeons of Philadelphia are opening the skulls of criminal or mentally defective children and removing from their brains the cause of their criminal tendencies or mental defects. The operation has already been performed with brilliant success both in these Philadelphia cases and in many others.

The Philadelphia surgeons declare that sin and stupidity are equally due to defective brains.

The operations have been performed under the direction of an Advisory Board, composed of the most distinguished surgeons and physicians in the city. The Health Department furnishes the surgeons who perform the actual operations. The Juvenile Court also recommends young offenders to the attention of the Advisory Board. The patients are generally taken from those who come under the care of the Society to Protect Children from Cruelty. These are usually children who need to be taken care of because they have developed criminal or vicious tendencies or who are mentally defective because they have deprived or unfit parents.

The fate of such children is usually a pitiful one. If they have actually committed criminal acts, they are sent to a reformatory, where their innate criminal tendencies are not checked but grow until they are launched upon the world predestined and hopeless criminals. In cases where the children have not been convicted of criminal acts but have only shown vicious tendencies, they do not fare much better, for they are likely to be sent to a home where there are no scientific resources for dealing with such maladies or to be returned to their own homes, where they will be still worse off. Those who are not criminal but only mentally defective, will grow up with their defects ineradicably stamped upon their brains. They will be unable to support themselves decently and become a burden to society. If they belonged to the wealthy classes the resources of science would perhaps be called in to cure them, but when they are poor they are ordinarily left to grow up in their misery.

Many surgeons say that the only hope of permanently helping these unfortunates is to remove their criminal tendencies with the knife. Then they have a fair chance of growing up and enjoying a normally successful life. This is the course that Philadelphia has adopted.

About two hundred children a week are being examined at the offices of the society, at No. 415 South Fifteenth street, Philadelphia. About twenty operations have been performed in one week. The doctors who are performing the operations or are interested in them include Dr. Weir Mitchell, Dr. A. C. Abbott, Dr. W. M. L. Coplin, Dr. H. Crosbey Allen, Dr. George W. Dougherty, Dr. W. W. Hawkes, Dr. Louis Starr, Dr. Frederick Peterson, Dr. F. X. Dercum, Dr. Charles E. Mills, Dr. L. C. Wesmer, Dr. A. C. Butcher and Dr. Alfred Gordon.

A form of questions has been drawn up by these medical men and is filled in with the particulars respecting every individual child by the doctor who examines it. The questions relate to physical measurements, expression of the eyes, memory, voice, speech, general appearance and the history and condition of every part of the body.

From these questions and from physical examination it is ascertained whether the child has any serious mental, moral or physical defect. The methods taken to effect a cure are numerous. They include operations on the defective area of the brain, removal of adenoids and other abnormal growths from the nose and throat; operations upon the eyes and correction of defective vision by glasses; correction of misshapen limbs, backbones, etc., and general medical treatment.

The following are two typical and extremely interesting cases taken from the records of the Advisory Board now operating in Philadelphia. One case is that of a wicked boy who was actually cured by the operation of trephining upon his skull, and the other is that of an equally wicked boy who failed to be cured when the adenoids were removed from his throat. This seems to show that the only hope of curing wickedness lies in the radical operation upon the brain.

Until he was eight years old Spurgeon Welty, whose home is at Nasareth, Northampton County, Pa., was a normal, healthy, honest child. Then one day he fell from a haywick and alighted on his head and right arm. Spurgeon calmly washed the blood from his head and said nothing about the accident.

From that day, however, he was a different boy, and there seemed to be a dual nature in the lad. He fought every boy in the neighborhood, played mischievous and dangerous pranks upon all who came in contact with him and then began to develop a mania for fires. This obsession was discovered in time to prevent any serious results and the child was sent to the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital in Philadelphia. There he tried to segregate nine other children who were in the same ward as he.

Then a thorough examination of the boy's head was made by Dr. Ernest Laplace, who recently was decorated by the French Government for his services to surgical science. It found that there was apparent pressure upon the brain on the centre that has become known to be intimately connected with the desire to see fire and to create it. An operation was decided upon.

"Why are you so bad?" asked Dr. Laplace of the child as he was placed on the operating table.

"Oh, I've got a stone in my head," said Welty, laughing.

When the hair was unconscious Dr. Laplace shaved a spot on the right side of his head at the back and trephined a circular aperture, 1½ inches in diameter. With a small steel instrument of the skull plate was removed, exposing the membrane that covers the brain. Through this membrane the surgeon could see the pulsations of the brain. Some time after the operation Welty said: "I feel like a new boy. I feel as if I could be good." His physician, Dr. Laplace, pronounced the operation successful.

LOCALIZATION of function to certain portions of the brain is adhered to by an overwhelming preponderance of present day scientists. So is it, too, with localization of sensation. It follows logically that what is called crime and evil must also be a localization, for crime and evil are but a peculiar and abnormal combination of function and sensation—or better, perhaps, an abnormality of function that produces an abnormality of sensation.

But how to localize, how to put one's finger upon the diseased part of the brain that causes one to lie, another to steal, another to desire to kill, another to desire to break and destroy? That is the tremendous problem that science has faced ever since man first learned that the brain is the seat of thought and action and first gained courage to probe into its secrets.

Where shall we cut to destroy the wish to lie, where probe to kill the stealing thought? What data, what actual knowledge is there to justify the operation upon the child's brain even though what we seek by the operation is unqualified and absolute good?

There are data and there is knowledge, but it would take volumes to specify.

There is the knowledge that has come down to us from scores of great and little investigators; there are the researches of the men who have made the brain their life study; there are the results of the great work in brain research now going on at the Wister Institute in Philadelphia, a work that takes in the whole earth; there are the comparative charts of thousands of brains and the intimate histories of the men and women who owned them; there are the results from these present operations which in themselves would justify all we have done and expect to do.

Last and far from least, there are the researches of the real phrenologists, and strangely enough these pseudo-scientists, as they have been called, are getting ample vindication. At the very least they have proved most excellent guide posts.

With all this to guide we are very sanguine over the results of the campaign for the mind of the child.

Evidence of localization is overwhelming. Gall and Spurzheim were the first almost to make great progress in proving it. Their experiments were made largely by actual observations of persons. Careful study was made of the craniological peculiarities of persons actually known to have certain traits developed to an abnormal degree. For instance, town brawlers and street fighters were made a special subject of investigation. By a process of elimination the feature of brain formation which distinguished them from those who did not possess the same belligerency was separated and localized and the result confirmed by autopsies of the experiments. nets such as those of Wetty is located at the point where Dr. Lapiace operated." Dr. Lapiace concurs in this and says he has found pressure or lesion at this part in most pyromaniacs.

The record that deals with the second operation has a significant remark attached to it concerning the temporary nature of the indirect operation.

Jacob Heddiman was twelve years old when the operation for adenoids was performed upon him. He came of a fairly good South Philadelphia family. He was a chronic truant at school and a chronic runaway from home.

Under direction of Judge Barrett, of the Juvenile Court, the adenoids were removed. Thereafter for a space of a month Jacob behaved himself. Suddenly there came to him the old desire to run away. He ran.

"Ah, they can't keep me at home by cutting my throat," he boasted to a truant officer who caught him. "Something tells me to run and to get away and I do it."

This operation proved unsuccessful. The parents would not consent to have an operation performed on the boy's brain.

"Until this is done," says the record, "the child will be incorrigible."

There are now hundreds of cases pending that operations upon the brain may cure criminality or idiocy. The object of the operation may be to remove pressure from the skull, a growth, a cyst, a soft spot caused by embolism or thrombosis of a cerebral artery, encephalitis or sclerotic patches.

A remarkable case was that of Charlie Ryan. At the age of seven he developed into a fiend incarnate. He smashed every article that came within his reach, killed cats and dogs with horrible tortures, and smeared their gore upon the carpet. He tied up one rat and roasted it on the fire. He stabbed his little sister around the face with a penknife and tried to pull out the eye of a neighbor's child with a fish-hook. Finally he rushed at his baby sister with a carving knife, with the intention of killing her. Then it was decided that he would have to be sent to a reformatory. But as a preliminary he was taken to the doctor and he decided that it was a good opportunity for testing the new brain surgery. The boy was examined and it was found that there was a depression in his skull, just above the forehead and under the hair, caused by a neighbor's child dropping a hatchet on his head in early infancy. Drs. Clark, McVeigh, Frank H. Sore and J. F. Lilley operated upon the boy. They made an incision in the skull around the depression and lifted up the bone. They found that a splinter of bone had been sticking into the boy's brain. They removed this and the diseased brain area and closed up the wound. Within a few days this healed and within a month Charlie Ryan was a good, industrious, studious, obedient little boy, whose greatest desire was to protect his little sister from harm instead of sticking knives into her.

Another remarkable case was that of Sergeant Frank Rickenberg, United States army. He was struck on the head by a musket during the Philippine Indian war in 1899, and left the army. He had had a splendid record, but after this he became a burglar and incorrigible criminal. The surgeons got hold of him and removed the place dented in by the rifle butt in his skull. It was three and one-half inches long by three-quarters of an inch wide. After his recovery from the operation he became a perfectly honest and steady citizen.

Equally remarkable was the case of Miss Edith Wells. She suffered from arrested mental development and wicked tendencies. She was stupid, cruel, ill-mannered, disgusting in her habits, and was subject to epileptic fits, which, occurring with increasing frequency, threatened to end her life. The operation of trephining was performed to relieve the epilepsy and it not only cured this but made her bright, amiable, well-behaved and fastidious as to her personal appearance. The most extraordinary change of all was that from an ugly girl she became a beautiful one. Before the operation she had been dull, brutal and slovenly in appearance, whereas afterward she was bright, suitable and neat.

Dr. Starr, who is one of the foremost operators in brain surgery, thus reports two cases in which he cured moral and mental defects by operation on the brain:

"Case 1.—A little girl of eleven was brought to me on account of attacks of petit mal which had developed within two years and had become so frequent as to occur every hour. Two such attacks occurred in my office, each lasting twenty seconds, consisting of a sudden dilatation of the pupils, retardation of facial expression, turning of the eyes upward, falling backward of the head, and then power-lessness. Slight affrication of the surface anywhere—pinching, throwing water in the face, seemed enough to arrest the attack, though loud sounds had no effect.

"This child was well developed and very observant and active, but had no capacity for learning or for self-control. She had been trained with care, but could not read, and acted on every impulse. She was excitable, very quick in replies, impudent and defiant, delighting in doing everything which would annoy people.

"This defect of intelligence was associated with a very marked defect in the development of the forepart of the brain. There appeared to have been a very early union of the coronal suture, so that a decided depression existed in the skull over its situation, and a marked difference could be seen between the size of the frontal bone and the posterior part of the skull. It looked as if a cap had been applied over the entire frontal bone which had arrested its growth, while the rest of the skull had developed properly. The arch of the palate was high. In this case I advised an operation, which was performed. The object in view being to allow the growth of the frontal lobes, it was thought best to lift the bone away from the brain on both sides.

"The left side was first operated on and two weeks later the right. Both sides were done in the same manner. A long semilunar incision was made in the scalp from the forehead near the temple backward to the midparietal region. Its convexity being upward. A small trephine opening was made at the summit of this incision, and with this as a centre a groove was chiseled to the bone, first downward and forward, then downward and backward. Then an omega shaped groove in the skull was cut. The bone was then gently pried up, the short limb of the omega between its ends being broken. Thus a bony flap with scalp attached was raised about an inch away from the dura. The dura was not opened. The wound was dressed so as not to make pressure on this flap. It healed by first intention, as did also the second wound on the other side. When the child went home the elevation of the two portions of bone was very perceptible.

"Mentally she seems brighter and is beginning to learn."

"This temper became violent and uncontrollable, his epileptic seizures more and more frequent, and during the twenty-four hours previous to the operation he had between thirty and forty distinct and severe seizures. Though he was by no means an imbecile, his mental development was retarded. His skull seemed relatively small for his age.

"On June 24, I operated on him at the General Hospital. A long incision, one inch to the right of and parallel with the middle line, was made from the forehead to the occiput. With cutting bone forceps I excised a strip of bone 7 cm. wide from the line of growth of hair in front nearly to the occipital protuberance behind. Then detaching the scalp for the purpose, I excised a narrow strip of bone over the fissure of Rolando on the right side down nearly to the temporal fossa. The wounds were closed without drainage.

"During the ensuing twenty-four hours shock was severe, and the child had several violent epileptic seizures. Since this first day he has never had another.

"His irascibility has subsided, his general health and intelligence has improved; he now runs, plays, eats and talks just like other children of his age."

In view of the growing importance of these operations the public will be interested to read some technical details of the manner in which they are performed. The patient's head is shaved and washed with soft soap, then scrubbed with a nail brush, next, pressure. Crimes in there in the brain and there, too, are the formations, abnormities and irritations which cause it. Remove or rectify these and crime disappears.

"This is our belief and is in a nutshell the reason for and scope of our work. Many of the children come from fairly intelligent families who do not and could not understand the handling of the criminal tendencies in their offspring. The whip is no more a corrective agent than is the prison. To these children science must stand in loco parentis.

"We are bulwarked in our work by the Juvenile court, by the Health Department of the city and by a body of the wisest and best physicians and surgeons in the whole world. With these deeply interested, ready with suggestion and advice, studying results and through them guiding our hands, we have little fear of ignorance and prejudice being able to stop us in this killing of crime.

"Our operations so far have but confirmed us in our belief that through the brain science may hope to solve all the problems that have made the eradication of evil and degenerate tendencies among the young so difficult. Medical science has sought for long to determine in just what parts of the brain might be found those lesions, etc., which are responsible for degeneracy, criminality stupidity, imbecility. Once find these centres, said the searchers, correct them in the young while the brain is still undeveloped and one could see the dawn of a day in which prisons and insane asylums would be things of the past.

How the Operations Are Performed.

Upon the shaved scalp the fissures of Rolando and Sylvius, which are situated in the region where the skull is usually opened, are marked off with iodine. After the anaesthetic is administered the surgeon punctures the scalp with an awl or gouge with three holes, which reach the bone, so that when the scalp is removed he will be able to see the guiding line. After the anaesthetic is administered the scalp is again washed with (1) soft soap and hot water, (2) sulphuric ether, (3) absolute alcohol, (4) with a solution of corrosive sublimate.

Four long needles are passed through the scalp at right angles to one another in order to make pressure upon all the vessels leading to the place to be cut and thus prevent hemorrhage.

The operator makes an incision of horseshoe shape in the scalp which is compressed by sterilized gauze in the hands of assistants who seize the vessels one by one with forceps as the gauze is lifted. He makes the incision in the skull the surgeon uses the trephine, an instrument roughly resembling an auger.

There are several other methods of making the incision. The electric motor with rotary saw is much used. When the skull is nearly sawed through great care must be taken not to cut unnecessarily into the dura mater, the hard membrane covering the brain.

A button of bone removed from the skull may be replaced. This is not usually done now, but the opening is left to fill in naturally. Some surgeons make it a rule only to replace bone when it has not been entirely separated from the scalp.

The division of the dura is made by means of a curved lancet, or an ordinary scalpel. The surgeon then seizes the dura with a fine tenaculum, draws it from the brain surface and inserts a curved blunt scissors into the small incision. He can then divide the dura freely. He cuts it one-fourth of an inch from the bony opening and makes it of horseshoe shape. It must then be lifted very carefully away from the brain, for very frequently loose adhesions exist which cannot be roughly torn without incurring great risk of opening one of the large veins into the brain. If arteries are found pressing over the dura they are ligatured before it is divided. The brain is now exposed and the troublesome portion—the "wicked spot," as it has been called in the case of the bad boys—can now be reached. It may be necessary to remove scar tissues, cysts or tumors. If hemorrhage occurs it can be arrested by continued pressure with sponge or with aseptic gauze. In extreme cases the brain vessel may be tied with very fine catgut or even an electric cautery applied.

The brain may be explored by the hand, which easily detects unusual resistance at one point, the fluctuations of a deep cyst or the hardness of a solid tumor. If necessary a probe may be thrust into the brain or a hypodermic needle without danger. The brain may be freely cut without fatal results, but as important speech and motor areas are situated in the cortex or external portion, unnecessary cuttings should be avoided.

If there is watery inflammation of the pia a few small incisions followed by pressure will remove the fluid. If a clot is found it is wiped away by a sponge, or if closely attached to the brain it is picked out by fine forceps. A tumor that lies on the surface is removed with the blunt point of curved scissors, but if it infiltrates into the brain the affected part must be cut out with the knife.

The removal of a large tumor will leave a cavity which if left alone would fill with blood. This is prevented by placing antiseptic gauze in the cavity and removing it little by little at subsequent dressings.

The closing of the wound is preceded by a thorough irrigation with simple sterilized salt solution, one per cent, or with corrosive sublimate, one part to five thousand of water. The dura mater is stitched with catgut except where the drainage tube passes through it. The scalp is stitched up with silk. The head is washed with antiseptic solution and the wound covered with rubber tissue. This is covered with aseptic gauze and this with many layers of cotton, and the whole held in place by a large bandage covering the entire head and held under the jaw.

Dr. Lewis C. Wessels, the chief operating surgeon of the Advisory Board in Philadelphia, made the following interesting statement concerning the object of their campaign to extirpate criminality from children:

"All crime is in the brain. Its cause may be errors of reflex action, lesions, undevelopment, overdevelopment, pressure. Crime is there in the brain and there, too, are the formations, abnormities and irritations which cause it. Remove or rectify these and crime disappears.

"This is our belief and is in a nutshell the reason for and scope of our work. We aim to make from the morally or mentally defective child a bright, honest, normal one, to substitute for an incipient criminal a useful though youthful member of society; to cut off at its very source one of the tendrils of evil.

"Our great enemies in this work are those against which surgery has always had to battle—ignorance and prejudice. We have won a signal victory against each in that we have been able even to start this plan of corrective surgery.

"Our subjects are taken from the very poor. The criminal classes, the ignorant, but not from these alone. Many of the children come from fairly intelligent families who do not and could not understand the handling of the criminal tendencies in their offspring. The whip is no more a corrective agent than is the prison. To these children science must stand in loco parentis.

"We are bulwarked in our work by the Juvenile court, by the Health Department of the city and by a body of the wisest and best physicians and surgeons in the whole world. With these deeply interested, ready with suggestion and advice, studying results and through them guiding our hands, we have little fear of ignorance and prejudice being able to stop us in this killing of crime.

"Our operations so far have but confirmed us in our belief that through the brain science may hope to solve all the problems that have made the eradication of evil and degenerate tendencies among the young so difficult. Medical science has sought for long to determine in just what parts of the brain might be found those lesions, etc., which are responsible for degeneracy, criminality stupidity, imbecility. Once find these centres, said the searchers, correct them in the young while the brain is still undeveloped and one could see the dawn of a day in which prisons and insane asylums would be things of the past.

The Chief Operator's Views.

"Already by our experiments, our operations and the rigid analysis and comparison by the great minds before whom our work is placed, we have gone far along the track of location.

"Our experiments have shown us positively that various evil tendencies in the young must be attributed to abnormal conditions in the brain. That these conditions differ is manifest. That they assume outward phases more or less different demonstrates that different areas of the brain are affected. For instance, one child may be a chronic liar, another may be a moral pervert, while still another may be totally devoid of any sense of honesty. The cause may not be dissimilar in either case, but the fact that the tendency for evil manifests itself differently shows that the trouble is to be found in a different part of the brain.

"We must study and learn, and in doing so nothing but good can accrue to our subject.

"We have made normal little people of incipient criminals by the removal of the adenoids, that tumorous or fatty growth at the mouth of the post nasal channel. The adenoids exerting pressure, render breathing through the nose difficult and cause mouth breathing, the blood becomes vitiated; the brain becomes affected. The child becomes listless and dull. As the vitiation and pressure goes on the centre of the brain affected becomes more diseased. The moral sense is apt to become dull. Various forms of degeneracy begin to manifest themselves. Then the child is packed away to a reformatory or kindred place. And lifetimes of misery result because the suffering brain was not relieved.

"This in the case of astigmatism and adenoids. But how if the child have neither and is still a liar or a thief or a degenerate? It is direct to the brain that we must go if the work is to be complete.

"Our task is not begun. Serious problems confront us, but the results already accomplished convince us that our work contains possibilities tremendous to the welfare of the world—the cure of crime. Curvature of the spine, paralysis, epilepsy and other maladies which have their seat in the brain we are studying. Already we have experimented on more than 200 cases."

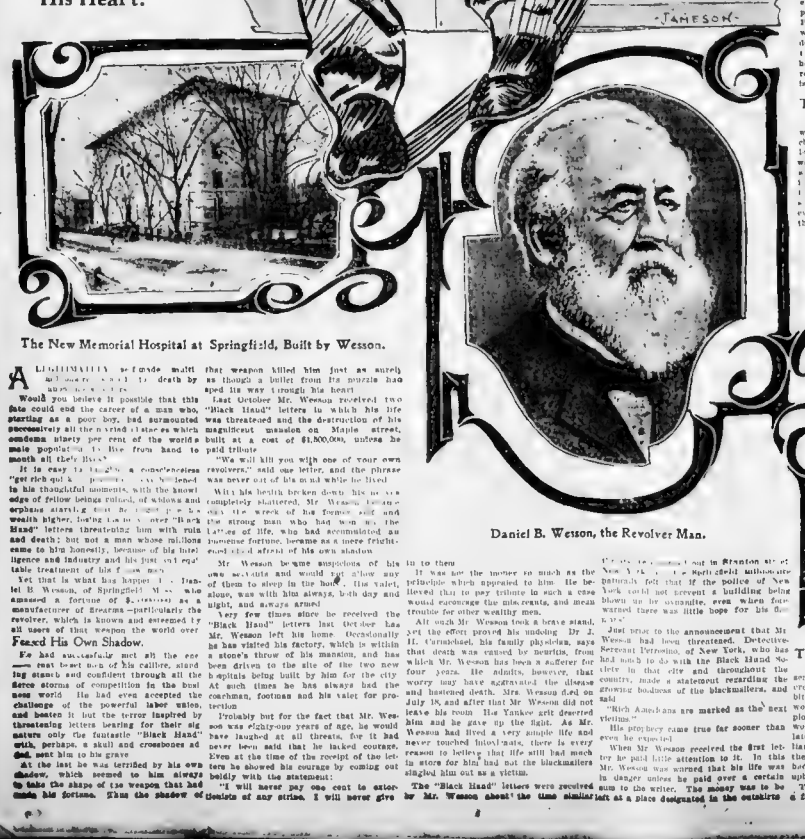
HOW MR. WESSON WAS SCARED TO DEATH BY THE WEAPON THAT MADE HIS MILLIONS.

"At the Last He Was Terrified by His Own Shadow, Which Seemed to Him Always to Take the Shape of the Weapon That Had Made His Fortune. Thus the Shadow of That Weapon Killed Him Just as Surely as Though a Bullet from Its Muzzle Had Sped Its Way Through His Heart."



The New Memorial Hospital at Springfield, Built by Wesson.

Daniel B. Wesson, the Revolver Man.

The Great Wesson Mansion, Costing $1,500,000, Threatened With Destruction by "Black Hands."

ALTHOUGH WORTH a fortune, multimillionaire could not be more terrified to death by approaching peril.

Would you believe it possible that this fate could end the career of a man who, starting as a poor boy, had surmounted successively all the myriad obstacles which condemn ninety per cent of the world's male population to live from hand to mouth all their lives?

It is easy to imagine a comprehensive "get rich quick possibility" would lead in his thoughtful moments, with the knowledge of fellow beings ruined, of widows and orphans starving, most to wish for a little wealth higher, feeling himself cursed by "Black Hand" letters threatening him with ruin and death; but not a man whose millions came to him honestly, because of his intelligence and industry and his just and equitable treatment of his fellow men.

Yet that is what has happened to Daniel B. Wesson, of Springfield, Mass., who amassed a fortune of $[illegible] as a manufacturer of firearms—particularly the revolver, which is known and revered by all users of that weapon the world over.

Feared His Own Shadow.

He had successfully met all the fierce rout-beat men of his caliber, staunch and confident through all the fierce storms of competition in the business world. He had even accepted the challenge of the powerful labor union, and beaten it but the terror inspired by threatening letters bearing for their signatures only the fantastic "Black Hand" with, perhaps, a skull and crossbones added, sent him to his grave.

At the last he was terrified by his own shadow, which seemed to him always to take the shape of the weapon that had made his fortune. Thus the shadow of that weapon killed him just as surely as though a bullet from its muzzle had sped its way through his heart.

Last October Mr. Wesson received two "Black Hand" letters in which his life was threatened and the destruction of his magnificent mansion on Maple street, built at a cost of $1,500,000, unless he paid tribute.

"We will kill you with one of your own revolvers," said one letter, and the phrase was never out of his mind while he lived.

With his health broken down, his nerves completely shattered, Mr. Wesson became the wreck of his former self and the strong man who had won the battles of life, who had accumulated an immense fortune, became as a mere frightened child afraid of his own shadow.

Mr. Wesson became suspicious of his own servants and would not allow any of them to sleep in the house. His valet, alone, was with him always, both day and night, and always armed.

Very few times since he received the "Black Hand" letters last October has Mr. Wesson left his home. Occasionally he has visited his factory, which is within a stone's throw of his mansion, and has been driven to the site of the two new hospitals being built by him for the city. At such times he has always had the coachman, footman and his valet for protection.

Probably but for the fact that Mr. Wesson was eighty-one years of age, he would have laughed at all threats, for it had never been said that he lacked courage. Even at the time of the receipt of the letters he showed his courage by coming out boldly with the statement:

"I will never pay one cent to extortionists of any stripe. I will never give in to them."

It was not the money so much as the principle which appealed to him. He believed that to pay tribute in such a case would encourage the blackmailers, and mean trouble for other wealthy men.

Although Mr. Wesson took a brave stand, yet the effort proved his undoing. Dr. J. H. Carmichael, his family physician, says that death was caused by neuritis, from which Mr. Wesson has been a sufferer for four years. He admits, however, that worry may have aggravated the disease and hastened death. Mrs. Wesson died on July 18, and after that Mr. Wesson did not leave his room. His Yankee grit deserted him and he gave up the fight. As Mr. Wesson had lived a very simple life and never touched intoxicants, there is every reason to believe that life still had much in store for him had not the blackmailers singled him out as a victim.

The "Black Hand" letters were received by Mr. Wesson about the time similar [illegible] out in Stanton street, New York, [illegible] Springfield ambassadors naturally felt that if the police of New York could not prevent a building being blown up by dynamite, even when forewarned there was little hope for his home.

Just prior to the announcement that Mr. Wesson had been threatened, Detective-Sergeant Petrosino, of New York, who has had much to do with the Black Hand Society in that city and throughout the country, made a statement regarding the growing boldness of the blackmailers, and said:

"Rich Americans are marked as the next victims."

His prophecy came true far sooner than even he expected.

When Mr. Wesson received the first letter he paid little attention to it. In this Mr. Wesson was warned that his life was in danger unless he paid over a certain sum to the writer. The money was to be left at a place designated in the outskirts of the city. The letter had a black hand and a skull and crossbones for signature.

Mr. Wesson did not even report the receipt of the letter to the police, but when a second one arrived soon afterward he was thoroughly frightened and put the matter in the hands of Chief of Police George M. Stebbins, of Springfield. A larger sum was demanded in this letter, and it was stated that unless Mr. Wesson complied with the request his house would be blown up with dynamite by a certain date. Mr. Wesson also secured a New York detective to work on the case.

On the night following the expiration of the time within which Mr. Wesson was warned to pay tribute, the Wesson mansion was strongly guarded by a police sergeant and six patrolmen. Chief of Police Stebbins also made an effort to locate the blackmailers by having an officer disguised to resemble Mr. Wesson driven in the latter's carriage to the spot designated and leave a package resembling money. The officer wore a gray beard and dark clothes, but evidently the plotters were not fooled, for they failed to put in an appearance.

Strenuous efforts were made to keep even an inkling of the threats from the public and both Mr. Wesson and Chief of Police Stebbins were greatly chagrined when it leaked out. Chief Stebbins endeavored to belittle the affair and refused to give the wording of the letters or just how they were signed. Chief Stebbins still refuses to exhibit the letters, although it is believed they are still in his possession.

Too Strong for the Unions.

Several weeks after the Wesson letters were received two boys were arrested, charged with sending threatening and scurrilous letters through the mail. At first it was the hope these boys might have had something to do with threatening the millionaire, but they were proven innocent on [illegible]. In fact, the Wesson letters appeared to them the means of "getting even," as they called it, with a man whom they disliked.

That Mr. Wesson had enemies who would [illegible] very little ill-feeling resulted. The labor unions were strong in the city at that time and they decided to unionize the Smith & Wesson shop. A charter was sent for and obtained, but Mr. Wesson was too strong for the union.

The men upon coming to work one morning found a notice posted to the effect that the shop had closed down for reorganization and that every man was discharged. It was further stated that the shop would again start when enough employes had signed a paper agreeing not to belong to any labor union. The men saw they were beaten and acknowledged defeat by signing the paper.

Mr. Wesson was not wholly opposed to labor unions, however, as is shown by the fact that union men worked on his mansion and are also building two hospitals according to his plans. The multimillionaire did good rather than evil and made friends rather than enemies, therefore it is evident that the letters were sent to him simply because of his great wealth and for the reason that his advanced years would make him an easy victim.

The blackmailers, although desperate, were not desperate enough to carry out their threats with police and detectives on their trail.

Enjoyed the Smoke From His Factory.

Mr. Wesson was one of the wealthiest men in New England. His fortune was estimated at between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000, and this was all accumulated by him, for he started as a poor boy.

Mr. Wesson was different from most millionaires. He never went into society, and in spite of his beautiful mansion, never entertained. Comparatively few of Springfield's "400" have ever been inside the house. Some time after it was completed, Mr. Wesson was showing a prominent business man over the house and when he came to the drawing rooms it was necessary for him to call a maid and secure the keys. It then developed that Mr. Wesson was in the habit of keeping the front part of the house locked.

Although a fortune was spent on the house yet the location is hardly suitable for one, as either the house overlooks the Smith & Wesson factory where Mr. Wesson made his money. The smoke from the factory chimneys was always pleasing to the millionaire's nostrils. The house is of red Indiana granite with red marble trimmings. The carvings in the halls alone represent a fortune.

Mr. Wesson was not interested in politics, however, he became interested in the city's Catholic Mayor the city has ever had, and after his first term Mr. Wesson upheld him.

Then, again, Mr. Wesson had some trouble a few years ago with the labor unions, but left as a place designated in the outskirts and because his old age was free from all distressing infirmities, it was characteristic of him to die—even die of fright—rather than yield an inch to any unjust demand.

Doubtless, too, he realized that to cease obey the "Black Hand" mandate to secure safety by the payment of money would make him the prey of blackmailers for the rest of his life. Most very rich men hate and dread this sort of persecution more than anything else, and in resisting it, even at the cost of his life, Mr. Wesson was faithful to the principles of his kind.

Wesson Memorial Hospital, to be dedicated in the [illegible]. It has cost $400,000 to build [illegible] and up to date as any hospital in the country. It will accommodate seventy patients and will be used only by the [illegible] school.

Ground has also been broken for a maternity hospital which will cost in the vicinity of $[illegible]. This is to be a memorial to the late Mrs. Wesson. The two hospitals are on High street, where Mr. Wesson formerly lived. The grounds have been graded into a park and are very beautiful. The house he formerly occupied is being used at present as a hospital, but when the new building is completed this house will be turned into a home for the nurses.

Mr. Wesson has endowed the hospitals, his greatest wish was to live and see them both opened, but worry aggravated his heart trouble and his hopes were not realized. All of his property with the exception of the hospitals and a few minor bequests goes to his family.

Mr. Wesson married Cynthia Maria Haines, of Nottsboro, when he was still a poor young man, and until her health failed some years ago she was his constant companion. At Westboro, near where his wife lived, he built a beautiful Summer home, and until this year he spent his Summers there.

His Dread of the Black Hand.

Mr. Wesson was fond of building and was always on hand to watch the work. A good story is told of him regarding the erection of his Summer house. He was overseeing the work one day wearing an old pongee coat which had seen better days. A native of the town accosted him with:

"Say, do you know anything about this old Wesson? What sort of a man is he?"

"Well," replied Mr. Wesson, "he's sort of a good-natured old cuss and wouldn't mind in the least the town people coming around and having a look at the house."

"What in thunder does he want to put up such a big house for, anyway?" persisted the man.

"Why, I don't know," said Mr. Wesson, thoughtfully; "he's just got the notion in his head he'd like one, I suppose."

Mr. Wesson was president of an anti-consumption organization, which was practically an anti-spitting society. He was a great believer in cleanliness and insisted that the factory be kept as clean as a workshop house. He insisted that his employes should look neat and he would not allow the spitting of tobacco juice within the buildings.

He gave generously to charities, but never wanted to figure in the press. He hated notoriety and courted seclusion. He was seldom out of the house after dark and was never seen at the theatres or social gatherings. In fact, few people in the city knew him by sight.

Although Mr. Wesson wished to live to see his charities permanently established,

C.—Dainty Summer dress of white lawn with insertions of lace galon.

D. — Summer gown of sheer mull decorated with stitched bands of linen.

THIS season more than ever it is the fashion to have house gowns for the country as simple as possible in effect and style, although the materials may be fine and expensive and the workmanship costly in producing artistic lines and that touch of smartness which constitutes style in dress and which only an expert can produce

House gowns are usually made with short trains or without any for morning wear, and the fancy for gowns that are long in front extends to them. They are made of all sorts of thin, soft materials, suitable for use in the morning, especially of linens, lawns, organdies, batistes, mulls and such washable fabrics.

Some of these are embroidered, but the lines of simplicity are introduced so that the gowns are entirely without that appearance of elaboration which inartistically trimmed dresses have

An example of a gown trimmed so as to show contrasting lines is illustrated in figure A. It is of flowered organdie, with a prevailing tint of grayish mauve color The lace is of yellowish cream in hue and of a pattern to imitate Flemish lace.

Bands of lace extend from the waist up the front of the bodice, cross upon the yoke in two points on each side the front and back of the shoulders, and extend down the back to the belt line, giving a sort of Wall-of-Troy effect to the yoke

This trimming is repeated in the tops of the sleeves in wide lace inserting, and the puff of the sleeve is pleated to this and gathered to a band of lace at the elbow.

A group of four tucks extends half way down the centre of the front and more occurs between the inserted bands of lace on the skirt, which is tucked at the waist line to give a princess effect.

Two inserted lace bands extend down each side the front of the skirt and turn backward in the lower portion, forming a Wall-of-Troy border above the hem. This border comes up very high upon the skirt.

Box folds are sometimes stitched in place in the manner in which lace inserting is put in this gown, and in the case of striped effects this fold trimming is quite decorative. Braid is used upon gowns of wool for a cold mountain resort where such gowns are necessary, so that this pattern of gown may be made up in many materials and in various styles of trimming.

A dainty morning dress for hot days is shown in figure B. It is of cream colored figured batiste, but any suitable thin material would make up well in this style.

A yoke of open-meshed lace has a round neck edged with footing. The yoke is rounded and has the lace upon its lower edge appliqued upon footing. Three rows of shirred footing (shirred a fourth of an inch inside the edges to form frills), alternate with two bands of the figured batiste, the lower row of footing resting upon the bottom of the blouse, which is gathered to a waistband and worn under a wide girdle or belt.

An Effect in Lace and Lawn.

The top of the sleeve has two rows of footing alternating with a band of batiste. To the lower band of footing is gathered a shaped flounce edged with lace, over a net flounce, a bit longer than the one above it and edged in the same manner.

Footing makes a particularly attractive and effective trimming on Summer gowns and is often prettier than lace would be.

The skirt in this dress is laid in wide pleats stitched to below the hips in the appearance of narrow tucks. A wide hem finishes the bottom. This skirt is hung over a drop skirt of sheer cream batiste, edged with a bias fold trimmed along the upper and lower edges with yellow valenciennes lace. It has a short train in the back under the train of the gown.

It is not necessary to make a drop skirt with all dresses built in this style, but the material is very sheer, with raised embroidered figures that look particularly well over a drop skirt of a deeper cream color. Drop skirts come in very conveniently to give certain color effects to gowns worn over them In the case of color a waist of the same, or a lining of it, is worn beneath the bodice.

Figure C illustrates still another "sweet" little thin gown. It is of lawn, in a very sheer quality, made with alternate panels of lawn and lace. The lawn panels are round and collarless and is finished with a small yoke of transparent lace. This is shaped like gores, with very narrow tops, which are tucked to below the hips. Upon the edges of these gored panels are applied the irregular edges of very transparent lace galon. The skirt is finished with a lace edged flounce, tucked at the top and headed by lace inserting put on in wide points.

At the top of the blouse a small round yoke of tucked lawn is shaped into a very irregular outline upon its lower edge, this irregularity being traced by open lace galon put on in varying widths. The collarless neck is finished with a very narrow line of lace from which hang small inserted motifs. To this yoke is sewed and gathered in front a band of tucking put on in the vandyke points of irregular size.

It is crossed along the front, back and underarms by bands of lace inserted galon, and its lower points are bordered by the same sort of lace that heads a similar tucked piece which forms the bottom of the blouse. On each side the bottom of the front tucked panels are separated by insertions of lace galon.

A shoulder decoration of wide galon comes well down into the top of the sleeve, whose upper portion is crossed by a galon and whose entire outside length has a galon insertion from the shoulder to the cuff. Galon is inserted in the puff of the sleeve and forms the decoration in a tucked fitted band which finishes the sleeve between the elbow and wrist, just above the elbow, according to taste.

There are persons who do not know that galon is a form of lace which has fancy edges on both borders. It is used as an appliqué—and is made for this purpose—but it is also used most effectively as an inserting where irregular outlines are desired.

A most fetching little Summer morning dress is shown in figure D. It is made of sheer mull trimmed with bands of rather heavy linen put on in bias folds of contrasted sizes, each fold stitched several times to keep it in shape and give it firmness. Pique and duck bands are employed in the same effective manner

This method of trimming and hemming thin white or colored materials with heavy fabrics keeps the thin gowns from blowing about too much and gives them shape. It also imparts an air of chic and novelty that is most attractive

In this model the neck of the blouse is round and collarless and is finished with a band of linen with stitched bands of linen, which cross the back and front of the blouse at the top, around the middle and around the waist. Here the linen forms a belt and is to be worn with a buckle.

Wide curved bands of linen surround the armhole, but touching over and under it. All the linen bands form a harness which is separate from the mull blouse worn underneath, except that the harness is fastened in place around the top. It may be stitched up on the dress material if desired and this could easily be done.

Short puffed sleeves are trimmed around the lower portion and finished at the bottom by upward slanting bands of linen with buttons in the overlapping points. Embroidered linen buttons would be the proper kind to employ.

A leather belt of white would also be smart instead of the linen belt.

A full skirt of mull is gathered to a waistband. It is so thin that it clings to the figure and does not give an impression of fulness except at the bottom. It is trimmed with six rows of linen bands in graduated sizes, the bottom one forming a wide hem, and these bands alternate with five rows of mull which are tucked in the following manner The first two rows have four small tucks, the third row has five, the fourth row six and the fifth row ten tucks, which terminate a little above the hem, all the linen bands hang loose on the bottom.

Khaki Mull and Khaki Shoes.

Khaki colored mull, lawn, batiste or other sheer linen or cotton material would be extremely smart decorated with bands of regular khaki cloth and worn with shoes of the same sort. The model of the gown shown here is short. This means that it just clears the ground, since the sensible, practical and military short skirt is but seldom worn, and the new short skirt is not practical for any weather, when it cannot gather up mud along the edges.

Practically without exception all blouses and bodices for country wear at present are built without linings, and with real or simulated looseness of style. The lines of the figure are indicated and something followed somewhat snugly, but the bodices are not tight Often a wide girdle, four or more inches in width, gives a slender, graceful outline to the waist and the blouse is arranged above this sometimes in bolero and sometimes in baby style, as well as in draped folds and pieces of decoration more quaint to other styles of figures than those which look well in bolero or baby waists.

I would like to emphasize the importance of the belt in morning costumes. Most of these are made to be worn with belts and their whole effect depends upon the proper selection of the belt.

The new and correct belt is four inches in width and, with few exceptions, of leather for morning wear There are times ties to be found in shoes, and are by no when the belt must carry out the color means to be easily procured They are scheme of the gown, but usually it must match the shoes in color

Shoes are invariably white if too gown is white or very light in tint. In evening gowns colored shoes are worn with white If the sashes of belts are colored. It is khaki shoes do not seem to afford this sharp contrast of color and tone is beautifully with pale tinted gowns Their tendency to make the foot appear small will which is another feature to admire about them.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.

Philip Mast[illegible] is relieving a night watchman in Kingsway, London, when he sees a [illegible] out of a house and stop in a trench [illegible] the next morning the murdered body of Ca[illegible], a retired sea captain, is found in the trench. The house is called the Corner House and is kept by Adrian Hilgay, who furnishes lodging to distressed gentlefolk only at 12 cents a night. Philip meets an old friend, Sir Anthony Didring, from whom he wins two hundred and fifty pounds, which relieves his necessities.

He is then summoned to attend the inquest on the captain's body. He is alarmed when the Coroner calls attention to the fact that he was in distress before the murder and is prosperous now, and he has no opportunity to explain the reason. A negro cook furnishes the important information that the dead captain had only two relatives a brother with whom he quarrelled and a daughter named Giralda on the stage. Mrs. Caroline Upottery, the captain's next door neighbor at the Corner House creates a sensation by deposing that she was engaged to him.

CHAPTER VI.
The Verdict.

"This engagement was secret?" questioned the Coroner, kindly.

"Yes," said Mrs. Upottery, controlling herself. "Henry wished it to be so."

Instantly the Coroner and the reporters made a note to the effect that the deceased's Christian name was Henry.

"Was it of long standing?"

"I came to the Corner House on the eleventh October"——

"That was the day after the Captain arrived," the Coroner put in.

"I think it was. And the Captain took a fancy to me at once. He didn't say much. He didn't say anything. But I could see it. I wanted to be fair with him, so I took an opportunity of telling him that I'd buried my third. But that made no difference. He was set on me. It was in his eye. He found out that I had the habit of taking a walk in the Embankment Gardens most fine mornings, and he followed me there. Then he fell ill. I used to nurse him a little, but quiet like, because in them boarding-houses you can't be too particular, and no one ever saw me in his room. Then he proposed to me. Said he'd never loved any one for twenty years, since his first wife died, and would I join my fate with his, and I said I would. And he was sitting up in bed. And he kissed me; and my comb fell out and I trod on it, and that's the explanation of that tooth, and I'm telling you because these things always do come to light sooner or later, and it's best as I should keep nothing back, delicate as my position is."

"When was the proposal?"

"Monday last."

"The day before the captain met his death?"

"The day before the captain was murdered," said Mrs. Upottery, with terrible emphasis. And there was a silence.

The revelation of the singular idyll had a strange effect on everybody present. It appeared to be so intimate a commingling of the farcical and the tragic that people wanted to grin and weep in the same moment.

"The courtship was quite brief, Mrs. Upottery?" ventured the coroner.

"Yes. But he fell in love at first sight," said the wrinkled creature who had represented to Captain Pollexfen the charm and sweet seductiveness of her sex. And she said it in such a voice that none of her hearers dared move a muscle.

"Have you any theory as to the captain's death?" the coroner asked.

"I have," said she. "And it is more than a theory. Henry was captain of the steamship Volga that traded to Odessa"——

"What line?"

"I don't know what line. How should I know what line? You men ought to be able to find that out, surely. There aren't forty steamships named Volga, I suppose?" She seemed hurt.

"Continue," said the coroner.

"His boat was in Odessa Harbor while the riots were on there. And a Russian police officer that was being pursued by the mob took refuge in the captain's dinghy, and the captain rowed him off to his ship and saved his life. The leaders of the mob called on the captain to give him up and he wouldn't. Not him! Then the captain received a note from a secret society sentencing him to death. Now, I'm sure the captain was killed by a secret agent. I know he was."

"Why do you think that?" asked the coroner.

"I slipped into Henry's room after he'd been out on Tuesday evening about 9 o'clock, just to see if he wasn't any worse for his walk, and there was another man in the room, a young man, a foreigner, I'm certain. And Henry says to me, 'I'm busy with this gentleman for a minute, Mrs. Upottery,' he says. And the man bowed in a foreign way, and I walked out. I never thought at the moment there might be anything wrong."

"Did you see [illegible] go?"

"I didn't see him go and I didn't hear him go. And I never saw the captain alive again."

"And you heard nothing during the night?"

"Nothing, and I never saw the captain alive again," she repeated, her black-bordered handkerchief at her eyes.

"I am obliged to you for coming forward," said the coroner. "If you have nothing else to tell us you may step down."

"One moment," said the foreman of the jury. Mrs. Upottery turned on him like a tigress. "Was the captain in fear of his life?"

"He pretended he wasn't, poor brave fellow!" answered Mrs. Upottery.

And she stepped down. She had awed the court, the jury, and the public. There were men present who regarded the captain's death as a narrow escape on his part of having married Mrs. Upottery.

"One more witness, sir," said the coroner's officer. "Just come, sir."

"Who is that?"

A well-groomed, youngish man, obviously of the city, stood up.

"I had instructions from my principals [illegible] a cab here at once, Mr. Coroner, and offer you all the help in their power." The voice was fresh and glib.

"Now I'm Sure the Captain Was Killed by a Secret Agent. I Know He Was."

"And who are your principals?"

"Messrs. Graham, Farquhar & Graham, of Cannon street, shipowners—owners of the Volga and two other steamers."

"Swear him" said the coroner laconically.

The new witness gave the name of Lancelot Sprague and described himself as manager to Messrs. Graham, Farquhar & Graham.

"The late Captain Pollexfen was in your firm's service?" the coroner began.

"He had been. After his last voyage he retired."

"When was that?"

"About seven weeks ago."

"He had been with you long?"

"Several years. My principals were perfectly satisfied with him."

"He retired simply because he wished to retire then?"

"Yes; at least he gave no other reason."

"How old was he?"

"Rather over sixty, I should say."

"Then as he was retiring, he must have had some savings, something to live on?"

"He had over two thousand pounds invested in our business. It was yielding him an excellent percentage. And my principals were very much surprised, not only at his sudden retirement, but at his strongly expressed desire to have back his capital at once. When he was informed that capital could not be disturbed so quickly as that without serious inconvenience and perhaps loss he was annoyed. He seemed in the highest degree anxious to handle all the money he possessed at the earliest possible moment. He called on us several times to this end. Ultimately we arranged to satisfy him. The two thousand pounds was found and paid over to him, and we hold his receipt in full."

"When was that?"

"Last Tuesday afternoon about three o'clock."

"You paid him by check?"

"Yes, in the first place. But he was a peculiar old man in some respects and didn't hold checks in much esteem. He wanted notes. So we got him to indorse the check and we sent a messenger round to Lloyd's Bank to cash it before the bank closed. And we handed, shortly before four o'clock, twenty-one notes of a hundred pounds to Captain Pollexfen, together with twenty-one pounds six shillings and sixpence in gold and silver."

"Then he left your office with this sum in his possession?"

"Precisely."

An immense sensation in court.

"Did you keep the numbers of the notes?"

"Most certainly. I am instructed to state that it was not until we opened our newspapers this morning that we had the slightest idea of what had happened to Captain Pollexfen. Otherwise, of course, my principals would have put themselves at your service yesterday."

"I am indebted to your principals," observed the Coroner with a slight ironic inflection.

"Not at all, sir." And Mr. Lancelot Sprague's brief hour of publicity was over.

"Mrs. Upottery," the Coroner called out.

"Sir." The mourning woman stood up.

"Did the deceased mention anything to you of his having received the sum of two thousand odd pounds?"

"I did not see him privately after his return from the city."

"But he returned before dinner, according to the evidence of Mr. Hilgay. Did you not meet him at dinner?"

"I met him at dinner. We sat at opposite ends of the table, however, from motives of prudence."

"Did he never tell you that he was expecting this sum?"

"I never encouraged him to talk about money," said Mrs. Upottery. "I was not marrying him for his money."

"You still think, in face of the evidence of the shipowners, that his murder was the vengeance of some Russian secret society?"

"I do," said Mrs. Upottery, and added grimly, "Two thousand pounds would be useful enough to their precious revolutionary cause, I imagine."

And half the men in court thought: "This is no ordinary woman."

"About the negro Coco's story of treasure, did the Captain ever discuss such a thing with you?"

"Oh, that!" replied Mrs. Upottery curtly. "That was a harmless craze of the poor Captain. I should have stopped that, of course; I humored it for the time being."

Her heavy contralto voice vibrated curiously in the packed and intent chamber. It seemed to continue vibrating after she had sat down.

"Gentlemen," said the Coroner, facing the jury, "you have heard the evidence, which is of a sufficiently contradictory nature, and yet not extremely complex. We have learned that the deceased went out in the afternoon of Tuesday from this singular lodging house of Hilgay's, after having been ill or indisposed for a week. He was in the office of Messrs. Graham, Farquhar & Graham at three o'clock. He stayed there till nearly four. He was seen to re-enter the lodging house about five. Presumably he went to his room. He dined as usual. He went out afterward for about half an hour, and returned about eight. There is no evidence to show where he went. The last of the witnesses to see him alive was apparently Mrs. Upottery. You will note what she said as to the presence of a second person in his room. We have no evidence to show how or when that person entered the lodging house or how or when he left. From the time of the brief visit of Mrs. Upottery to the next morning we lose sight of the deceased. And then we find him buried in a trench opposite the house. The doctor conjectures that he died about midnight.

"Now if he was not killed by the foreign-looking person was the murder committed inside or outside the house? The only evidence bearing on the point is the absence of noise, which would point to a murder outside the house. But on the other hand—and this is very important—why should the deceased consent to leave the house surreptitiously, as he must have left it if he left it alive, by means of the back stairs? Certainly he might have done so, for whereas the lights at the back of the house are turned out at 11, the captain was not dead till 12.

"If the deceased was killed in the house, he may have been killed either by the foreign-looking person whom Mrs. Upottery saw in the room or by a lodger in the house, or by some other person who surreptitiously introduced himself into the house. Was more than one person concerned in the murder? In this connection, you doubtless noted that the deceased, in the opinion of the doctor, weighed perhaps eleven stone, a fairly heavy weight to be carried down the back stairs of the house, or even to be lowered with ropes from a window. But according to the evidence of the ganger the spade work of the burial was done by an experienced hand. In this matter an experienced hand would be a strong hand—a hand possibly capable of manipulating even eleven stone of dead weight without making too much noise.

"With reference to the medical evidence, I should point out that the localities of the hemorrhages in the brain, the pons Varolii and the fourth ventricle, are the cardiac and respiratory centres and that, these being affected, the deceased did in all probability die instantaneously.

"As regards light on the motive of the crime, you have the eternal hidden treasure tale discredited by the fiancee of the deceased. You have Mrs. Upottery's bizarre story of a Russian secret society's vengeance. And lastly you have the fact that the deceased had two thousand one hundred and twenty-one pounds six and sixpence in his pocket, and that this money, together with all his papers, has disappeared. I leave your sagacity to choose between the three things. The disappearance of the deceased's relatives is either a remarkable coincidence, or something more than a coincidence. But I do not think it will influence your decision. The disappearance of the bag belonging to Philip Masters, a young man who does not appear to take very good care of his belongings, is also a remarkable coincidence, since the bag contained apparently an invaluable clue to the murderer. Assuming the finger mark to have been in blood, it is interesting to note that as the deceased was not externally injured, the murderer must have injured himself in the process of burying. Gentlemen, you will consider your verdict."

The Coroner began to write, as though he had suddenly forgotten the very existence of the jury.

The sixteen men that constituted the jury turned to each other and whispered together with blanched and important faces. But in spite of the anxiety of the long graybeard to weigh every pro and con in a balance, the formality of deliberation could not be prolonged more than a few minutes.

The foreman cleared his throat.

"We are of opinion that the deceased, Henry Pollexfen, was murdered by some person or persons unknown."

There was a rush for the doors. The drama was over. Outside Philip met Sir Anthony who had been unable to force an entrance into the court.

"Man!" cried the baronet, excitedly. "Why didn't you come last night? I've something I must tell you at once."

CHAPTER VII.
The "Flesh-and-Blood."

Sir Anthony Didring's Panhard was waiting a few yards up the street, but such was the crowd and such the excitement of the crowd, that it was impossible to start the car at once. The multitude refused to acknowledge even the existence of that murderous vehicle.

Fifty people stood in its path, staring at the door of the court house and violently discussing the sensation of the day, just as if the car had been invisible. This was the first indication of the immense and unique interest which the case of the dead sea-captain was arousing in the most blasé of capitals.

The chauffeur not daring to commit homicide, Sir Anthony impatiently supplanted him, and executed a prolonged orchestral fantasia upon the horn (he prided himself upon the power of his horn, which was calculated to damage the ear as effectually as his four Ducellier lamps could damage the eye), whereupon a little lane was reluctantly formed, and the Panhard departed amid the execration of quidnuncs who detested the ostentatious arrogance of excessive wealth.

Philip sprang to Sir Anthony's side, and the chauffeur tumbled into the tonneau. The car slid round the corner at thirty miles an hour.

"Idiots!" ejaculated the baronet between his teeth, with a glance backward at the crowd.

"May I ask the reason of this abduction?" Philip murmured. "Where am I being taken to?"

"We're going to lunch at the Flesh-and-Blood," Tony replied, curtly. "But I can't talk now."

"You'll find yourself talking to a policeman soon," said Philip. "If you keep on at this rate. However, as it isn't my car it isn't my license"—— He finished with a gesture to indicate that his life was of minor importance.

Tony kept on. He was very evidently in a high fever of the nervous system. He crossed Oxford Circus at a speed which ought to have secured his expulsion from the Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland, and his progress thence to Albemarle street was an outrage upon decency and an incentive to revolution on the part of the honest working classes. At length he drew up before the rich bow windowed facade of No. 111, and flung himself and Philip onto the pavement with a vast explosive sigh of relief.

"Ouf," he breathed. "I'm better!" and to the chauffeur, "Be back at four."

The chauffeur touched his hat respectfully, but not without a secret idea about the advisability of finding a fresh master.

"I nearly went off my head trying to get into that confounded coroner's court," said Tony, wiping his face. "People standing behind the door wouldn't open. Cost me half a crown to the policeman to keep my blessed nose at the crack of the door and then I couldn't hear properly. You know how highly strung I am. It upset me! You ought to have come around last night, old chap. I waited dinner an hour and I didn't sleep a wink."

Philip gazed at the young, ingenuous face.

"What's up?" he inquired mildly. "What's the matter?"

Tony whispered, with an eye on the footman at the portals:

"Giralda is the matter! Come along in."

They entered the marble foyer of the Physique Club, referred to by every one with the least pretension to social style as the Flesh-and-Blood. The Physique was certainly the club of the moment. It had a vogue second to none, and though its subscription was twenty guineas per annum, the membership reached over four hundred women. For it was essential to the aim and purpose of the Physique that it should be a "cock-and-hen" affair.

It had not escaped the attention of a number of intelligences in the aristocracy, the plutocracy, and the theatrical profession—all diligent readers of the daily press—that the British race was physically deteriorating. Various causes, it appeared, from the professionalization of football to the increasingly absurd craze for the competitive examinations, were contributing to the gradual extinction of a once hardy and herculean stock, and the watchful patriotic intelligences had decided that something must be done to arrest this gradual extinction. They saw that it was the duty of the aristocracy, the plutocracy, and the theatrical profession to set an example to the rest of the nation, and the Physique Club was started. It existed for the cult of the body. It had swimming baths (in its first year the question of mixed bathing had nearly wrecked it), and seventeen other sorts of baths, fencing saloons, billiard rooms, a skating rink, athletic courts, boxing rings, shooting galleries, a ball room, and several bridge rooms (for repose); also manicure, pedicure, massage, tonsorial, complexion and figure departments; also its own staff of English and American dentists, also cricket, football and hockey fields at Wembley Park; golf links at Wimbledon, and a pack of harriers at Woburn Sands; also a restaurant superior to that of any other club in London. Nothing was omitted that might help to check corporeal decay. The premises were beautiful and luxurious to the last degree, because it is part of any proper physical method that the eye must never be offended. There was certainly a reading room, but it was not quite good form to let one's self be seen there; the mind was supposed to get more than sufficient nourishment at the tape-machine in the foyer.

Sir Anthony, after writing Philip's name in a morocco-bound folio in the foyer, led Philip to the restaurant, built and decorated in marble like the foyer, and like the baths. Music was forbidden in the restaurant lest it might distract the attention of eaters from the process—one of the most critical passages in the body's daily history. The two were met on the threshold by the famous maitre d'hotel Dumilatre from Ciro's at Monte Carlo, specially imported, not for the knowledge of gourmandise (which was, however, immense) but for his manner. For Dumilatre's manner was ecclesiastical, nay, ritualistic; it said to each person entering the restaurant, "Now let us approach with due solemnity the great crisis of the day. Let us give all our brains to the selection of a refined and suitable meal." It was inimitable that manner, and it cowed and awed even the most careless eaters.

Dumilatre, long and thin, with a long romantic mustache, led his patients to a quiet corner of the room.

SCIENCE SAYS: Singe your hair to KILL the GRAY HAIR MICROBE.

Strengthening the Hair from the Roots With a Gentle Pull, and Then Sleeking for Gloss.

Singe the Hair Unless You Wish It to Turn Prematurely White.

After a Shampoo Always Hang the Hair Out to Dry As You Would Washing.

Cut the Hair of Children Quite Short Between the Age of Six and Twelve.

It's Not a Chemical Change Which Makes the Hair Grow White, but a New Microbe Called the Chromophage.

But This Mischievous Color Eater Can Not Stand Heat and You Must Sizzle Him if You Would Get Rid of Him.

THE latest scientific information is to the effect that it is much better to have the hair singed than cut, unless you wish your hair to turn white. It is not a chemical change which makes the hair grow gray, but a microbe, called the chromophage, which dines off the coloring matter. The chromophage is, however, very much affected by heat, and that is why ladies who use curling-tongs keep the color of their hair much longer than those who do not. As a man's hair is, as a rule, much too short for the curling-tongs, singeing the hair instead of cutting it is the obvious remedy for these chromophages in his case. The microbes have every reason to complain of the march of science. Until quite recently they had everything their own way; but now, what with disinfectants and curling-tongs, their lives can hardly be worth living.

An interesting quarter of an hour with any one of the most noted hair specialists will teach one much wisdom; but the point is that nature meant everybody to have a good head of hair, and keep it as long as they live. We lose the opportunity from want of care, ignorance, and other faults of our own, and then we blame poor Dame Nature for what is mainly our own doing.

Those who have a shining spot where once hair used to grow must now submit to the inevitable. Taken in time, as soon as the tresses began to fall on the cranium, the growth might have been promoted and the decay impeded, for it is a fact that when we allow any of our powers or organs to fall into disuse we are pretty certain that they will become useless. Nature is our friend up to a certain point, but neglect her, and she takes her revenge. That a stitch in time saves nine applies as well to hair as to needlework.

Men are more apt to become bald than women, who are supplied with a soft pad of muscles and flesh on the top of the head which assists the hair, and the conditions of life in the fair sex are more favorable to the growth of hair. They do not subject it to such rough usage. The past generation have neglected their opportunities; the present have the chance before them. As soon as the first sign of the hair falling off or not growing so vigorously begins to show itself seek a remedy; go to the best hair specialist you know. There are many whose advice is not worth much; there are a few who can be absolutely trusted. Find the right one, and follow his advice at once, and implicitly.

Health has a potent influence on the hair. If you are in good health, depend upon it, your hair will be in good condition, for there is immense sympathy between it and the constitution; but there are local defects which need prompt treatment. Often in the case of a man or woman, once let the hair yield to baldness and the head becomes a bright and shiny spot where there are no partings; then the hair producing vessels are, as a rule, dried up, and no longer acting.

So much mischief is done because few people really understand the anatomy of the hair. What is needed is to exactly ascertain what is wrong. In some cases electricity is a great reviviier and prompter of health, in others it does not suit the constitution. It is pretty certain that no two people require the same remedy.

One "don't" about the hair that cannot be repeated too often: After shampooing the hair be sure and dry it thoroughly, thoroughly, thoroughly. Let it dry in the sun if possible, or the full fresh air. Air and sun and the hair love each other. It is not advisable to bare the hair, however, to a high hot sun, as so many are apt to do on the beaches. This may parch it and hurt it grievously. One must use temperance and discretion in all things.

Over-heating the scalp is especially trying for those who have thin, delicate hair. If you have long thick hair hang it out to dry as you would washing. Don't ever leave your hair moist and damp after the shampoo. And using much water with the brush is apt to produce bad effects. Certain oils and unguents under a specialist's directions are advisable when the scalp is unnaturally arid.

Friction, when properly manipulated, is most beneficial to a drying scalp, and the strengthening of the roots by massage is most to be advised.

People who have delicate, falling hairs should never indulge in a violent shower bath. The swift pressure of the water on a tender head of hair is apt to tear out the roots, as a fierce shower would uproot delicate new seed roots in a garden. For all special diseases of the scalp don't delay a moment to consult an authority. If one spent one-tenth of the money on one's hair one does on one's teeth, and took the matter in hand at the first sign of decay there would not be such general lamentations over dreaded baldness.

Those who study the history of the past know that there are distinguishing features in hair of most nationalities. The northern nations, as a rule, have fair hair. Abundant hair is one of the charms of the Caprian peasants—dark, lustrous, with heavy tresses rippling over a low forehead. Their massive plaits descend half way to their heels, but they often roll them in a coil, thrust through with silver pins. Judging by the coils and the knots of hair that remain to us in art as worn by the Greek women, they had not very abundant tresses, but arranged them with classic taste. There is much character in the hair of a Spanish woman—strong and abundant, and not very fine.

It would seem that nomadic tribes of any nationality have straight black hair, for there is little doubt that nothing conduces more to the growth of hair in a healthy subject than living in the open air and going about bareheaded. Unfortunately, there is but little left of the fine heads of hair for which early Victorian women were famous, possibly due to the masses of false hair that used to be worn and the torturing with hot irons. Those who know, say it will be a generation or so before the hair is restored to its original beauty.

There is no doubt that the best preservative of the hair is to keep the scalp perfectly clean. Many people are greatly benefited by washing the head often with soap and water, getting the right soap, and taking great care to cleanse it out thoroughly.

Up to the age of six or seven children retain what is called baby hair, and that, it is said, it is best not to cut at all; it is softer, silkier than the hair of a later growth. This should never be crimped or tortured into any form that it does not naturally assume. It is wiser and better in every way to let it flow freely on the shoulders. Americans are apt to cut the hair quite short between six and twelve, and our women often can certainly boast of beautiful hair. The state of health can be fairly judged by the aspect of the hair.

Between seventeen and thirty our tresses are very apt to fall off. Spirit washes and dyeing are occasionally responsible for this, making them dry and brittle. Sometimes, tracing it to its cause, you will find that the health is weak. Neuralgia, excitement and worry are enemies to the system, and consequently to the hair. Quinine, steel, or some other strengthening medicine will work wonders.

Torturing the hair into plaits, knots, bows, curls, ripples and the like is not a weakness peculiar to the modern woman. The Romans dressed their hair in the most extravagant fashion, and it was only theirs in the sense that they had paid for it. The color of English hair is said to have deepened in tint during the last 150 years, owing to frequent inter-marriages. The Egyptians perfumed and pomaded their hair in ancient days, and they paid the penalty, just as we so often do now, by checking its growth and neglecting the rules of hygiene. Assyrians gave great attention to their tresses, as we see by their monuments, but few of these nations have left us any recipe to enable us to keep and restore the hair, that too often refuses to bear the strain of our modern treatment.

How One Wastes Enough Housekeeping to Buy One a House.

BY MAY IRWIN.

A CARELESS or ignorant housekeeper throws out enough at the back door to build a home in a few years.

She wastes at least half of what she buys at the market.

For instance, suppose that a woman's allowance for household expenses is one thousand dollars a year. By this same careless ignorance she wastes five hundred dollars a year. If her allowance is five hundred a year she throws out by the back door at least two hundred and fifty dollars' worth of material.

It is Monday, washday. Take a brief comprehensive peep and view of the refuse pail. What is the most prominent thing there? I thought so. I would have wagered a house in town on it. There is nearly a whole bowl of fresh starch. It has been thrown away. Why? Starch is of no use if it stands in hot weather. Certainly, but why has the woman who made the starch used so much? By a little forethought she can gauge to a spoonful how much she needs for the family laundry each week. My Sarah doesn't waste three teaspoonfuls of starch a year, because she uses her brains, and there is need of that article in the kitchen, much more of it and of a different quality than that which we scramble occasionally for breakfast.

After pondering on these and things look again. You see bones from yesterday's roast. The heart of the meat is gone; that is, the rich central part has been cut away, but look at the ends of the bones, near the joints. There are bits of fine, juicy meat, the richest and juiciest and most delicious morsels. That would have made a beef stew for luncheon, yet if you have a trained and sensitive ear you heard a shriek from the kitchen about half-past eleven for a beefsteak for luncheon. Result, as we would say in the arithmetic class, the price of a large steak for a large family thrown into the garbage can. So much of the assets for the new house, the home of your own, that even the most shiftless want, thrown out the back door. But there are other wastes. Three large and four small potatoes have been flung into the waste barrel. There is the rest of the beef stew.

Some raspberries have been tossed out because there were not enough of them for another heaping dish. But there were quite enough for some delicious small tarts for luncheon or some fruit dumplings or a light berry pudding for dinner. Into that small mountain of waste has gone one large, fine carrot. Now, a carrot is a small thing, and yet that carrot would have been enough to flavor toothsomely some old fashioned vegetable soup. In the waste pan one sees a couple of onions left over from the day before, a bit of the heart of a cabbage, enough tomatoes adhering to the bottom and sides of the can, with the meat bones, to make a soup, a beef stew or roast beef hash. I have shown you that in that refuse was the material for luncheon and dinner, or for a midday dinner and tea, and for a large family. In the course of the morning two meals have been thrown away. What wonder that Europeans, visiting this country, say Americans are the most extravagant people on the face of the globe. It is true.

Many persons say they don't like made-over things. That is because the things are not made over well. Yet many dishes are better the second than the first time they are cooked.

My boys, who are rather spoiled as far as the things of the table are concerned, like roast beef hash and beef stews better than the original roast. Fricassee chicken, when properly prepared, is much better than roast chicken. And spaghetti is a hundred times better when warmed over than when first cooked. How often is spaghetti a really agreeable dish? Not once in ten times, and that because it is not thoroughly done once in ten times. Trying to cook it through, the housekeeper or cook puts it over a furious fire, and it cooks on the outside and the inner part is either raw or leathery and tough.

On Tuesday, ironing day, you may find the skeleton of last night's roast chicken, not a nice, clean, well picked skeleton, but one with shreds of meat here and there that would make an excellent fricassee or that dish that is a favorite in my household, chicken a la Johnis.

Here is the recipe which having read, I hope you will never throw away again any bits of cold chicken.

Mince the breast of one cold chicken, chop a green pepper, one small onion, four fresh mushrooms, a little parsley and one cold boiled potato together until very fine; mix well and season with red pepper, paprika and salt to taste. Have a frying pan ready with tablespoons of hot brown butter and put the mixture in and stir it well. Cover it for a few moments and let it brown on one side, as hashed brown potatoes are done. Put on a hot platter and garnish with tomato sauce. This sauce is made by cooking two or three tomatoes for half an hour; strain and add a tablespoon of butter, salt and pepper and flour enough to thicken a little. Take from the fire and add half a cup of cream.

On Wednesday, cleaning day, you may find four or five tomatoes thrown away because they were not immediately available. These, with as many fresh eggs, would have made a favorite breakfast dish of mine. Here it is:

Five tomatoes the same size. Cut a slice from the top of each. Remove enough of the pulp to enable you to drop into each tomato a bit of butter and a raw egg. Pin with a toothpick a strip of bacon around each tomato. Sprinkle a little salt and pepper over the top, and put into a very hot oven until the eggs are set. This will be from five to eight minutes.

While the kitchen is the chief vent in the household waste it is made up of innumerable leaks. One of these is the habit of cutting up meat in choppers. The fine flavor and best juices of the meat are retained by the choppers, and so lost. Sometimes we cut up vegetables in that way, but I am not sure that a great deal of the richest flavor is not thus lost.

For the sake of economy I would banish the gas stove; at least in the case of inexperienced or careless housekeepers. Such cooks use three times as much gas as they need. For instance, we will assume that potatoes are being cooked. Watch the average cook. She will turn on the gas before she peels the potatoes. Why she does this she can never satisfactorily explain. It is sufficiently sad that she does it. She usually forgets to put the water on to boil until her potatoes are quite ready. Another leak in the household ship. When the potatoes are finished she takes them off and drains them, and only remembers that the gas is still burning when the potatoes are on their way to the table. This combined with what the gas companies are now doing to us is enough to bankrupt us—the masses.

You can stop a big leak by having your laundry work done at home and under your own eye, yet even then your eye and your heart will be pained by the waste that is at least attempted. How many bars of soap, and through them their equivalent in dollars, are wasted by using several bars of soap at one time, and leaving some of them half used, to melt away in the bottom of a tub, is beyond counting.

In kitchen utensils there is a shocking waste, due to carelessness. In the first place it pays to buy good cooking utensils. I have pots and pans that I bought sixteen years ago, and that have had steady daily use in all those years. Had I had a careless cook I would have had to replace them a dozen times. If my Sarah were a sloven instead of a genius in her line, she would, in the first place, let things burn fast to the bottom of the cookpots and pans. Then she would set them back and put water in them to let the burned stuff soak. The last and fatal step in the destruction would be scraping the bottoms of these pots and pans with a sharp knife. The result is logical. Sharp knife, holes in pots and pans. New pots and pans. Several dollars less in pocket. House further off.

I have spoken of iron pots and pans. Now, as to the delicate porcelain vessels. The waster washes them well enough, dries them with a swish or two of the towel, and sets them on the back of the stove to finish drying. The vessels crack. The mistress buys new ones. The house is still further away.

Summing up, I should say, be careful what you bring into the house—that is, be most careful in your marketing. When things are brought to the house weigh them, to see that there is no mistake. The honest grocer or butcher wont mind.

Be careful what goes out. Never throw out anything that by any possibility can be used. For what you throw out the back door is the measure of the distance away from your own front door.

American-Journal-Examiner Pattern No. 260.

A Simple House Dress That Any Woman Can Easily Make At Home.

A COMFORTABLY fitting house robe such as the one here pictured is a necessity to the feminine wardrobe. The design is an excellent one for the home dressmaker to follow, as the pattern is simplicity itself. It is fitted by under-arm seams and a square yoke supports the full front and back which fall in unbroken lines to the floor.

The sleeves are in full length and a high standing collar completes the neck. Several materials are adaptable, such as cashmere, flannel, dimity, lawn and china silk. For 36-inch bust measure, 6¾ yards of 36-inch material are required.

Patterns for this very necessary garment have been prepared expressly for the American-Journal-Examiner series and will be sent postpaid by return mail for ten cents. The patterns have been cut in six sizes, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure.

To obtain one of these patterns, fill in the blank printed herewith and mail, enclosing ten cents in money or stamps to

Things the Baby Needs.

THE less noise a baby hears, the less he is carried about and played with for the first six months of his life, the better it will be.

It is seldom necessary to take him from his crib, except for his bath and meals. The habit of tossing him about and trotting him on the knee makes him nervous and wakeful, and cannot possibly do any good.

His undeveloped system calls for rest, yet he is often denied that privilege.

Children, as well as older people, are to a great extent creatures of habit, and they cannot acquire habits that are conducive to proper development and health of the body at too early an age.

It is during sleep that the building-up forces work without interruption and the child gains in flesh and strength.

Have regular hours for his naps, and see that everything is favorable for sleep at that time. There should be no tight bands to hinder respiration.

Place his crib in such a position that the light will not shine directly upon his face—preferably in a cool, quiet corner. Do not cover him too warmly; change his position occasionally, and he will sleep longer.

If baby is restless and does not sleep well, it is well to remove some of the covering. Baby should not be covered too warmly, but should have just enough covering so he won't be cold.

Never give your baby soothing syrup of any kind, except on the advice of your physician.

Whenever baby shows the slightest symptoms of sickness it is best to call a physician at once, since much harm may be done by only a few hours' delay, and the little life is far too precious to be sacrificed needlessly.

CHAPTER XXIII

WELL, Tige and I ran and ran until we got clear out of sight of that man before we stopped to take our breath. I had never talked to a lunatic before, that I was aware of. I didn't tell ma I had been spending the afternoon with a fellow who had rats in his belfry, which is slang for the fellow who has nothing on his mind but his hat. If I had told her she would have been so frightened that she would never have allowed me to go back, and I had already made up my mind to visit him again. So a day or two after Tige and I set out in my pony phaeton and drove along until we came near to the place, then we got out and hitched the pony. We went it afoot so as to appear to just happen in on him. A whole drove of geese were coming along the road, and the old gander, who had seen an imitation of me in another paper, and, being a goose, didn't recognize the difference, ran at me and really gave me a pretty good scare. I think he would have bitten me, but Tige gave him an upper cut and ran him away.

Finally we reached the asylum, and there, as usual, sat our crazy friend whittling a stick.

"Hello," I said. "Howdy," he replied, and kept on whittling. I asked him what he was doing, and he said he was "carving his own destiny." I told him I knew it; that was easier than two and two. "But," said I, "what kind of a destiny do you expect by only sitting here whittling?"

"Just what you see," said he. "What else could you expect than just what I am as long as I rely on a pocket knife to carve it? Destinies must be carved with character, with brains, honesty, perseverance and industry. Character IS destiny, young man," said he.

"TIGE GAVE HIM AN UPPER CUT AND RAN HIM AWAY."

"HE SAID HE WAS CARVING HIS OWN DESTINY."

"Well," I said, "if you realize all this why don't you get busy and do something besides sitting whittling all day?"

"Because I'm crazy," he replied.

"How did they discover that you were crazy?" I asked.

"Well," he said, "you see I am the commonest kind of a lunatic there is. I thought I could sing. There are more people afflicted that way than any other. With no natural talent, no lessons and no soul for it, they will squawk away at the trashiest lot of songs that are published. It's curious how people will act themselves up as being something they are not and then believe in themselves until they make a whole lot of others believe it. They blow their own horn and their own bazzoo. It isn't so much because THEY don't know as because OTHERS don't know that they get their reputations as singers or actors or artists, etc. Pshaw! There are lots of people who don't know that a bird in the bush is worth two in the hand. Because being in the bush he if free, and a thing that is free is worth two of those that are not." Then he looked at Tige and went on:

"Every day has its dog. Monday will pick out a bulldog perhaps, while Tuesday may fancy a St. Bernard. Sometimes three or four days in succession will all want the same dog, and that's when one dog gets more than one day. Isn't it perfectly simple?" he asked.

"Certainly," said Tige.

"The old idea was that you should 'look before you leap,' but it isn't true, because most people will just look and look and never get their nerve up to leap. I know folks who have been looking all their lives and have never leaped yet. They are still poor and obscure and put in their time roasting the ones who did leap and lit astride of success, then had the tenacity and pluck to hang on."

"How is it," I asked, "that you talk so intelligently and rationally sometimes and so crazy at others? The last time I saw you you were the lion on the royal coat of arms of Great Britain—how about that?"

"Oh, I was, but the unicorn got here yesterday and I've been keeping quiet ever since. Besides," he went on, "nearly everybody talks more intelligently at one time than at another. Have you never been introduced to some great person whose books or editorials you have read, or you've seen them act or heard them play, and found their conversation very commonplace indeed? No man can talk like he had any sense to a pretty girl to whom he has just been introduced.

"Suppose all the people who talk like fools were in the asylums—there wouldn't be room enough for"——

Here he looked around and I saw he was going off his trolley again.

"Here comes the unicorn now!" he cried. "Mon Dieu et mon Droit!" And he skidooed.

So did Tige and yours truly.

Too Often Parents Neglect This Partnership—Children, Teachers and Education Suffer

WE earnestly request the attention of fathers and mothers to this editorial.

We demand on behalf of the future generation, on behalf of the school children and the school teachers of to-day, THAT MOTHERS AND FATHERS CO-OPERATE WILLINGLY AND INTELLIGENTLY IN THE WORK THAT THE SCHOOL TEACHERS HAVE TO DO.

There is much talk, in homes, of the school teachers' shortcomings.

There is far too much readiness to listen to the stories of children excusing their own poor work with criticism of teachers.

The matter is most serious. THE TEACHER CANNOT POSSIBLY DO HIS BEST WORK AND GIVE THE BEST RESULTS UNLESS THE PARENTS CO-OPERATE WITH HIM INTELLIGENTLY. Let us consider what the duty of parents is, AND WHAT THE TEACHERS HAVE A RIGHT TO EXPECT.

* * *

Fathers and mothers know what an atrocious thing A SPOILED CHILD is.

You pity the father and mother that must control ONE spoiled child.

Don't fail to pity the public school teacher who is expected to control, BY KINDNESS AND INTELLIGENCE EXCLUSIVELY, a dozen or more spoiled children.

The first thing for you fathers and mothers is to see to it that you do not send SPOILED CHILDREN to the schools.

Remember that the most intelligent, conscientious, devoted teacher can see all of his work made useless BY OVERPETTING OF A CHILD OR FOOLISH SEVERITY WITH A CHILD.

Fathers and mothers in America demand, PROPERLY, that a teacher shall not strike a child.

They should send to the teacher children that do not REQUIRE blows.

Fathers and mothers demand that in school their children shall be controlled by moral persuasion, appeals to their better nature BY INTELLIGENCE.

Let them send to the teachers children that are ACCUSTOMED to be controlled in that manner.

Realize that the father is A TEACHER'S PARTNER IN EDUCATION, and that the mother is the teacher's ally.

How impossible it is in a family to bring up the children properly if the father adopts ONE method and the mother another.

How many children are ruined by contradictory orders from father and mother.

Think what a task you put before the teachers, when you expect them to control so many children who at home are too often directed in opposition to the teacher's wishes and EVEN ENCOURAGED TO DISOBEY THE TEACHER.

We emphasize this point: CONTROL YOUR CHILDREN BY KINDNESS AND INTELLIGENCE. You have no right to send children otherwise controlled to the public schools.

If you say, "I have a boy that I can only control by whipping him," or "I have a girl that must be whipped once in a while," HOW HAVE YOU A RIGHT TO SAY, "I will not allow a teacher to touch my child?"

If YOU cannot CONTROL ONE CHILD WITHOUT BRUTALITY, how can you expect a public school teacher TO CONTROL FORTY OR FIFTY CHILDREN BY KINDNESS?

Remember that we do not excuse under any circumstances the striking of a child by a teacher.

Every human being has the same rights in this world. It is an outrage according to our law for a man to strike another equal to him in strength. It is an infinitely GREATER outrage for any human being to strike a weak child that is defenceless.

This newspaper, with pleasure, will always share in the prosecution of any teacher or of any human being guilty of striking a helpless child if effective prosecution can possibly be brought about. But we do tell parents they should be frank with themselves, and honest to the teachers.

It is a disgrace to send to the public school children that have been made the victims of blows and brutality at home and expect the teacher to do the hardest of all work, THE INSTILLING OF EDUCATION, without recourse to the only kind of persuasion that the child is accustomed to obey.

* * *

Nowhere in the world is paternal love more highly developed than in America. Nowhere are greater sacrifices made for the coming generation.

The sight of a father working himself to death for the sake of his family is so common in the United States that it excites no comment.

The mother slaving day in and day out that her daughters may have what she could not have, that her sons may have for their education the money that she ought to spend on herself, is the rule, not the exception. But too indulgent or mistaken affection ruins the child.

* * *

Never encourage a child to speak disrespectfully of a teacher.

Never encourage a child to put blame upon a teacher. There are defective teachers, of course. And it DOES happen that the child may bring to its father or mother truthful tales of shortcomings on the teacher's part.

Investigate these things if you will. BUT INVESTIGATE THEM FOR YOURSELVES, REMEMBERING THE TENDENCY OF CHILDHOOD TO EXAGGERATION.

Don't be made foolish by the fact THAT IT IS YOUR OWN CHILD that talks. Find out for yourself, without encouraging the child to disobedience by listening too eagerly to its story. Then, if you find that your child has spoken absolutely truthfully, take such steps as you may please.

* * *

Don't laugh at your child when it tells of the "smart things" that it does at school to bother the teacher or to bother other pupils.

NEVER TRY TO INFLUENCE THE CHILD AGAINST THE TEACHER UNDER ANY CONDITIONS. You hurt your own child infinitely more than you hurt the teacher when you encourage the child to rebel against necessary discipline.

Remember that the work of school teachers is the noblest and the hardest work in the world. REMEMBER THAT IT IS INFINITELY THE MOST IMPORTANT WORK IN THIS WORLD.

You ask of the teacher a devotion that can only be given as a result of the highest possible moral character.

Instinct compels us to make great sacrifices to the children OF OUR BODY. Nature attends to that, the human race would die out without it.

The school teacher is NOT the father or the mother of the children sitting on the benches. Yet we ask of the teacher a devotion greater than that of any other public servant. We demand that he give every ounce of his ability, of his interest, to children that will not thank him, whose success he will not live to see or share, exhausting his vitality in return for extremely poor pay.

* * *

Fathers and mothers, be CONSCIENTIOUS PARTNERS OF THE TEACHERS.

For your children's sake especially, and for the teacher's sake as well, put yourself in the teacher's place. Impress upon your child the great, noble work that the teacher does. Tell the child how often it has happened that men successful in this world have owed their success entirely to their school teacher.

Impress upon them especially the fact that good men and successful men have always been eager in childhood to show gratitude for the work that the teachers do.

You can easily impress the child in the right way. Make it your solemn duty to lighten the burden of the men and the women in the public schools, upon whom you depend for your children's welfare.

Do not neglect this.

ON A SHIP OF SPACE. Exploring a Dead World. BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner

WE had all of us frequently thought of the strange state of a sun which, having completed its career as a light-giving orb, becomes thenceforth simply an inert mass, blind matter, wandering through space at the will of the attraction of gravitation, and deprived of the power of lighting up its path with its own rays. Indeed, measured with the countless ages during which such an extinguished sun may continue to exist buried in hopeless gloom, its precedent days of splendor are not so great in relative duration as are the momentary illuminations produced by the firefly, when it winds its way flashing through the night in search of its fellows, compared with the intervals of darkness when its phosphorescent light is not seen. But, while we had so often dwelt in imagination upon the forlorn state of a sun which has lost its light and become a cold, opaque mass, we had never considered the condition of the planets belonging to a dead sun. This condition was now forcibly brought to our attention by an encounter with just such a system of unfortunate worlds.

We became aware of the existence of this system in our immediate neighborhood by virtue of its attraction, and particularly the attraction of its invisible sun, upon our crystal car. So accurately was the Captain able to measure the forces exerted by the gravitation of the various bodies comprising the unseen system, by means of the delicate apparatus which we carry, that a series of brief calculations served to show not only the number of bodies concerned and their relative masses, but even their distances from us and from one another, and the directions in which they respectively lay!

In this manner, then, we have found ourselves able to move about amid these dead and abandoned worlds with a certainty hardly less than that which would govern our movements if they were visible. And visible, indeed, they are whenever we approach any of them closely enough, for the pale light of the surrounding universe of stars throws upon them an ashy illumination sufficient to render some of their features fairly distinct to our eyes, which have become supersensitive in this prevailing darkness. It is like stumbling by starlight through an abandoned graveyard, finding one's feet continually striking upon the gray, half-sunken mounds or the lichen-hidden stones.

"Here comes another," says the Captain, as a dark, shapeless mass, which we had not before observed, looms up suddenly in front of us, and we are obliged to veer to the right to avoid a collision. Then, as we pass it, we see that it is a huge, globular body, with a diameter of perhaps a thousand miles, and that it is surrounded by a system of rings, like those of Saturn, but composed of much smaller bodies. Some of these rings are very broad, others very narrow, and they are arranged in various planes, so that they present a most complicated appearance.

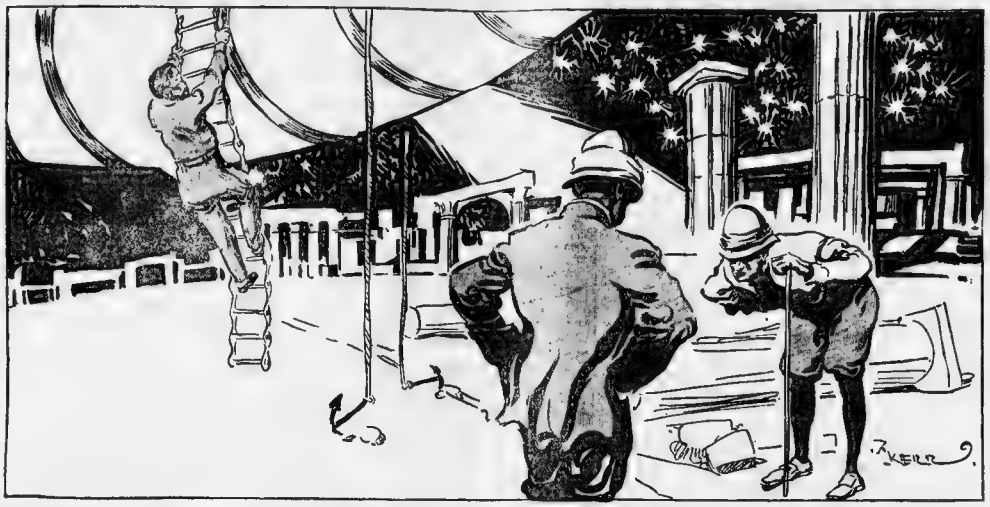
"Oh, can you be certain," says the Only Woman, with a shudder, "that people ever lived here? It is too dreadful to think of the fate that overtook them!"

"I am as certain of that as of my own existence," the Professor replies. "But I do not think that their fate was dreadful exactly in the sense which you evidently have in mind. You must not suppose that they were overtaken by a sudden catastrophe. It was a slow and gradual process by which their sun went out and their soul was left freezing in the gloom. Ages upon ages were required to bring about the end. No doubt that end had been long foreseen by their savants, and there must eventually have come a time when it became evident to all. But the progress toward planetary death could hardly have been perceptible in a generation, even after the light and heat of the perishing sun were so far exhausted that the greater part of the surface of this planet had become uninhabitable. Yet it is possible that by searching we may find remains telling of the life that once flourished here."

Acting upon the Professor's suggestion, we do search, and our efforts are shortly rewarded by the discovery of the remains of what can only have been a populous city. But, as in every case where we have found inhabitants or the handiwork of intelligent beings, among these distant worlds, the variations from the standards and patterns to which we were accustomed at home are so great, and in some ways so inexplicable to our understanding, that we find it difficult to describe them for lack of suitable terms of comparison. Yet these ruins plainly enough manifest the former presence of highly intellectual creatures, who made homes and accumulated luxuries for themselves, and whose architectural ideas were so original that, looking upon the broken and scattered remnants of their work, we feel that if we ever get back again to our own planet, we shall be able to offer to civilized mankind, at least, that long-sought desideratum—a fundamentally new idea in the art of building, based upon a genuine sense of beauty.

There is one thing, to which the Captain calls our attention, which brings us closer to the vanished race amid whose vestiges we tread than we could ever have deemed it possible to approach. This is the remains of what, after close inspection, we decide must once have been a tomb; and, having brought electric lanterns from our car, we proceed to explore it. Our search is successful beyond expectation, for the Professor, whose instincts for investigation have been fully awakened, at length unearths two mummies which, like those of Egypt, have defied the passage of time, being aided in this case, no doubt, by the prevailing cold. There they lie, side by side, almost human in their form—the relics of a strange beauty in their changeless faces—one a child, the other probably its mother.

Who can imagine our feelings as we gaze upon these inhabitants of a now dead world, who must have looked upon the expiring rays of the sun that had made their world glorious and who, in this distant corner of space, now become so blank and desolate, left such touching evidence that their race also cherished ideas of immortality and of love capable of surviving the utmost efforts of the destroyer who spares neither worlds nor suns, but is powerless to touch the spirit which cannot perish!



"Our Efforts Are Rewarded by the Discovery of the Remains of What Can Only Have Been a Populous City."

A Short Cut to Fame (The Song Writer) By William F. Kirk

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner

THE other day he wrote me the following letter:

"My Dear Sir—You haven't been around to the flat for nearly ten days, and I have been waiting to see you. I have been working on what I believe will prove a sure ballad hit—a tender little bit of sentiment, and I am anxious to have you set the thing to music. Young Tremaine Boggs, who wrote 'Dear Father, Leave That Faro Bank Alone,' gave me the idea, and wanted to help me write the lyric, but as you know he is very illiterate, and I preferred to use my own wording. In the letter he wrote me last Friday he wanted to use the expression, 'I am full of hope,' and the word 'hope' was spelled without the 'e.' In other words, the 'e' was silent.

"I have great confidence in your ability as a composer. I shall never forget the sweet, wailing harmony you wove into our first big hit, 'I'm Going Home to Beat My Wife.' Therefore, I want you to tackle this new job, and I feel sure that if you can do as well on the music as I have done on the words, the song will be sung from the sands of California to the flats of Harlem.

"I enclose the verses herewith, and if you can keep away from Saratoga and the consensus of opinion long enough to frame up a melody before next Sunday I shall be very much obliged."

* * *

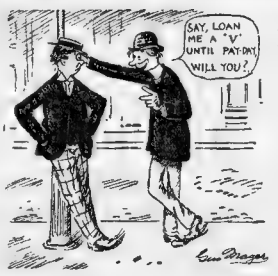
"I SEEN THE LOVELIGHT IN YOUR EYES WHEN I WAS SLICING HAM."

I.

WITHIN a delicatessen store a maiden fair did stand
Weighing a pound of sugar and interpolated sand.
A youth with kind and handsome face did wait within that store
And watched her weigh the sugar as she'd often did before.

He loved this maiden very much, and presently he said:
"Come, not that sugar weighed, my dear, and tell me if you'll wed."
The maiden blushed a scarlet blush and turned her head away.
And when she got the sugar weighed she gently then did say:

"The maiden blushed a scarlet blush and turned her head away."



"And went around to all his friends and finally made a touch."

CHORUS.

"I'll marry you, my darling, because you are my all—
Providing that your salary ain't too almighty small,
When first you came into this store I fell in love, dear sam,
For I saw the lovelight in your eyes when I was slicing ham."

II.

The youth was stunned with happiness and all he done was stare
At this frank declaration which the lady did declare
That her pull an assures back (which wasn't getting much)
And went around to all his friends and finally made a touch.

To-day that pair is married, and life is one glad dream;
The wife does fancy sewing and the husband's drawing team.
They are as happy as can be, and nearly every day
They think about the fond, sweet words which she to him did say.

CHORUS.

"I'll marry you, my darling," etc.

Mirandy on Long Engagements By Dorothy Dix

Copyright, 1906, by Journal-American-Examiner.

"MA'Y JANE was readin' to me de odder day what dat professer man in de Rockinfeller University say about long engagements," remarked Mirandy. "An' I sho'ly was glad to hear dat dem college men is got down her to tie up wid him a chanst to sorter size up each odder's little weaknesses, an' find out whadder dey bof eats onions or not.

"'What a sweet idee!' says Ma'y Jane, a rollin' her eyes at de ceilin' 'Dere's nothin' so techin an' poetic as de beautiful bond between an engaged couple.'

"'May be so,' says I, 'but I'se done took notice dat hit is mighty apt to git busted of you stretches hit out far, an' ef I done give a man a option on me, hit w'd have to have a time limit on hit.'

"'Don't you believe in a long engagement?' axes Ma'y Jane.

"'Dat I don't,' I 'spons. 'I done seed too many engagements kinder flaxe out. A engagement is lak a omlette—you got to serve hit up quick an' hot, or hit'll fall flat an' flabby.

"'When a man is fust engaged he's a beggin' an' a implorin' you to marry him. After awhile he ain't so anxious about hit, an' by de time two or three years go by he begins to think about the weddin' dat lak he does de first of the month when de bill collector comes round.

"'No, my child,' says I; 'don't you never tangle yo'self up in a long engagement, for hit cuts off hope of odder men, an' don't give you no lien on de man what is at de odder end of de rope.

"'Besides, a gal what is bound up in one of dese heah day of judgment engagements ain't neither fish, nor flesh, nor good red herring. She ain't neither single nor double—married nor free. She got all de troubles of a husband widout de benefit of his pay envelope, or de privilege of sassin' him widout bein' 'fraid she will lose him.

"'She's got on a man's collar an' is tagged "Tooken" so dat de odder men leaves her on de shelf, yit she ain't got nobody to support her. She ain't got no alimony, nor insurance to console her, yit ev'ybody expec's her to be faithful to de vows she plighted to a man whut mo' dan likely ain't never comin' back, for I done sed mo' dan one weddin' whar de bridegroom didn't show up.

"'Darfore, my child,' says I, 'ef de man plints you to a weddin' day dat is so far off you has to look at hit through de telescope, you tell him to call aroun' agin when he's able to talk business. Dat'll hustle him up, an' keep de door of hope open to you.'

"'But,' says Ma'y Jane, 'ef folks ain't engaged a long time how is dey gwine to find out about each odder's curls peculiarities?'

"'Don't you worry about dat,' 'spons I. 'Youse got plenty of time to do dat after you is married.

"'Besides, hit is dangerous. Ef e'vy woman found out befo' she was married how cranky an' onreasonable, an' cantankerous de man she had promised to marry was, an' de man got a inklin' of how many different ways de woman could be aggrefrettin' dere wouldn't be no mo' weddin's. Nobody would be foolhardy enough to take sich risks.

"'Don't you never let no man get well enough acquainted wid you befo' you marries him to find out dat yo' temper is hung on a hair trigger, an' dat yo' angelic disposition is just for company wear.

"'An' don't you go probin' into whedder he is de gran' an' noble bein' dat knows hit all dat he lets on dat he is. I knowed a gall dat got to investigatin' her sweetheart's character once an' she los' him.'

"'But you got to find out about a man's faults after you marry him, an' he's got to find out about yours,' says Ma'y Jane.

"'Dat's so,' 'spons I, 'but youse got each odder for better or wuss den, an' we're all so self-satisfied dat de ve'y fac' dat a thing is ourn makes hit seem better.

"'Mo'over, hit is a kinder cheerful amusement to pick faults in de one you is married to, an' reflec' how much better you is dan day. Don't you worry about dat, honey, when you gits married an' de partner of yo' bosom begins to lambast you for de way you cooks, or for spendin' de rent money for a pair of tan shoes wid jaybird heels, you'll find hit's a mighty comfort to be able to reach up in de fambly skeleton closet, an' pull out a bunch of his shortcomin's dat will make you look like a sheriff from de skies.

"'Nobody but a ole maid wants to marry a perfec' man.'

"'Do you believe in dese heah snap weddin's?' axes Ma'y Jane. 'Whut de folks dat is never seed one anudder befo' meets on de railroad platform, an' recognises each odder by a bow of white ribbon, or a red rose, an' rushes for de furst preacher.'

"'Not at all,' agrees I; 'dere's moderation de gold brick.'

"'How long, den, ought a engagement to Ma'y Jane.

"'Mebbe you'll have to,' says I, 'for men is last?' says Ma'y Jane.

"'Long enough for folks to git acquainted,' says I, 'but not long enough to git familious. You want to pull off an engagement befo' de woman down to skin an' bones an' a raspy engagement, specially after hit is kinder wo' got a mighty habit of forgettin' to keep a long disposition.'"

"I done seed mo' dan one weddin' whar de bridegroom didn't show up."

Society Girls Become Experts at Tennis—The Reigning Fad of August

MISS SEARS WINS NEWPORT PLAUDITS IN TENNIS PLAY

The racquet reigns in August. Beautiful debutantes and staid matrons have found keen enjoyment on the tennis courts. Even golf and the auto have been forsaken, at least temporarily.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 18.—The Sears Barger tennis match at Newport last Wednesday was the most sensationally interesting the Newport Casino has ever witnessed among women amateurs who, in this case, were evenly matched. Miss Sears, though defeated, 6—4, 1—6, 7—5, was far and away the more brilliant player, and really came to defeat only through her own errors rather than the superior playing by Miss Barger, whose play was marked by great caution and steadfastness of purpose.

The feature of the playing by Miss Sears was fast service and brilliant net work and ability to place correctly, and her manner had that nonchalance that challenged the admiration of the throng, that included the Prince and Princess Cantacuzene, Nathalie Schenck-Collins, Mrs. Payne Whitney and a host of stars in the cottage colony constellation. At the end of the play Miss Barger was warmly congratulated, while the society women patted Miss Sears on the back, saying, "Never mind, you played beautifully, Eleanora." Then she took a couple swallows of water, threw the many stray locks of hair out of her face, and said she could play more.

Miss Sears, who is really in a class by herself, wore a black alpaca coat, short brown skirt, white flannel tennis shirt, with the collar turned away at the neck, black stockings and white shoes. Betting was lively, with odds of 3 to 5 in favor of Miss Sears, and quite a sum changed hands, to say nothing of boxes of Huyler's best. Harold Sterling Vanderbilt was the most interested spectator present.

Miss Tonita Ridgeway of Washington, who is summering at the Thorndike, made fame for herself the other morning. She donned a dark, short-skirted bathing costume, and, making a sensational dive from the high springboard at the Jamestown pier, struck out for Rose Island, two miles away. Miss Ridgeway, who is a lovely brunette of Titian coloring, was accompanied by a [illegible] boats containing numbers of her young friends, one of whom acted as bottle-holder in case of necessity.

Tonita Ridgeway is the twenty-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. T. E. Ridgeway, who became alarmed when she seemed gone too long and chartered a launch for Rose Island, which proved unnecessary. Tonita Ridgeway reached the little island all right and is the heroine of the hour. Her intimates said she couldn't do it.

Mrs. Frank Morris Avery (May Clarke), who has been visiting Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish at Crossways, first turned up in the London season of 1901, where she was one of the American beauties. She is a pronounced brunette, and this coloring has become quite the fashion this season in Newport. With her perfect brunette beauty she has a delicate rose leaf complexion resembling that of Miss Gwendolyn Burden. She seldom wears jewels, started the fashion of carrying flowers to London opera at Covent Garden, and is fond of pale mauve colors, lavender and blue violet. At the Newport Casino the other morning Mrs. Avery appeared in pale blue voile combined with white lace, Leghorn hat trimmed with pink roses. Mrs. Avery now lives in Chicago. She is a great friend of the Perry Belmonts, who exhibited her at the Metropolitan Opera House last Winter. Recently she has made her home with her mother, Mrs. Clarke, in Colorado Springs. As a young girl May Clarke lived in Nebraska, where she was considered the best looking girl in Omaha.

It was the expected that happened when Mr. and Mrs. Seth Low of New York announced the engagement of their niece, Miss Helena Pelham Curtis, daughter of the late Benjamine R. and Mary Gardner Curtis of Boston, to Gouverneur Morris Phelps of New Rochelle, N. Y.

Miss Curtis is well known in both New York and Boston society, as she was born and brought up in Boston, and since the death of her parents has lived with the Lows in New York. She spends much of her time in Cambridge when she visits her aunts, the Misses Horsford, [illegible] identified with the [illegible] of the University city. It was when attending the wedding of her [illegible] at the Horsford home last Spring that society first coupled the names of the newly engaged pair, and since that time the engagement has been looked upon as inevitable.

Franz von Laar, captain of the San Jose, Costa Rica, polo team, which recently defeated the English team of Bermuda, is at Narragansett Pier, having arrived from Paris, where he spent the Winter. Mr. von Laar is the son of a wealthy coffee planter. He is collaborating a comic musical comedy which is to burlesque the most fashionable set at Narragansett Pier. The name of the play is "Cupidia." It has already been arranged to put it on Broadway in New York next Winter. The entire scene for this musical is being written by Antonio d'Annunzio. He is a great friend of Count Gherardesca and a brother of Gabriel d'Anunzio, the Italian playwright.

The annual exhibition of the Newport Horticultural Society opened Monday afternoon in the Casino Theatre with a most [illegible] display. Mrs. Robert Goelet took many first prizes, and notably one for a [illegible] wide. Mrs. Astor took a first for palms, ferns and foliage plants. Perry Belmont first for a group of ferns and [illegible], a beauty roses. Mrs. Thomas O. Richardson of Boston, first for [illegible] of sub-tropical plants and another for best specimen of cycas. Miss Fanny Foster of Boston, first for best specimen fern.

Exhibitors from private conservatories included Mr. Beebe of [illegible], Mrs. Wal[illegible] of [illegible] Westport and Henry H. Rogers of Fairhaven.

The special attraction on Tuesday was the display of centre pieces in fancy baskets, for which special prizes were offered by the society. A gratuity of $5 went to Miss Fanny Foster for nephrolepis [illegible] schizma for twenty-five white dahlias, [illegible] Mrs. T. O. Richardson for Lutter [illegible] dahlias, first to Miss Fanny Foster.

In the class for special prizes offered by Mrs. Edward J. Berwind for the best table decorations of any kind of flowers, the arrangement to show originality, first went to Perry Belmont, who used a tree effect of Fortunei fern, with white Stephanotis, and second to Mrs. Robert Goelet. Mrs. T. O. Richardson received the largest number of awards, having taken nine premiums and eight seconds, Mrs. Robert Goelet being a close second.

MISS EMILY BEEBE.

The rosy, athletic summer girl sets the pace in Fashion's craze.

MISS HELEN ANTHORP.

SUMMER GIRL GRACEFULLY WIELDS RACQUET SCEPTRE

"The reign of the racquet" is on once more, and the Summer girl, rosy and radiant, is wielding her sceptre with sovereign grace and skill.

Tennis tournaments, tennis teas, tennis luncheons and in fact tennis everything make up the social program of the remaining August days, and the tennis girl abounds at all the fashionable resorts.

The tennis craze is at its height in Newport, and forenoons and afternoons Bailey's beach, the Casino and the lawns of the Summer villas are alive with tennis enthusiasts.

At the Casino, to add impetus to the game, the governors have offered cups, and the tournament which began the 14th and ends the 25th is in full charge of Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Barger Wallach and Miss Maud Wetmore.

• • •

Among those who, for this season at least, have thrown aside the golf sticks and proclaimed allegiance to the racquet is pretty Emily Beebe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Beebe, of Commonwealth avenue. The Beebes are varying their stay at their country seat at Falmouth with a visit to Bar Harbor, where they are staying at the [illegible].

Miss Beebe, who spends part of each Summer there, was a most welcome addition to the younger set of tennis players and is rapidly making her way to the front ranks of the racquet clubs. After leaving Bar Harbor Miss Beebe will return with her parents to their Falmouth estate for several weeks before returning to town.

The first in a series of three women's scratch lawn tennis tournaments for which the Newport Casino offers silver cups, opened Tuesday forenoon on the Casino tennis courts before a large number of spectators, many of whom came to see Miss Eleanora R. Sears play, but her opponent, Mrs. Rodolphe Agassiz, defaulted, as did three others. Those who did play resulted as follows: Miss Edna Barger beat Miss Alice Potter, 6-0, 6-0; Miss Louise Scott beat Miss Mildred Sherman, 7-9, 6-2, 10-8; Miss Edith Roach drew bye. Cottage society was represented smartly by Mrs. Harry T. Peters (Nathalie Wells), who was beautiful in a cream and pink flowered mulle, hat to match, with roses. Marion Fish was lovely in spotless white. Other beauties, candidates for the Hall of Fame, were Charlotte Warren, Sallie Tay[illegible], Vera Gillert and Gwendolyn Burden. Miss Marion Fenno of Boston and Miss Chase of Philadelphia defaulted before the drawings were made on account of inability to be present.

SOCIETY HAILS COMING OUT OF TWO BEWITCHING BUDS

Two bewitching buds who are bowing their way into big est favor in the circles of the elect, and who are just at present much in evidence, are Miss Ethel De Koven of New York and Newport and Miss Katherine Roosevelt of Boston.

Miss De Koven is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald De Koven, now residing in the de Rham cottage on Bellevue avenue. She married and ten invitations have been issued for the supper and dance which the De Kovens are giving at Bellevue Lodge on the 24th, at which time they are to formally introduced their pretty and accomplished daughter to the cream of the elite society.

The pretty lass was to have had a New port debut some time ago, but different things interfered from time to time, necessitating the postponement until now that her mother is out of mourning, and something unusual is brilliant is expected.

The lucky youth who has been engaged for the opening are to furnish music written entirely by the lucky young father, which, of course, could sound charm to the numerous invitations planned.

Miss De Koven, though fond of outdoor sports is not what could be called an athletic girl, but has much of the spirit to make her interesting. Though she is not credited a beauty she has a certain charm of manner and alertness of expression which at once both attractive and interesting.

Since the death of her father, ex Senator Farwell, Mrs. De Koven has spent much of her time in Chicago, where she her sister, Mrs. Robert Chatfield Taylor she moves in the most exclusive circles.

Among the many Bostonians who have received invitations to the festivity the De Kovens are going for their daughter, and which promises to lead to the usual of brilliant events at the extensive resort this Summer, are the Loy Norrixs, the James Lawrell Putnams, the Nathaniel Simpkinses and the Nathaniel Thayers.

Conspicuous by her absence just present is Madame Katherine Roosevelt, who last week sailed away with her mother, Mrs. T. James Bowdoin of Beacon street, and her brother James A. Roosevelt, for a tour of Europe. She will see the first part of her visit abroad with sister, Mrs. Orme Clark (Edith Roosevelt), whose marriage here in June was among the most notable of the season.

Miss Roosevelt made her initial bow to society last Winter, and is generally considered one of the most popular and interesting of the year's crop of attractive debs. She is so thoroughly alive and epigrammatic, indeed, that she is often spoken of as possessing in a marked degree evidence of the proverbial Roosevelt strenuosity.

Her second Winter bids fair to rival her first, and it is expected that the gowns which she and her mother are having made abroad will make her the best dressed girl in the youngest set.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald De Koven are entertaining lavishly at Newport. Mrs. De Koven was the daughter of former Senator Farwell of Illinois and she inherited a large share of the millionaire's estate. The De Kovens were among the guests at the Saturday evening dance given by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish.

Miss Ethel de Koven, daughter of an American composer, is one of the sprightliest young girls in Newport. She is fond of outdoor pastimes.

HUB LEADERS SHINE IN SOCIETY PARADE

Take Conspicuous Part in Brilliant Functions at Mecca of Mirth-Lovers.

Mo h o the more, members of Boston s smart set are among those to be found at the mecca of mirth lovers, and the Boston colony at Newport is becoming daily more brilliant.

Mr and Mrs Eugene V R Thayer, Jr., who have been at their beautiful Lancaster estate throughout the greater part of the summer, went to Newport early in the week to arrange for the home coming of Mrs. Thayer's mother, Mrs. H Montgomery Brooks, who returned on Wednesday on a nice spell of a week in Europe. Mr. Thayer is an intimate friend of Mr. Alfred Vanderbilt, and it is expected that one will be entertained by Mrs. Vanderbilt upon her recovery from her present illness.

Mrs J. Ogden Richardson (Mary H. Bates) is being congratulated on all sides on the success in carrying off the honors at the summer show of the Newport Horticultural society, the past week.

Mrs. Robert Goelet was a close competitor, Mrs. Richardson being awarded nine premiums and eight seconds and Mrs. Goelet ten first premiums and two thirds. Mrs. Richardson's conservatories in connection with her Newport villa, Weodcroft, are very extensive and she has for many years been a close competitor, though her exhibits have never before been a leading feature of the show.

FAVORITES OF FORTUNE CAPTURE CITY OF MIRTH

By a Society Woman.

A city of mirth, a plutocratic paradise in a wilderness of hydrangeas, and the "butterfly life" at its rarest—that is Newport just now.

Ultra smart interests all centre in the spectacular season-by-the-sea, where Vanity Fair is in vogue and the favorites of fortune dine, drive, dance and grow giddy with the wealth suffing experiences encountered in the social parade. And life at the lesser resorts is but a dim reflection of all this.

Longfellow's Grandson to Wed.

Few weddings set for October are of more general interest than that of Miss Dorothy Goodale, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Goodale of Cambridge, and Allston Dana, son of Mr and Mrs. Richard H. Dana (Edith Longfellow, daughter of the poet). He graduated last June from Harvard, and is the youngest of three brothers. Mrs. Henry C. de Rham, 2d, of New York (Frances Dana), is his sister.

The engagement was announced shortly before Mr Dana's graduation last June, and at the Beck and other spreads the young pair were quite the centre of attraction. The wedding will take place the latter part of the month, and will be a church affair, at which the literary, as well as the smartest social set will be brilliantly represented.

Miss Goodale, who is one of the most attractive girls in the ultra exclusive University clique, will be attended by her sister and will make a winsome bride.

Wins American Beauty for Bride.

A foreign wedding of strong local interest will be that in September of Miss Emily de M. Macvane, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Macvane of Cambridge, to Baron Dodeman of the Eleventh Cuirassiers, French cavalry. It has been decided to have the ceremony take place in September at St. Germain en Laye, where the Macvanes spend their Summers.

The prospective bride is considerable of a beauty, and is possessed of marked musical ability. After the wedding, the Misses Edith and Dorothy Macvane will return with their parents to Cambridge.

Mrs. Larz Anderson's Motor Palace.

Mrs. Larz Anderson has outdistanced all others of Boston's fair motor enthusiasts in driving a luxuriously equipped palace on wheels. Tired of depending upon the hotels along the route for food, she is having her new palatial automobile equipped with all the necessary attachments for cooking and the storing of food.

During September Mrs. Anderson will make a trip about New England in her new car, taking with her a couple of congenial friends. While her car can be opened up like any other for fair weather, it is fitted with sliding and cleverly constructed walls that convert it into a room in which one may sleep comfortably and have all the comforts of home—even in the wilderness.

BEAUTIFUL SOCIETY BRIDES TO BE

BARON KNOOP WEDS EMILY SARGENT NEXT SATURDAY

Leading the brilliant procession of early Autumn brides, three North Shore belles appear, and faint, familiar strains of "The Peace that Breathed Over Eden" are already in the air.

Auspiciously the long and dazzling array of brides begins next Saturday with the weddings of fair Emily Sargent to the German nobleman, Baron Ludwig Knoop, and Nancy Mitchell to Quincy A. Shaw, 2d, of Boston.

Miss Sargent is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sargent, of Beacon street and Magnolia, but has spent the past several Winters in Egypt. It was while there and during a trip up the Nile last Winter, that the young couple met and fell in love.

Baron Knoop, with his father, Baron John Knoop, his stepmother, Baroness May Knoop, and his cousin, Carl Webb, his best man, arrived on Thursday, and were met at the pier by Miss Sargent and her father.

The wedding is to be a very quiet one, with only relatives and a few of the most intimate friends of the family in attendance. The Parisian bridal gown of white liberty satin, trimmed with white tulle and orange blossoms, will well become the blonde loveliness of the bride. She will be unattended and will be given away by her father.

A few days after the wedding the young couple will sail for England, where they have taken a house for the Winter. The Baron's home is in Schloss Muhlenthal, near Bremen, and it is there that they will eventually reside.

Bridal Gown Marvel of Elegance.

Miss Mitchell, the young and exceptionally pretty daughter of the Walter J. Mitchells, of Cincinnati and Manchester, though of a contrasting type of beauty, will no doubt make an equally lovely bride. Her wedding, which is to be a quiet one, cannot possibly be small, as the family connections on both sides are extremely large.

It will be al fresco, the beautiful lawn of the Mitchell villa making a fitting setting for the bridal cortege. The bride's gown is said to be a marvel of elegance and simplicity.

Mr. Shaw, one of Boston's most prominent young club men, is one of the two sons of Mrs. Louis Agassiz Shaw, of Chestnut Hill, and a grandson of Mrs. Quincy Shaw. His aunts are Mrs. Chartered Penno and Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, of Philadelphia. His grandmother, Mrs. Shaw, is a daughter of the late Professor Louis Agassiz, the noted Swiss naturalist, and is one of Boston's greatest philanthropists. She is a sister of Mrs. Henry L. Higginson, whose son, Alexander H. Higginson, is a well known sportsman.

Miss Mitchell, who is still in her teens, was introduced to Washington society a year ago last Winter and on account of her beauty and charm, created quite a sensation. She is well known in Boston's most exclusive set, with which she is a prime favorite. One of the most prominent functions which she attended here but so soon was the wedding in February of Miss Margaret Head and Philip Stockton at which she was the prettiest in the group of interesting bridesmaids. She spent the greater part of last Winter at Palm Beach, where she received much attention.

After an extended tour abroad Mr. Shaw will bring his young bride to Boston, where she will be a welcome addition to the coterie of young matrons, most of whom are her intimate friends.

MISS EMILY SARGENT

Probably Late Autumn Wedding.

It was with an air of "I told you so" that Back Bay and Newport society greeted the announcement of the engagement of beautiful Margaret Winthrop, of Walnut street and Manchester-by-the-Sea, to J. Grant Forbes, of Commonwealth avenue, and rumor has it that if all goes well the wedding will follow closely the announcement, probably being an event of the late Autumn.

Miss Winthrop is an acknowledged belle in Boston's ultra-exclusive set and is the most accomplished member of the Vincent Club. In her dance with Clemence Crafts at the club's annual show two Winters ago, called the "French can-can," which proved a clever travesty on James Hazen Hyde and Mme. Rejane, the actress, she received encore after encore, and in her "Gypsy sword dance" last Winter she portrayed in the finest degree the perfect poetry of motion. She is at present the guest of her aunts, the Misses Ellen and Ida Mason, at their Newport villa on Bath road, and has entered into the whirl of Newport social gayeties with her characteristic enthusiasm.

Mr. Forbes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Forbes, and a brother of C. Steward Forbes and F. Murray Forbes, who married Marjorie Cochrane. His sisters are Miss Ethel Forbes and Mrs. Austin Potter, of Beacon street. He is a Harvard, '01, man and a member of the Tennis and Racquet Club. He possesses considerable literary ability, and during his senior year at Harvard wrote the Hasty Pudding play, "The Dynamiters." The marriage of the interesting young pair will mean the uniting of two of Boston's oldest and best families.

LENOX COTTAGERS HURRY BACK FROM COAST TO HILLS

Lenox, Aug. 18.—The tide of travel has turned from the shore to the hills and Lenox cottagers are hurrying back into the Berkshires from the Atlantic coast resorts. In swarms are arriving automobile parties which linger for a day or more, and then start townward. There has been a continuous round of out of door affairs this week which has included such sports as baseball, tennis and cricket, pienics and automobile runs to Berlin, N. Y., where the wonderful Cowee gladioli farm is attracting many.

The Beckshire Hunt, an organization which has had a wonderful influence on resort life in the Berkshires, will issue its Fall programme next week, giving the number and dates of its meets and the names of the cottagers who are to entertain. The Hunt races on September 7 will inaugurate the Fall sports. There has already been a big entry list, such owners as Raymond Belmont, S. Von Stade, C. S. Bird, Jr., O. D. Sexton, J. Watson Webb and others having entries of runners and handle horses for the events.

Mrs. [illegible] week offered a large and very graceful silver trophy for a handicap against bogey at the golf course. There are about twenty entries for the match.

The club golf tournament this week was well led by a big gallery from the hotel. Miss [illegible] Hall McKay was handicap scratch and scored and his work was well done. Miss Belle Jackson won the women's prize and Livingston Parsons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Parsons of New York, the boys' prize. The cups, which were gifts of Judge and Mrs. Ernest Hall, were presented by their donors.

John Hall McKay gave a very delightful evening [illegible] at Laurel Lake this week, entertaining 60 young people at [illegible] and [illegible] events. Miss Blanche Barnes, a Boston vocalist, gave a recital at the hotel on Tuesday evening, adding [illegible] to the concert program by Prudhel's New York orchestra. Miss Josephine Lucas of Bridgeport gave a bridge whist party at the hotel on Wednesday evening.

The most talked of event of the week in Lenox was the annual flower show at the Town Hall, where Lenox cottagers competed for awards with the products of their gardens. The exhibition had been anticipated by the growers of flowers and the tables set out today was proved to hold the awards. Mrs. John E. Parsons, who lives at Stockbridge, famous flower garden, Miss Sadie Rockefeller, who has in Pittsburgh the most beautiful of all the Lenox flower gardens, Mrs. Edward R. Wharton, who finds recreation from her literary work at the Mount by cultivating an old fashioned flower garden, Mrs. John E. Ames, who has a [illegible] growing at Spring Lawn and Mrs. [illegible] garden were the leading prize winners of the flower show.

The hall was a gorgeous sight, the delicate shades of the [illegible] contrasting with the vivid colors of the gladioli and the [illegible] of the [illegible] awards for arranging [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] was won by Mrs. Wilson B. Ogg of Field who had a [illegible] arrangement of hollyhocks and [illegible] flowers. Mrs. Edward R. Wharton won second award and Miss Charlotte Barnes, the third award.

The department of fruits and vegetables attracted as much notice as did the blossoms. Mrs. Robert Winthrop showed [illegible] berry, the strawberry raspberry, a hybrid which originated in Japan. Mrs. Winthrop won first award on her white [illegible] and second on black grapes, also getting in the awards with Robert W. Bowne, William D. Sloane, Charles [illegible] William [illegible] Curtis and John [illegible]. An entire row the awards for vegetables.

To-morrow in Trinity church the volunteer choir, composed of the young set in Lenox, will sing at both morning and afternoon services. Every year when the resident choir of the church is allowed a vacation the young people sing simple anthems and hymns from the choir stalls. In the choir to-morrow will be Misses Barnes, Polsom, Selcock, Grinnan, Baron, Parsons, Shepard, Scarboro, Mrs. Delafield, Messrs. Frothingham, S. W. Scoggins, James Barnes, Hall and [illegible] Greenleaf, J. [illegible] and others of Lenox society.

THRONG NARRAGANSETT PIER FOR THE HORSE SHOW

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 18.—Three weeks of polo have hardly served to satiate the love of the social set for this exciting and popular pastime, and after the final game on Monday the more enthusiastic will follow the clubs to Newport, where the tournament begins Wednesday.

The sport here will give place next week to the horse show, which this year promises to eclipse all former efforts. It will be held on the spacious grounds of the Point Judith Country club, whose functions society delights to patronize.

The horse show will be the means for the finest blood of the pier, as indicated by the numbers who have already engaged parking spaces. Prominent among the patrons will be H. R. Hitt, Joseph Clouin, Philip M. Prescott, Walter S. Hackley, George A. Hinke Jr., Samuel H. Valentine, John C. Norris, Eugene M. O'Neil, Charles H. Parsons, E. A. Smith, S. S. Ellis, F. W. Casino hackies and drivers hum and bridge are popular sources of pleasure, and entertainers vie with each other to surpass in the art. Friday evening hops at the Matheson are growing in popularity and last week's being the most brilliant of the season. The Saturday evening crowds at the Casino for dinner and the hop following invariably bring out the society leaders of both seaes, with gorgeous wardrobes and [illegible] and diadem pieces in prodigal display.

MISS MARGARET WINTHROP

"THE SECRET OF PERPETUAL YOUTH LIES IN EVERY MIND,"

SAYS HARRY GAZE WHO TEACHES BOSTONIANS HOW TO LIVE FOREVER.

"GOD may forgive us if we forget to pray, but Nature will not forgive us if we forget to play."
—HARRY GAZE

Confident That the Scythe of Father Time Can Be Broken and That People Need Never Die.

By Eleanor Ames.

For two months and [illegible] on has been sitting at the feet of Harry Gaze and learning how to live forever.

According to Mr. Gaze, it is quite simple.

"Old age is a curable disease," he says; "death is unnecessary. Each individual holds within his own breast the secret of perpetual youth. No one needs to die if he doesn't want to. I never expect to die. I believe that a thousand years of life will only whet my appetite for living."

Mr. Gaze's present intention is to spend most, perhaps all of that thousand years of his life, in Boston, where he expects to quote his own words, "to build up a great, strong work."

The start has been miraculous.

In the classes which he has just concluded in the rooms of the Metaphysical Club on Huntington avenue fifty substantial, prosperous, brainy men and women eagerly, proudly, counted themselves pupils, following him onward to the point which none die Leon grew old and died smoking, and which Harry Gaze claims to have found.

"I have regained the spirit of youth. My friends tell me I look ten years younger. I feel twenty."

Such are the words the leader bears as his disciples gather around him, lauding him, thanking him, paying him tribute.

When Harry Gaze spoke in the Metaphysical Club Sunday it was on "How to Live Forever." [illegible] it is taken and his audience is startled.

Harry Gaze is a good advertisement for the gospel he preaches. The light of youth is in his eye, the tone of youth in his voice, the spring of youth in his step.

He is happy, alert vital. He has forgotten his own birthdays. Not carelessly, mind you, but purposely, and with "malice aforethought."

Glows with Health.

Therefore, it is impossible to tell how old he is, as you and I reckon years. He must have passed into the thirties and it would not be surprising if he was well on the way out of them. His appearance is no index of his years. He is tall and lithe and slender, yet as muscular as an athlete.

His calm, boyishness face is unlined. His features are prominent, the eyes large and light blue and inscrutable, the nose straight and generous, the lips full.

His skin glows with health and his yellow hair is straight and thick.

Harry Gaze has neither the look of a reformer nor a poseur.

He might be a broker or student, a lawyer or a practical business man. His clothes are dark in color and conservative in cut. The only approach to an unconventionality of attire which might match the cult he teaches is a [illegible] low tie, and even that is a tie which anyone might righteously wear.

Harry Gaze says he awoke to the fallacy of the idea of death amid the possibilities of youth everlasting through the [illegible] of Christian Science. The awakening came in his [illegible] fifteen years ago.

Two years later he came to America to spread the belief. For [illegible] he has lived principally in California, teaching, writing, lecturing. Harry Gaze takes himself seriously and others follow his example.

He does not attempt to work miracles like [illegible] to wand or word with which to assail infirmities and wipe away pain. He says that "age is only a physical condition" and that "a person [illegible] years should be [illegible] and continue to live [illegible] twenty-five."

To Be Young at 100.

Furthermore [illegible] that when he is a hundred [illegible] expects to look younger [illegible] to-day.

"How?" I asked [illegible]

We were sitting in his apartments at No. 39 Huntington avenue.

He smiled indulgently.

"By a constant [illegible] of the body," he replied.

"How?" I asked again.

He settled himself [illegible] to explain as [illegible] to a child.

"This body is not the [illegible] had a year ago," he began. "It is not the same one [illegible] as your from now. [illegible] in eleven months. Now [illegible] every ten days. [illegible] renewed every few months [illegible] and rebuild a more [illegible] that is self-responsible."

Founds grand, doesn't it but [illegible] understand it? I didn't. So I asked "How?"

"By the law of unconscious evolution," explained Mr. Gaze. "By conscious co-operation with the laws of change and growth. We are self-architects. We can build any kind of body to suit ourselves."

"I'll have a slender one," I decided, promptly, "and model size."

"That is the idea," he responded gravely. "We must keep ever before us an ideal, and consciously plan the building of a superior body through the power of the ideal."

"Of course," I suggested, "we can't have any disease in this body?"

"We should not have. I admit the condition of disease," he conceded generously, "but I believe the power is in us to overcome it."

"Mind over matter?"

"Cast Out Worry."

"Do many people want to look forward to never ending life?" I demanded, thinking of the warfare of existence, the unhappiness, the disappointments.

"I have found few people in my entire experience," he replied, "who did not welcome the idea of living just as long as possible and of remaining young as long as they live. Most people dread old age because of what it brings.

"It should bring only happiness and preparation. We should make life worth living. The very principle that will perpetuate life will keep up an interest in life. Man's conscious cooperation with the laws of change and growth will solve that. There must be a youthful spirit throughout the body."

"When you cast out worry?"

"Worry is almost wicked."

"But suppose the rent is due and the children are ill and it is Winter and there is no coal and the wolf is howling and you haven't a cent nor a job," I argued.

"Would worry help any?" he retorted. "Rather, wouldn't it cause more distress? I believe in being scientifically optimistic. That means not optimistic just for the sake of being cheerful, but purposely and for a reason.

Harry Gaze does not only teach the gospel of perpetual youth, but he puts into practice his own teachings. He believes, surely, in the necessity for deep breathing of pure air. In consequence, he is much in the open.

You may see him early in the morning, when the new-born day is fresh with sweetness, and the silence of night has not entirely disappeared, swinging along in a brisk walk toward the Fenway. The shoulders are squared, the lungs expanded, the head lifted, the face illumined with the joy of living.

He lays great stress upon bathing and the Turkish bath attendants greet him familiarly as a "regular."

He does not believe in eating flesh, and his own diet for ten years has been entirely of fruit and nuts.

Takes Daily Sun Bath.

Believing the sun is the chief source of the vitality of the world, he takes [illegible] bath as regularly as the sun rises.

He avoids hurry and worry. He thinks only pleasant thoughts. He takes necessary rest and recreation and relaxation. He works, but he also plays.

The loss of the spirit of play in any individual he declares to be an alarming sign.

"God may forgive us if we forget to pray," he said, "but nature will not forgive us if we forget to play."

He defines old age as the "acceptance of maturity." To remain young one must always grow.

"The moment a person confesses to having reached what he calls 'the prime of life,' says Mr. Gaze, 'that minute he must necessarily decline. One must be constantly active in development. It is better to prevent old age than to cure it. All death is suicide, conscious or otherwise. The unconscious mind tires of the body and throws it off.

"We must never be content to stop and let well enough alone. We must go on and on, reaching one ideal, then creating another, higher, more beautiful, more worth while."

Analyzed by the sun-thinker, Harry Gaze presents a science worth living, in its presentation, wonderful only in its name and its extent.

It covers just the normal healthful, hygienic life, the cheerful, hopeful, confident spirit, the honesty of purpose. It is the life which it is the privilege and right of every human being to live. And perhaps because of that it is the life neglected.

Harry Gaze has no new way in which to lead the people.

"Return to Nature."

He is only turning them back to the natural way, from the abnormal byways they have chosen.

He pleads in the name of nature. Yet, so constituted is humanity that if he said, "I am only a natural normal man, and you are all artificial," it would laugh him to scorn.

"Return to nature." It doesn't sound very interesting, does it?

But—live forever, learn the secret of perpetual youth, follow the law of unconscious evolution—ah, it has a magic sound.

Harry Gaze's cult rests upon the foundation of common sense, cleverly coated with mysticism, so that it slips easily down the throats of people to whom a plain, common-sense globule would probe unpalateable.

"If you simply told people to be natural, you would bore them," I remarked, as he finished his creed.

He smiled.

"So you have to go at it the way that they fancy," I continued.

He smiled again.

"Physical age is a delusion," he asserted, "and one day it will be disproved by the larger understanding. We must do something different than has ever been done in the way of evolution. Then we shall have solved the problem of perpetual youth. Then our women will always be young and beautiful, our men strong and vital.

"Grandmother and granddaughter will walk upon the street and you will not be able to tell which is which. I will be the same with the man of one hundred and the youth of twenty."

"And you will be here to glory in that day?"

"Surely. And you, too, if you wish."

I shook my head.

"I should like to be young as long as I live," I confessed, "but to look forward to living five hundred or one thousand years, it tires me."

"It ought only to refresh you," he replied.

HOW TO LIVE FOREVER.

BREATHE deeply of pure air.
Exercise regularly.
Bathe daily in water and sun.
Eschew all flesh.
Eat fruit and nuts. Apples contain all the elements of rejuvenation.
Drink two gallons of distilled water daily.
Relax when you sleep and sleep eight hours of the 24.
Keep the mind and body in perfect harmony.
Build a new body constantly by co-operation of mind with the laws of growth and change.
Cease to worry.

DENEGRE BALL BIG EVENT OF WEEK ON THE NORTH SHORE

More Than 400 Invitations Issued for the Smart Function at West Manchester Villa.

Manchester-by-the-Sea, Aug. 18.—The smartest function of the season, the one that brought out all the North Shore Four Hundred was the ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter D. Denegre at Villa Crest, their delightful summer home at West Manchester, Wednesday evening.

Invitations for a little over 400 had been issued, the guests including the most select of the summer colony, though there were exceptionally few of the younger set there. A number of small dinner parties were given at the residences in the early evening, and it was after 9 o'clock before the first guest arrived. They continued to come until 10:30, and it was after 2 o'clock before the party was over. At midnight lunch was served.

The ball was held in the large building across the court from the house, in what was at one time used as a barn. This was transformed into a beautiful scene, several hundred colored lights giving brilliancy to the interior, while innumerable colored Japanese lanterns gave charm to the court and surrounding grounds. The color scheme included a red border, with green rosettes, and the lights were peeping from beneath branches of hemlock boughs, hydrangeas and other greenery. Hanging from tripods in the courtyard were some beautiful large Japanese lanterns, having on them the emblems of the standing of castes of people in that country.

These, with many other lanterns, all of which Mrs. Denegre selected on her recent European trip especially for this occasion, lent beauty and life to the affair. Besides the house, and setting around the south the court and lighted to these beautiful lanterns and the twinkling stars above, and with each table lighted by three beautiful Dolly lights, also brought from Europe, were tables for about 200 guests, and a space 12 o'clock the dancers left the floor and sat down to supper. The whole affair was pronounced the swellest of the season on the shore.

Thursday evening the mid-summer ball at the Masconomo House was a delightful successful affair. A number of the cottagers joined with the hotel guests in the evening. Mrs. Sydney Booth of New York was in charge of the event.

The [illegible] John B. Schoeffel's steam yacht, has just arrived in Manchester, after being thoroughly overhauled from stem to stern, and Mr. and Mrs. Schoeffel are entertaining many of their friends with short trips along the coast.

Miss Louise Denegre is the guest of her uncle, Walter D. Denegre, at West Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. William McMillan and family have arrived from Washington and will spend the rest of the summer at Eagle head.

Mrs. James McMillan and Miss Amy McMillan sailed to-day for Europe

Magnolia

The social event of the week at Magnolia was the ball given at the Library Hall Thursday evening under the management of Miss Gertrude Sands of Boston, assisted by Miss Isabelle of Chicago. Society from all along the shore attended the affair and lauded the pretty young girls on their poses. The object of the event was to raise funds with which to purchase books for the library.

The programme was divided into three sections—"Gibson Pictures," "Ideal Heads" and "Flight of Time in America." These subjects were treated grandly. Mrs. Ethel Tucker Lindsay and Julius East, one of the foreign attaches, represented the "Angel Cake." Miss Margaret Rumsey of Boston took of the "Jolly Good Fellow" to perfection.

One of the prettiest pictures was that posed by Miss Mildred Carr of Philadelphia in "Oh! What a tangled net we weave, when first we practice to deceive," from her girlish and running to the floor were innumerable [illegible] of the [illegible] the meshes of which were little gold hearts. Miss Fra McAdoo of New York made a splendid "Gibson Girl" and the "Auto Dance" by Misses Josephine and Beatrice Howell of Philadelphia, and Miss Louise Brown of Boston, well known in Vincent Club circles, was a delightfully pretty feature.

"The Flight of Time in America" showed poses from 1500, the Indian period to the Twentieth century girl. The "Puritan Girls" were represented by Miss Marion Brown of Boston, Miss Josephine Howell of Philadelphia and Miss Elsa Putnam; the hoop skirts of the 1800 period were worn by Mrs. Ethel Lindsay, Miss Beulah Bonsyn, Miss Mary Lord and Miss Josephine Stevens.

As a grand finale of the affair came the "Twentieth Century Girl." She showed Miss Lillian Gillette, who has just returned from Europe, wearing a complete automobile outfit. Miss Gertrude Childs in driving costume, Isabel Coolidge as sailor girl, Lucile Johnson as tennis girl, Irene Bourse in horseback riding costume, Helen Cooper as bathing girl and Miss Harriet Southerland in ball costume.

Mrs. Randolph Tucker, Miss Childs and Miss Helen Fitch looked after the seating, and Mrs. E. C. Richardson of Boston for the stage properties.

Society again this afternoon attended Mrs. J. Russell Coolidge's recital. David Bispham being the artist.

Two weddings to take place next week just a week apart are being much talked about as the events approach. Miss Mitchell and Mr. Rice are to be married at the home of the former in Manchester Cove, and that of Miss Sargent and Baron Krupp of Russia, who has just arrived from Europe, will be at the Sargent Summer home in Magnolia

Pride's Crossing

Mrs. Robert S. Bradley's spacious reception rooms were thrown open yesterday afternoon for another in the series of recitals being given on Friday afternoons. Society from all along the shore flocked over to Pride's Crossing for the event

Wednesday evening Mrs. Bradley gave a delightfully informal little dinner party at her residence.

Arthur T. Stickney of St. Louis is a guest of the City Arthur Pierces at their cottage near Beverly Farms.

Henry Clay Pierce came on to the North Shore Monday in his steam yacht, the Vagabond and will remain here the rest of the season. He has since been joined by his daughter, Miss Violet Pierce, and by Roy and Theron, who have just arrived from Europe this week. Their coming will add materially to the life of the summer set along the shore, as the Pierces are lavish entertainers. Miss Pierce is a splendid whip.

Mrs. H. D. Chapin entertained a dinner party of ten at her cottage Thursday even ing

Beverly Farms

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pomeroy of Hill City, Kan., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Daniels

Mrs. E. M. Edwards has as her guest at Pump cottage Miss Ogden of New York.

John L. Thorndike had some of her [illegible] entered in the dog show of the Tedworth Kennel Club in Swampscott this week

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Orr went to Troy, N. Y., the first of the week for a week's visit.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was on a trip to Annisquam Tuesday.

Much interest is centering in the coming annual open air horse show of the Myopia Hunt Club, to be held on Labor Day. This is always the big event of the season in this section of the country, and it is sure to be so this year, for some exciting events are planned for part of the day

SCORES SURRENDER TO "WILY ARCHER"

Some Recent Engagements Arouse Lively Interest Among Society Folk.

Victims by the score are surrendering to the "wily little archer" and in court and camp engagements and rumors of engagements are the chief and choicest topics of conversation.

Among the most important of the week was that announcement made on Thursday of Miss Eleanor Baker Taft and Francis Wood Ingalls of New York.

Miss Taft is the daughter of Mrs. Lydia Baker Taft of Boston and Beverly, and a girl of rare charm and much beauty.

Mr. Woodbridge is a son of the late Major O. E. Michaelis and Mrs. Kate Woodbridge Michaelis of Cambridge. He graduated from Harvard in 98, and from Harvard Law School two years later. He is at present residing in New York. It is expected that the wedding will be an event of the early fall.

Owing to the recent marriage of one of Boston's most popular society girls, Rosamond Saltonstall, to Charles C. Auchincloss of New York, the Hub is looking for the announced engagement of Miss Elizabeth Auchincloss to Percy Hall Jennings of Park avenue, New York. Miss Auchincloss is a daughter of an heiress and is a near relative of Mr. Auchincloss. Mr. Hall and Mr. Auchincloss are both graduates of Yale and while there became fast friends.

* * *

An interesting Magnolia engagement is that of Miss Thomas Haydock, who is summering there with her parents, to H. T. Hunnewell of Cincinnati. Shortly after the announcement Mr. and Mrs. Haydock, with Miss Haydock and her fiance, left in their touring car for a short trip.

* * *

Although the Barnards have for many years resided in the South, they have many connections in and about Boston, so that the engagement of Miss Elsie Barnard to Frank M. Chisholm is of considerable interest. Miss Barnard is the daughter of James M. Barnard, of Savannah, Ga., and is spending the Summer at Hyannisport Capt. Ced, with her sister, Mrs. Benjamin Dreyer, who resides near Boston. Mr. Chisholm is the son of the late Judge Walter S. Chisholm.

LOCAL THEATRES OPEN DOORS FOR NEW SEASON

Howard and Lyceum Resume To-morrow and There Are Many Big Productions Scheduled for Bostonians to See Later.

TWO more local theatres throw open their doors this week for the Fall and Winter season. They are the Howard, which offers the best in vaudeville, and the Lyceum, which this week presents "The Dainty Paree Burlesquers," to say nothing of Frankie Bailey and her famous legal charms. There are changes at all the other theatres but one. "Her Marriage Vow" is the bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre, a series of the most popular operas at the Castle Square's last week of the opera season, "Ingomar" by the John Craig company at the Globe, and "The Man from Now," on its final week at the Tremont, with a souvenir performance to-morrow night.

Keith's presents a big vaudeville bill, and Austin & Stone's Museum has some new features, besides a fine olio. The outdoor parks and ocean trips are breaking records every day in point of attendance.

Greenroom News of Local Interest

RURAL dramas with Cape Cod for a subject seem to be springing up on every hand. "Cape Cod Folks" comes to the Boston Theatre on the 27th, and on the 23d the Village Improvement Society of Osterville is to give a special copyright performance of an original comedy drama entitled "Down on the Cape," by R. A. Barnet and R. M. Baker, of "Cadet Show" fame. It is to be given by a local cast of characters.

Lillian Lawrence leaves Boston to-night for Portland, Oregon, where she is to be the leading woman of the biggest stock house there again this season. John Sainpolis, formerly the "heavy man" at the Castle Square, is now part owner and manager of the theatre there, and he is to have a lot of Eastern talent in his company this season.

Margaret Bourne, who was seen for an all too brief engagement at the Empire last Winter, is to be Arnold Daly's leading woman this season, coming to Boston on September 10 in "Arms and the Man" at the Tremont.

John Craig, who has made a pronounced success of the stock company engagement at the Globe Theatre this Summer, expects to close a certain deal soon which will be of much interest to local admirers of himself and his clever wife, Mary Young. Mr. Craig has shown this Summer that he knows what people desire for plays, and that he can give them a wonderfully clever group of players. By the way, if you want to please Mr. Craig, just say "green corn" to him. He has raised some on his Swampscott estate that tastes more-ish.

A theatre party is to be given at the Lyceum Theatre to-morrow evening under the auspices of the Patsy Club, in honor of Clarence Wilber, the famous "Patsy Bolivar," who is with the "Dainty Paree Burlesquers."

The coming week will be the last but one of the summer engagement of the Fadettes woman's orchestra. The season that is just drawing to a close will go down in the history of the organization as their most successful and prosperous. The Fadettes will now tour the Keith circuit, going as far West as San Francisco.

Some New England school boy or girl is destined to become happy and famous as the winner of the 18 foot Toppan speed launch now on exhibition in the lobby of the Boston Theatre. The prize goes to the best essayist who after witnessing a matinee of "Cape Cod Folks" tells of the lessons to be gained from the story of the play. The competition is strictly limited to the children of New England, and their efforts will be passed upon by a carefully chosen adjudication board.

When the Old Howard opens on Monday afternoon it will look as comfortable, cosy and clean as any of the brand new theatres. It has undergone a complete renovation both inside and out. The inside is entirely white, with green and pink trimmings. The floor of the auditorium is new and covered with costly rubber rugs. The seats have been reupholstered and made very comfortable, and new scenery has been painted.

The Castle Square Theatre will be closed for the first five days of the week of August 27, preparatory to the production of "Mistress Nell" for the opening of the stock company on Saturday evening, September 1.

What Is Going On.

There is plenty of variety in this week's offerings at local theatres. Here are some facts about the plays:

Keith's Theatre

Murray Carson, the English actor-author, is the principal attraction for Keith's this week. He is best known in America as the author of "Rosemary," in which John Drew and Maude Adams were starred. This will be his initial appearance before a Boston audience in his latest romantic play, entitled "The Point of the Sword," supported by Miss Esme Berringer, one of the most expert swordswomen in Europe.

In the surrounding show will be the Four Melvins, acrobats and equilibrists; Hoey and Lee, Hebrew comedians and parody singers; the Ellis-Nowlin trio of acrobatic eccentriques; Murray K. Hill, monologue and singing comedian; Young and DeVoie, in "Dancing by Book"; Murphy and Andrews, comedians and parody singers; Cunningham and Smith, in the comedy sketch, "The Shoplifters," and the Hurleys, acrobats and equilibrists. The coming week will be the last but one of the Summer engagement of the Fadettes, and the kinetograph will exhibit an entire new list of pictures.

Boston Theatre

In constructing the new play, "Cape Cod Folks," which will be seen for the first time on any stage at the Boston Theatre a week from to-morrow night. The authors have gone far afield for novel situations, and one of the most important is, to all intents and purposes, the famous story of Grace Darling. Mary Hungerford, the pretty Boston school teacher, puts out in the teeth of a fierce storm on the Cape, and battles her way in a small dory to the wreck of the schooner in which her lover had sailed away in a moment of anger. The scene shows the girl in the flashing rays of the lighthouse, beating toward the crushed schooner. Also is seen the actual rescue itself. Throughout the play runs the true atmosphere of the Cape, and the quaint characters make it unique in this class of drama.

With a view to exciting the imagination of the young in relation to Cape Cod and its people, Manager McCarty offers as a prize to the school boy or girl who, after witnessing a matinee performance of the play, shall write the best essay on the lessons contained therein, a $1,000 Toppan speed launch of the latest pattern. It is eighteen feet long, has a canopy top, quartered oak finish and brass railings, with leather seats and all other essentials for convenience and comfort. It will carry ten persons. The launch will be on exhibition in the lobby of the Boston Theatre next week. The prize will be awarded at the last matinee performance of "Cape Cod Folks" on Saturday, Sept. 15.

Globe Theatre

"Ingomar," the bill at the Globe Theatre this week, is a play with an interesting history. It has long been in a select class because of its strongly drawn and strikingly contrasted characters, its literary charm, its ingenious and telling situations and, above all, for its beautiful demonstration of the potency of pure womanliness and the efficacy of true love to conquer and transform the heart of a barbarian. Mr. Craig will play the title role, and Mary Young, who will be welcomed back, Parthenia. This gifted actress makes a most picturesque and dainty Grecian maiden. Other characters will be as follows: Polydor, William Humphrey; Myron, William H. Evarts; Alastor, Thomas MacLarnie; Timarch of Massilia, John J. Beck; Theano, Mary Sanders; Actea, Mabel Concord.

Castle Square Theatre

But one more week, and the summer opera company season at the Castle Square comes to an end. A repertory of the most popular operas selected from the list of those already presented has been arranged. On Monday and Tuesday evenings a double bill, consisting of "Pinafore" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," will be given; at the Wednesday matinee and on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, "Il Trovatore," and for the remainder of the week "The Bohemian Girl." The cast will in each case be headed by Clara Lane and J. K. Murray, with Otis B. Thayer, W. H. Clarke, Harry Davies, Harry Luckstone, Mary Carrington and Hattie Belle Ladd in the other leading roles.

Tremont Theatre

This is the thirteenth and last week of "The Man from Now" at the Tremont Theatre, and it will be made notable to-morrow night by the presentation to ladies in the audience of sterling silver souvenirs to commemorate the 100th performance of Blangs, Bryan and Klein's merry and tuneful musical comedy. No work of the kind has had greater success during a summer season at this theatre. This success is attributable to many agreeable factors—the quaint personality, unique methods and irresistible fun-making of Harry Bulger, the amusing oddity of the story, the abundance of comical incidents, the catchiness of the music, the clever work of the principals, the beauty and vocal ability of the big chorus, and the brilliancy of the mise-en-scene.

Grand Opera House

"The Burglar's Daughter," by Owen Davis, under the management of the Vance and Sullivan company, will be this week's attraction at the Grand Opera House. This is a play of real feeling and although very melodramatic, it tells a simple and straightforward story of power and novelty. The mechanical effects, especially the panoramic view of New York Harbor from the deck of a yacht, and the thrilling race of the trolley car across the suspension bridge, also the rescue of the blind girl by Meg, are sensational and intensely interesting. "The Burglar's Daughter" appeals especially to women, who feel deep sympathy for the heroine, Meg. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Majestic Theatre

Majestic Theatre, with its Shubert bookings, will open on Saturday night, September 1, with the light comedy creation, "Julie Bon Bon." Clara Lipman, who first attracted attention as the "laughing girl," has become a full fledged success as the author of "Julie Bon Bon." It is her maiden effort at play writing, but achieved such instant recognition last season that it ran for over six months with Miss Lipman in the title role, and her husband, Louis Mann, in the leading comedy role, which was written specially to fit his comedy characteristics, and is the greatest role he has ever played. He portrays a bibulous and impecunious Frenchman.

Orpheum Theatre

In the reconstruction of the Orpheum (formerly Empire) Theatre, Manager Williams has had in mind the introduction of the box system which has proved so popular in the five theatres he controls in New York city. The new mezzanine floor between the orchestra and the first balcony will be devoted to boxes, separated from each other by light screen like effects and furnished with comfortable movable chairs. Behind these boxes there will be an extensive promenade. The theatres controlled by Manager Williams in New York have always been considered models in the vaudeville world, and it is designed to make the Orpheum equal in every way to the New York houses. Some artistic stage settings are in readiness, and the engagements for the coming season include the most prominent artists of recent years in Europe and the best talent of the American vaudeville stage. The policy of "bargain matinees" will prevail.

Columbia Theatre

"Bigger and better shows and younger and prettier girls" will be Manager Harry N. Farren's policy at the Columbia the coming season. The companies comprising the Empire circuit have all been strengthened by the addition of comedians who have won fame in the big musical shows, while many of the chorus girls who have graced the burlesque stage in former years have been given the "book" and their places will be filled by the prettiest and daintiest girls on the American stage. The opening show at the Columbia, Monday, August 27, is the popular "Miss New York, Jr." company, headed by Miss Mae Yule and Charles Burkhardt, the fellow with "the funny slide."

Howard Theatre

With great gusto and a wonderful bill of straight vaudeville, the Old Howard opens on Monday. From 1 until 11 p. m. on every day for the balance of the season the shows will be in full swing. The opening bill has several favorites. Brockman, Mack Company are headliners, for the first time in a Howard show, in a merry farcical eccentricity. Tyce and Jermon, the Real Irish Girl and the singing comedienne, are under number two. Then come William A. Inman and company in a skit called "Recognition"; Johnnie Johns, black faced comedy merchant; the three Beltons, an acrobatic and gymnastic act; Charles and Fannie Van; McCrea and Poole; the Arlington Four, Hawkins the Great Beaudoin wonder of the wire; Williams and Bullman; the Videttes, Will and May Reno, in "The Yap from Oneyville"; Nichols, the mimic, and the Howardscope moving pictures.

Bowdoin Square

"Her Marriage Vow," a sensational comedy drama, will be presented by the Lothrop players at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. This is the first time the drama has been offered at popular prices anywhere. Some of the scenes are laid about Boston. It is the woman's work in tracing her faithless husband that creates the interest in the play. One of the scenes is a sensational attempt to wreck a fast express. The cast is headed by Charles Miller as Ned Benton, a telegraph operator. Gertrude Bisley will be seen as Kate Walters, the wronged woman.

Palace Theatre

Although the Summer season is almost at an end the stock company at the Palace Theatre is more popular than ever and since the cooler weather set in there has been a big increase in the attendance. For this week the burlesques are "The Whole Dam Family" and "All a Mistake." In the olio will be Sitek and Laudau, acrobatic cycling act; Annie Carter, contralto, "Tom" King, in his great juggling act; Al H. Burton, singing and talking specialty, and Emma Krause and Lillian Beach and their pickaninnies in a new and pleasing act.

Lyceum Theatre

The fifteenth Fall and Winter season begins to-morrow afternoon with "The Dainty Paree Burlesquers," a mirth-provoker that is equal to the modest promise made in its behalf, to wit: that it is not an attempt to elevate the stage, but an effort to drive away "the blues." The olio includes Clarence Wilbur, Frankie Bailey, late of Weber & Fields, Crawford and Manning, Ace Butler, Rice and Walters, Harry LaMo and sixteen show girls.

"Prince of Pilsen" Coming

"A week from to-morrow night "The Prince of Pilsen" will return to its own again, and begin a fortnight's engagement at the Tremont, where it scored its first triumph and was started on a career that has made its melodies, its comedy and its lyrics popular wherever the English language is spoken. Jess Dandy, the chorus contingent, and all the familiar "Pilsen" melodies will be at their best and a complete equipment of new costumes and scenery will be shown for the first time. Seats go on sale to-morrow.

Out-door Amusement

All the Summer parks and steamer lines are packed with seekers after health and pleasure this month. There is left but a few weeks more in which to enjoy their attractions.

Wonderland

A remarkably well-balanced programme of free attractions is offered at Wonderland this week. For those who like perilous feats of daring, James E. Hardy, who crossed Niagara on a tight rope, has been retained. Darling's educated ponies will appear in the arena every afternoon and evening, and the Salem Cadet Band concerts will include special programmes. In all other parts of the great enclosure free music, free pageants, free bits of this entertainment and of that furnish constant entertainment. Wonderland's garage, with responsible attendants, is now free to all, and the increase of automobile parties is very noticeable. Mr. A. Shuman brought Sir Henry Edmund Knight, formerly Lord Mayor of London, down, and Sir Henry said that of all the summer amusement resorts he has visited in different countries Wonderland impressed him as the most beautiful. He was especially enthusiastic over the illumination.

Paragon Park

As the season draws to a close business at Greater Paragon Park, Nantasket Beach, increases. Every Sunday is bigger than the previous ones. This week the free open air circus contains Miss Sadie Knowlton, the champion woman cyclist, who gives "The Dash of Death." On a bicycle she rides down a narrow incline from 100 feet in the air and plunges into the lagoon. The other big act is Will Hill, the original high wire walker. In the Bostock Animal Arena there are Sig. Renaldo, the lion tamer, Julnita Davala, the "Leopard Queen," and Mlle. Morelli with her bears, hyenas, pumas and dogs. "Teddy," the almost human chimpanzee, is holding receptions every day. He has learned several new tricks and dons to-morrow his tailor-made dress suit. From Hades to Paradise by Airship, Lovers' Lane, Pike's Peak, Foolish House, Circle Swing, Figure 8 Roller Coaster, Johnstown Flood and 'Frisco Disaster are breaking records daily.

Norumbega Park

Trolley tripping was never in greater favor than it is this Summer to Norumbega Park. In the covered open-air theatre the coming week Matt Ott's successful musical comedy, "What Wright Left," will be seen every afternoon and evening. It is a concoction of original music, interpolated popular song numbers, clever comedians, pretty girls, fascinating dances, brilliant singers, tasteful costuming and scenery arranged specially for outdoor performances and patterned after the legitimate farce.

Trolley Trips

Now is the time to take some of the long country rides on the breeze-swept trolley, through the beautiful inland reaches or the fragrant sea coast of the North and South Shores. Along the rocky, bluff skirted North Shore to Gloucester and around the Cape via Rockport and Pigeon Cove, the car follows the sea nearly the whole way, while to historic old Plymouth, the trip is through the fragrant meadows and placid lake country of southern Massachusetts. Folders descriptive of these and a hundred other trips may be had free at the Passenger Department of the Boston & Northern and Old Colony Street Railway Company, No. 309 Washington street.

Ocean Trips

All of the attractions of a trip abroad are provided at little expense by the Plant line ocean trips to the Maritime Provinces. It requires but one night at sea to reach a foreign land. For complete information call at the city ticket office of the Plant line, No. 298 Washington street, or write A. W. Perry, general manager, Commercial wharf.

For real pleasure one should go on the North Shore route between Boston and the quaint fishing city of Gloucester in the fine steel, thoroughly equipped steamers of the Gloucester line, which leave week days at 10 a. m. and Sundays at 10.15 a. m., from the north side of Central Wharf.

Beach plums are now ripe on Cape Cod. Provincetown, where they are much enjoyed, is reached by steamer Cape Cod, which makes daily trips, leaving Bay Line Wharf, No. 400 Atlantic avenue, at 9 a. m. (Sunday at 9.30.)

Every outgoing steamer of the Dominion Atlantic Railway Line is carrying full lists of tourists bound for delightful Nova Scotia and the Provinces. The steamers Prince George and Boston leave Long Wharf, foot of State street, daily (except Saturday) at 2 p. m. The company city office is No. 228 Washington street.

Haddock and cod fishing from the decks of the fishing steamer King Philip, which leaves Commercial Wharf daily and Sunday at 10 o'clock, is a novel and very economical form of entertainment these trying days. Lines, bait and chowder are free.

For the remainder of the Summer season there is hardly a day on which some society or organization is not scheduled for an outing at Bass Point, Nahant, leaving Boston on the steamers of the Nahant line, sailing from Lincoln wharf, foot of Battery street.

No trip out of Boston presents as many pleasurable novelties as the combination rail and boat trip to Bass Point. Trains connect with the steamers of the Lynn Steamboat Company for Bass Point. The trip only takes fifty minutes and costs but twenty cents.

Stage Notes

Habitues of gymnasiums and athletes in general will want to make note of the engagement of the four Melvins at Keith's the coming six days. They are hand acrobats, who rank with the foremost in their line in the country and have been scoring a hit in the Keith theatres of the West.

On Thursday afternoon at the Globe Theatre there will be a professional matinee. Many actors and actresses are in town just now and they will accept Manager Craig's invitation to be present.

The New England Photographers' Association has selected Paragon Park as the scene of their annual excursion next Wednesday, August 22. Paragon Park will close at the end of Labor Day, September 3. This leaves practically but two weeks more in which to enjoy its amusements.

Emma Krause and Lillian Beach and their pickaninnies will be among the features at the Palace Theatre this week. Both are great favorites.

On the opening night of "Cape Cod Folks" at the Boston Theatre a week from to-morrow, the management of the playhouse and the production will have as their guests the selectmen of the various towns on the Cape.

Whirl and Whirl is the newest sensation at Wonderland, and was opened to the public for the first time during the past week. From the top of the steel pole about which the patrons are whirled in comfortable cars, a splendid view of Wonderland may be had, and Lynn looms up in plain view at the north. At night the illumination of the pole, surmounted by a ball of electric lights, may be seen from a great distance.

Howell Hansel has been spending a great part of the Summer on his yacht Yankiana. He will return as leading man of the Castle Square stock company next week.

"The Lion and the Mouse" will not be played in any New England city until after the conclusion of the engagement at the Park Theatre.

An interesting event is announced by Manager Magee of the Grand Opera House. He has secured for next week the new historical melodrama by Hal Reid, entitled "[...] Last Fight," with its [...] bloodhounds, bobcats, horses, dogs and wolves.

Bessie Barriscale, the Lovey Mary of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," returns to the Boston Theatre next week with "Cape Cod Folks."

Estelle M. Churchill, manipulator of "drums and things" with the Fadettes woman's orchestra at Keith's, is a native of Lawrence, Mass. Miss Churchill is a pupil of John Flockton and has been a Fadette for ten years. She is the young lady whose peculiar vocal numbers always bring big encores.

In next week's play at the Globe Theatre, "Mistakes Will Happen," Mary Young will be seen in a cleverly drawn role of a Dutch slavey. It is one of the best characterizations that she ever has done.

George Backus, the new Professor Forcast, in "The Man from Now" at the Tremont, "makes up," it is hinted, from the portrait of a prominent New York editor of German descent.

This has been the week of excursions to Wonderland, there being on an average ten big excursion parties to the Mystic City by the Sea daily.

Two performances a day, afternoon and evening, will be given regularly at the Castle Square during the coming dramatic stock company season. Patrons may, as heretofore, subscribe for regular seats each week. The new season begins on Sept. 1.

Lover's Lane at Paragon Park is getting a great reputation as the scene of several romantic marriages. Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Broome of Woodfords, Me., who had been married in Lover's Lane the week before, held a reception in "Ye little church of the valley." Another couple was married there the past week and will hold receptions at Lover's Lane to-day. The management has given $100 to defray their honeymoon expenses. They will "receive" as Mr. and Mrs. Leon F. Chase of Bridgeton, Me. The bride was Miss Sarah Greene of that town.

Wright Lorimer will have abundant opportunity to display his versatility during his engagement at the Colonial Theatre, for, in addition to "The Shepherd King," he will give a few special matinees of Ibsen's "The Wild Duck." Mr. Lorimer has never appeared in a work of Ibsen upon the Boston stage.

The cast of "Cape Cod Folks" includes Earle Brown, Charles Mackay, E. J. Ratcliffe, T. A. Wimery, George Richards, John O'Hara, William Barrows, Samuel Colt, Harry Montgomery, A. W. Williams, W. H. St. James, Sarah Perry, Bessie Barriscale, Mrs. Fannie Addison Pitt, Carolyn Lee, Anna Wheaton, Gordon Morrison, Beryl Putnam and Alma Morrison.

Harry Bulger and "The Man from Now" will go from the Tremont to the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York for a run. Their engagement here began on Memorial Day, and next Saturday night will have extended over eighteen weeks.

FERARI'S "HAPPY FAMILY" AT WONDERLAND IS MARVEL OF VISITORS

TRAINED LIONS, BEARS, JAGUARS, LEOPARDS PERFORM IN ONE CAGE

Courage and Patience Has Resulted in Subjecting Wild Beast Nature.

QUEER AGGREGATION GET ON WELL TOGETHER

More Fierce Denizens of Jungle On Way to Be Added to Unique Combination.

The most remarkable assemblage of wild and savage animals ever exhibited in one cage is the great feature of Joseph G Ferari's Trained Wild Animal Exposition at Wonderland. Ten fierce denizens of the sandy desert, the dense jungle, the dark and gloomy tropical forest and the lofty crags of the stately mountains now romp and fraternize behind the bars daily at Ferari's wild animal show. Within a week or two five other kinds of different kinds are to be added to the collection

Readers of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN this week are given an opportunity to see not only Wonderland without cost, but in addition printed tickets entitling their bearers to one glorious ride down the loftiest "Shoot the Chutes" in the world and a free admission to Ferari's wonderful collection of trained wild animals.

Wild animals are always interesting. Something uncanny, irresistibly attractive and compelling lingers around a cage of untrained, savage denizens of far-away climes. The suggestions of caged ferocity, enforced peacefulness, restrained plot are so strong that wild animal shows never grow old, never cease to interest.

Savage Beasts Trained.

Then when these caged, snarling, restless brutes are brought under the dominion of men and are made to perform, to go through dances, to mimic human beings, the strange attraction they have for everyone is tenfold increased.

"I am going to attempt and succeed in a thing never before thought possible" declared Joseph G. Ferari to a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN "When the readers of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN visit this exposition of trained wild animals to-morrow or Tuesday on their free tickets, I will show them grouped together in one cage and actually performing, ten animals whose natures are so fierce and opposite that animal trainers have always declared that they could never be worked together, let alone dwell in peace.

"This week I put in one cage my magnificent black-maned Nubian lion, Sultan; the splendid African leopard, Harry; the huge black bear, Jack; my strange honey bear, Trilby; two great Russian boarhounds, Sport and Queen; two savage South American pumas, Dick and Tommy; my splendid panther, Minnie, and the fierce jaguar, Spot.

"They are my 'happy family.' Never before has such a combination been shown in one cage. And stranger than that, never has anything like that combination been made to perform and to do stunts for the public. The "Happy Family' of Wonderland has been trained long and carefully, and now we are perfectly free to open our doors to the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN without fear of any hitch or untoward accident. The animals are all familiar with each other, and they are actually beginning to show strange fondnesses for one another that we never dreamed of

Will Soon Have Five More.

"Within a few days I propose to add five more animals to this assorted group of performers, making the collection the unparalleled attraction among all performing wild animal shows. I will introduce into my happy family three black-maned Nubian lions that I have in my own show, and I am importing from India two royal Bengal tigers just for this collection

"When they arrive and are introduced to the public with the ten animals I am now working together, I will have something altogether unique in the history of animal training. It can be done. With my manager, H. L. Dobyns, who has had more than seventeen years' experience in this business, and with the Princess Irene, the best woman wild animal trainer ever I saw, I know that I can make that huge collection of the cat tribe of the forest and my two great Russian boarhounds perform feats the like of which has never been seen before."

Weird to the sight, indeed, as the great cats spring noisily to their places in the wild cage when the Princess Irene, known off the stage as Irene Horner, calmly steps in among them, her head in a clear calm voice issues her mild orders. Sometimes there is a snarl, a dab at the bold woman with a huge claw-armed paw, but obedience always has in the end, for she must be obeyed, or her day as an animal trainer would be over

At present the animals are learning the rudiments of their education. Though Miss Horner has been training them but a few weeks she has already taught each animal perfect freedom and ease in their strange companionship. They have been taught a sort of community of interest feeling. They are made to feel that they are in one class in school and must mind and learn their lessons

Feline Instinct Independent.

"After that's done," she said, "the rest is easy. Those big cats don't like to mind one bit more than does the 'tabby' at home. You know cats want to do things in their own time and way. It's the feline instinct not to take orders.

"Oh, of course, I've had my battles. I bear the marks of more than a dozen rather close calls with lions, tigers, leopards, jaguars and panthers. But that all goes with the life. I have followed the circus for years. Once I was a rider and used to try my hand at subduing horses. I love horses, but I love those great fierce cats more; that's why I am a wild animal trainer to-day.

"It took some time to get all these animals accustomed to each other We had to introduce them to each other a few at a time and in carefully adjudged combinations. Of all the animals I deal with I watch the lions the closest. They will bear watching. A tiger is a fighter—the worst fighter there is among all of the cat tribe, but for cunning and sneakiness the lion is the worst. A tiger is bolder No, none of the cats can be trusted, but they are widely different

"A leopard is moody; you can tell when you are going to have trouble with him A tiger is easily 'riled,' but a lion is a coward and a sneak. I have been in more than a dozen fights and have had work to come out of some of them alive, but the worst wounds have been from dabs that lions have given me with their nasty paws when I was a trifle off guard."

Has Splendid Collection.

Ferari has a splendid collection of wild animals The bringing together of several widely different representatives of the strange wild animals of the forests and jungles has been his aim, and in this he has signally succeeded. There are four great black-maned Nubian lions splendid fellows—each one of them a king, indeed. The Nubian is the type, the highest type of the lion species

There are two splendid specimens of Catherian lions which are kept carefully apart in another of his lion cases, for some kinds of lions do not fraternize as well as they do with animals not of their own natures at all. There is the fiercest of all bears, the huge grizzly of the Rocky Mountains. In other cages are four black bears, a Thibet bear, a honey bear, a sloth and a Russian cinnamon bear.

Others of the cat tribe are pumas, cougars, panthers and jaguars. There are monkeys galore—Reese monkeys from far away East India, ring-tailed monkeys, Mexican monkeys and queer Nubian monkeys.

It is little wonder that the Ferari collection of wild animals is perfection itself in its strange lines, for Joseph G. Ferari's great grandfather started in this business seventy-five years ago, and ever since a Ferari has delighted the children and amazed their parents with great collections of performing wild animals. The first Ferari started in the business in England.

But having "done" Ferari's wild animals and seen them do their tricks and repeat their lessons, every BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN visitor to Wonderland to-morrow or Tuesday, for the free tickets are only good on these two days, will want to "Shoot the Chutes."

Boston Likes the "Chutes."

"I never saw people like the Boston people are for 'shooting the chutes,'" said Walter E. Howard, the manager of that unique attraction in Wonderland, to a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. "I've been in many places where they have these chutes, but the Boston crowds are the best to handle I ever saw.

"Why, in St. Louis, where this great structure down which the people shoot in the boats into the waters of the lagoon used to stand, the people would actually shiver, look at the boats in which the braver had taken the absolutely safe ride, look all around, hesitate and then, almost shutting their eyes, pay the price to be hauled up to the top of the incline, make the dash holding their breath, half of them with their eyes shut, and walk away vowing that as long as they lived they'd never do that again.

"But give me the Boston crowds for downright pluck. No wonder the Yankees are noted for their dash and bravery. Here in Boston your people come, look the thing over and see that others do the chute in safety. Then they march right up to the ticket seller, buy their tickets, take their places in the boats and go in for the fun

"Once a Boston crowd of young, or old folks for that matter, makes a trip on the chute, they are sure to come again and again and try it all over. They love the dash, the sensation, the whirl, the innocent and wild plunge into the water, and they're sensible—they're not a bit afraid.

800,000 Patrons a Week.

"Why, we are carrying 800,000 people a week to the top of that tower now right along, and we have never had an accident. We're not going to have any accidents either. All that one has to do is to sit in his seat quietly and the boat will do the rest."

That great chute at Wonderland is 178 feet high. From the top the best and most entrancingly beautiful view of all Wonderland is to be obtained. From the tiptop of the tower down to the water, where the boats strike, it is 218 feet. The inclined plane down which you fly is set at an angle of 60 degrees—just the angle that the soldier is ordered to look at the ground as he marches along in dress parade.

So far this year Manager Howard says that 1,500,000 people have shot the chutes at Wonderland, and still they come, an army of 800,000 a week There is nothing like it in all Wonderland. It is the biggest, the swiftest, the safest, the most dashing, the most fascinating and altogether the most wonderful "Shoot the Chutes" in the world. In seeing the sights of Wonderland of all things the "Shoot the Chutes" is the crowning sensation.

HOW IT FEELS TO SHOOT THE CHUTES THE FIRST TIME, TOLD BY PASSENGER

Wonderland's Most Thrilling Experience Described by Man Who Will Try It Again.

The way it feels to ride the "Shoot the-Chutes" at Wonderland for the first time was described yesterday to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter by a man who had made the trip for the first time

"Will I do it again? I don't know but I feel in my heart that I will.

"Never in my life and I experienced such sensations before. I have taken perilous trips on steam big and little, both and single sticks. I have ridden bolting horses and I have sat behind the firemen on plunging, swaying, leaping locomotives. But never in my whole life did I ever have anything to compare with that wild whirl down the chutes here at Wonderland

Felt Completely Helpless.

What was my first sensation? as the big toggan in the chute picked the boat in which I had foolishly taken passage to 'Shoot the Chutes?' Well, it was helplessness pure and simple. There was no other emotion

"As I sat in the car when it turned forward by a few short jerks and dragged along by that long iron chain I felt that I would give a whole lot to be on the bridge under which we were disappearing and starting up the incline. Oh, that incline!

"A roar, a dash, a whirl, a mad onward crash like a cyclone. It was a boat load passing to I turned around and saw how little thing disappear under the bridge across the lagoon, saw the water boil in its wake and the great mountain of spray and foam it threw up in front of it, and I had to myself for ever coming on this wild journey.

On the Edge of the Chute.

"We faced the chute' Far below was beautiful Wonderland and beyond the green blue, dimpling, laughing sea. But what were their attractions for me at that moment! You can talk of admiring all the things from that tower up there once or I will some day; but yet, however it may seem to others, there were moments, and that moment, several moments, seconds, waves a year, we hit the water. The water flew our car lurched, we glided, bumped, leaped over the big waves and then slid along to the landing and I jumped out breathless and thankful that I was alive. And down in my heart I knew, I knew, that sometime again I would take that rush and whirl, for there is nothing else like it in the world

HOPES OF YOUTH AND LOVE AS ILLUSTRATED IN SONG

"Look for Me When the Lilacs Bloom" Touches This Old Theme in New Light.

It is a beautiful thing, when youthful hopes are realized. Yet even when they are blighted in a good cause, even those hopes are not wasted and precious and not forever to be mourned.

Both of these famous facts have been told over and over again in popular songs. Filled with pride and hope the sweetheart or young bride sends her dear one off to fight for his country. She is brave at their parting She is prouder of him than ever before In women's eyes to fight, to risk his life to vanquish his country's enemy, is the manliest of tasks

"The arts of peace are dear to her only because they keep him by her side, really she has a secret attempt for them. If a man goes through life performing no deed of valor, why should he not have been born a woman? But when he goes forth to fight, all her being thrills with the delight of feeling that he is her opposite, and, therefore, one to be madly loved

Hope Still Bears Her Up.

Hope bears her up, for she is young There are the statistics showing that disastrous wars do not exact more than ten per cent. of dead heroes. There is a magic of 90 per cent that her hero will come home safe, and never again will she feel that torpidity about her heart which the cinema, spectacle of an ease loving, will breed male being at her fireside engenders in spite of herself

"Oh, he'll be home to her after in her eyes an idealized being The thought thrills her as it does her fifty part almost over fifty. It is only "Ah yeah," "and welder when" not good love

When he returns covered with glory that is one type of song on this general theme. When he comes home, white and silent, with his country's flag for a shroud — that is the second type, perhaps even more effective for song purposes than the first. The latter type is illustrated today in this newspaper by the song, "Look for Me When the Lilacs Bloom." That is their hopeful, almost merry parting

Right Idea for Title.

It is the right idea for the title, though he comes home in his shroud. For the song in either case should begin cheerfully and hopefully to assure the effect of the sweetly sad climax

Perhaps ere long, the great multitude of song lovers in this country will develop their poetic and musical intelligence to a point where they will demand a higher class of songs than these, whose extreme impedimenta bars them from serious analysis, but the theme here outlined will always remain worthy.

Poultney Bigelow Investigates Panama Canal Again

The eye of the whole maritime world is centred on the digging of the Panama Canal by the United States Government.

But the mouth of the whole civilized world is widening into a loud guffaw and sneer at the incompetence of the men who are handling the monentous contract.

Poultney Bigelow, who has spent many years in the study of colored races and labor problems in tropical countries, in 1905 went down to the scene of the digging of the Panama Canal to investigate conditions. The results of his investigations were published in a magazine in January of this year, denouncing the inefficiency of the men who are handling the work.

His article came to the attention of the Federal Government, which, through the President, issued a statement which contradicted Mr. Bigelow's, claiming that he had made but a superficial examination of the ground.

The Cosmopolitan, therefore, sent Mr. Bigelow back to the scene of the Panama Canal, and in the September issue is an article which is a scathing denunciation of the horrors accompanying the work of the digging of the canal.

In 1879 De Lesseps, the great French engineer, started to dig across the Isthmus of Panama. Ten years later the organization went into bankruptcy, and the French Government sentenced to varying terms of penal servitude many a noted financier and politician for political jobbery, bribery and other heinous crimes in the eyes of good government.

It is to be inferred that, since inefficiency and political jobbery are accompanying this country's attempt to dig the canal, the same results will follow—imprisonment, penal servitude, for those who are guilty.

You, every man and woman in this country, who are taxpayers, ought to take an active, vital interest in this canal. It means commercial supremacy to this country—a commercial supremacy which no other nation, even in the remotest degree, can approach. It means joining the two great oceans—the Atlantic and Pacific—and it means, when it is successfully completed, what you are seeking for—commercial prosperity.

But do you want to fail as De Lesseps failed—do you want this nation the laughing stock of the world? Or——

Do you want to have it said that the work was finished honestly, quickly, and efficiently, and with as little of the attendant horrors of death and disease among those working in a swampy tropical country, as possible? Little or no effort is made yet toward draining the land, whereon the workmen are COMPELLED by the government to live, of the reeking, filthy swamps that exude the most terrible of diseases—tropical fevers.

If you are a MAN, and a real citizen, you will read Poultney Bigelow's article, "PANAMA—THE HUMAN SIDE," in the September Cosmopolitan, and then act as befits a citizen.

SANTIAGO AND VALPARAISO RAZED BY EARTHQUAKE---5,000 DEAD

DROWNED IN 3 FEET OF WATER BEFORE AID COMES.

Teamster Pinned Under Heavy Wagon Which Falls Off Wharf.

DEAD BEFORE RESCUERS COULD EXTRICATE HIM

Load of Lumber and Wagon Piled on Victim as He Lay in Water.

Pinned down under three feet of water by a ton of lumber and a heavy team which he was driving, Mathew L. Barrows, 42 years old, of No. 163 Pleasant street, Lynn, a teamster in the employ of Sprague & Breed, coal and lumber dealers of that city, was drowned in the sight of at least ten persons before help could reach him. The accident was the strangest that has ever taken place in that city.

Barrows was driving a heavy single horse team loaded with lumber down to the company's wharf on Sea street and in attempting to reach the outer edge of the wharf one of the forward wheels slipped over the side and precipitated driver, team and lumber down fifteen feet into the three feet of water. The wagon overturned in its descent and when it reached the water the entire weight of the load and cart pinned the driver under the surface. Dennis [illegible], another employe of Sprague & Breed, and John McR[illegible] of No. [illegible] street witnessed the accident and at once lowered themselves down the side of the wharf into the water and began to remove the lumber from the unfortunate man.

After about five minutes of strenuous work they succeeded in getting him to the surface and at once called an ambulance in which he was taken to the Lynn hospital. He was dead when the ambulance arrived at the hospital. The doctors pronounced death due to drowning.

Barrows leaves a widow and three small children, the oldest of whom is seven years. He has been in the employment of Sprague & Breed for a number of years.

BYERLY AN OFFICIAL IN BOND COMPANY

Proceeds of Two-Cent Stamp Venture, Like His Own, Started Concern.

New York, Aug. 18.—Wall street was not surprised to learn to-day that Samuel Byerly has been elected vice president of the Abraham White Bond Company of No. 100 Broadway.

Byerly is the Adams Express Company clerk who with a capital of a two-cent stamp bid for and secured $5,000,000 of the Panama Canal bonds recently issued by the government. With a portion of his profits he is now touring Europe with his wife.

Eleven years ago Abraham White, backed by no more capital than Byerly, boasted bid successfully for $7,000,000 of government bonds of the 1904 issue. He drove a better bargain, however, in turning them over to brokers, and his profit was said to have been $125,000.

COLLINS' BABY NEAR DEATH FROM AUTO

Newport Society Leader's Child Is Almost Run Down.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 18.—Mrs. Nathalie Schenck Collins' baby narrowly escaped death by being run over by a fast moving automobile on the corner of Bellevue avenue and Perry streets. The nurse is said to have left the child and it crept into the street. It was a hairbreadth escape.

The nurse tried to keep the story from Mrs. Collins, and would have succeeded only for a policeman, who told Mrs. Collins how lucky the baby was to be alive. Mrs. Collins will now have two nurses to watch the baby and perhaps a third to watch them.

WHISKERS FOR LABOR DAY; SHOPS TO CLOSE

Providence, R. I., Aug. 18.—Men must shave themselves on Labor Day or wear at least a two days' growth of beard, for the union and the Labor Day officials have their way not a shop in the city will be open even for the customary few hours in the morning.

To avoid the unpleasant conditions in the barber trade resulting from the action of some of the employers in keeping their shops open and compelling their help to work on Labor Day a year ago, Chief Marshal George A. Brady to-day issued an open letter to the Master Barbers requesting them to close all day.

WON HER HUSBAND BY PUBLICITY

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 18.—"Were it not for the newspaper prominence given us, it is probable that Jerry Ellis would have waited a respectable length of time after being divorced from his first wife before marrying me."

With this statement, Mrs. Jerry Ellis, formerly Miss Ida Platz, rushed into a local newspaper office and demanded a retraction of statements made concerning her alleged visits to South Bend in company with Ellis, many months before their marriage.

WOMAN DIVES INTO RIVER AND SAVES DROWNING MAN

Boston Swimmer at Maine Resort Snatched From Death by Mrs. Rachel Harris of Chelsea.

Brunswick, Me., Aug. 18.—Diving into the swiftly flowing waters of the Androscoggin river to-day Mrs. Rachel Harris of Chelsea, Mass., caught J. Hervitz of Boston as he was going down for the third time.

Hervitz is a member of the summer colony at Cooks Corner. This afternoon he went in swimming and swam farther than his strength would allow. He became exhausted when a long distance from the shore.

Mrs. Harris, her husband, Solomon Harris, and Samuel Feinberg, also of Chelsea, and members of the summer colony, were rowing near by when Hervitz shouted for help, threw up his hands and sank. He came to the surface twice before Mrs. Harris and her companions reached him.

Without stopping to consider the risk to herself Mrs. Harris dove from the boat and caught Hervitz by clutching him by the hair. As they came to the surface both were pulled into the boat. Hervitz was unconscious and when the boat reached the shore it was thought that he was dead.

Dr. Antoinette Kokow, the Boston specialist, was called. At first she said that the case was hopeless, but after an hour's work succeeded in restoring Hervitz to consciousness.

It was another hour before Hervitz was considered out of danger.

Mrs. Harris is the heroine of the colony tonight. But for her prompt action there is no doubt but Hervitz would have drowned.

SKULL FRACTURED BY BLOW WITH BEER BOTTLE.

Pounded on the head with a beer bottle, while walking through Acton street near Washington last night, Bert Green, colored, aged thirty-two, of East Lenox street, was taken to City Hospital with a fractured skull. The doctors say there is little hope for his recovery.

Green was with a man named John Williams at the time. Williams says they were talking when suddenly he heard the blow, followed by a low groan from Green, who dropped to the sidewalk.

Mystery surrounds the attack. Green was a stranger to the neighborhood. Williams said that Green's hat was on when he fell, which made it appear that the bottle did not come from any height, but must have been hurled on a straight line.

FIND MUSICIAN ON TRACKS; MYSTERY IN HIS FALL.

Mystery surrounds the finding of David W. Fudge, a well known Cambridge musician, on the tracks of the Boston & Maine Railroad under the Prison Point drawbridge late last night. Mr. Fudge was unconscious.

At the Relief Hospital it was found that he had sustained concussion of the brain. His condition is critical.

Railroad employes discovered him while they were making a tour about the yards. How he came to be in such a position the police have been unable to ascertain. It is thought that he may have been walking across the bridge, been seized with a dizzy fit and fell to the tracks below. He had apparently not been struck by a train.

The two men were being arrested, one charged with drunkenness [illegible] with assault, when the crowd surrounded the officers and made threats of taking the prisoners away from them. Kerrey and Sheehan, however, kept a tight hold of the prisoners and after hard work managed to get them to the box. With drawn clubs the officers kept the crowd in check until the arrival of the patrol wagon when the men were taken to the station.

Chili's Seaport and Capital in Ruins From Seismic Disturbances That Shake Western Coast of Southern Hemisphere—5,000 Are Reported Dead at Valparaiso Alone.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN BY HUNDREDS AMONG THE VICTIMS WHOSE BODIES PILE STREETS OF CITY

Flames Add to Terrors of Continued Shocks and Still Rage in Ruins of Buildings. Dynamite Used to Check Their Progress. Thousands Homeless by Catastrophe Flee to the Mountains Only to Face Terrors of Starvation.

Lima Peru, Aug. 18.—The number of dead at Valparaiso is now placed at more than 5,000. Hundreds of bodies have already been taken from the ruins and more are being recovered with each hour.

Temporary morgues have been established. Many of the dead are mutilated beyond recognition. Among them are scores of women and children.

Chili's Seaport in Ruins, Thousands Facing Starvation

Lima, Peru, Aug. 18.—The magnificent city of Santiago de Chili, the third city in South America in wealth and population, has been destroyed by the terrific earthquake shock which wrenched the west coast of lower South America Thursday night.

The telegraph service is so badly demoralized that only the most meagre reports are coming through, but every dispatch gives color to the growing belief that the splendid capital of Chili is a mass of ruins which are being consumed in many places by flames

THOUSANDS HOMELESS AMID RUINS.

More than half of the 350,000 persons who made up the population are believed to be homeless and many of the great public structures are destroyed or badly damaged. These include the magnificent capitol building in which the National Congress and the Supreme Court meet, the great cathedral, which is one of the finest in South America; the palace of the Archbishop of Chili; the summer residence of the President of the Republic, college libraries, convents, monasteries, municipal structures and the homes of many of Chili's wealthiest men [illegible]

PEOPLE FLEE FROM FALLING HOUSES.

With the first shock, which was the most violent and which seemed to rip the very foundation of the city, walls were hurled into the streets and the entire electric light system put out of commission. The scenes that followed were pitiful. In the poorer section of the city the inhabitants fled half dressed to the streets and as shock followed shock their cries and supplications could be heard above the crash of falling walls.

As at Valparaiso fires broke out in many places, and owing to the failure of the water supply it was almost impossible to stay their progress. Block after block of once magnificent structures were attacked by the flames, and it was at last necessary to resort to the use of dynamite. Many buildings have already been blown up and the flames are still spreading with alarming rapidity.

The business section has suffered worst thus far, but the residences are seriously threatened, and if the spread of the flames is not soon checked practically nothing will be left of the city.

UNABLE TO ESTIMATE NUMBER OF DEAD.

At this time it is extremely difficult to give even the vaguest estimate of the number of dead either at Santiago or Valparaiso owing to the confusion and excitement which prevails at those places.

Most of the telegraph lines from the coast to the interior are down and the few which are still working are in bad shape.

Word came from one of the telegraph operators at Santiago this afternoon that there had been a renewal of the shocks and that many buildings that had not been destroyed by the first shock had been thrown down. Everywhere fires were burning and the heavens were aglow for miles with the reflection of the flames as they eat their way from street to street. The inhabitants in panic were fleeing to the hills for safety and the thoroughfares were choked with frenzied men and women trying to save their few belongings.

GHOULS ARE SHOT DOWN BY SOLDIERS.

Both there and at Valparaiso the authorities with great promptness called the entire military force and the soldiers, acting under orders, were shooting down the looters who put in an early appearance.

Dozens of ghouls have been shot and above the clang of the bells and the wails of the people could be heard at intervals the ominous crack of the rifles, telling of the work of troops.

Dispatches received here today also tell of the destruction of a number of smaller towns in Chili—which country seems to have borne the brunt of the disturbance. Le Ligua is said to be in ruins. This is a town of 15,000 and is a prosperous commercial centre. Vina del Mar is also a wreck and most of its 12,000 people are homeless. Little of either Limache or Quilue remains. They had about 4000 population each and were tributary to Valparaiso. In every instance flames followed the earthquake and people by thousands were left homeless.

FERTILE SECTION WASTE AND DESOLATE.

So far as can be learned at this time the effects of the convulsion are worse even than at first reported. The whole of the most fertile and prosperous section of Chili seems to have been practically laid waste. Railroad tracks have been wrenched from the roadbeds, cuts have been filled in, tunnels blocked and the earth's surface ripped and torn for miles. In many places yawn-

MORGUES CHOKED WITH DEAD; LIVING FACE STARVATION

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Valparaiso, Chili, Aug. 18.—This, the greatest seaport of the Pacific coast of South America, is to-day a helpless mass of ruins, and the fires which are still burning are adding to the terror and desolation. Save for the police, the troops and the firemen, who are working night and day, the city is practically deserted. Thousands of the inhabitants have fled to the interior, leaving their shattered homes a prey to the flames.

It is difficult even on the ground to glean any clear idea of the happenings of the last thirty-six hours. A correspondent who penetrated to the great public square says that it is littered with debris from fallen buildings, and that it is the centre of a desolated district. The streets radiating in every direction are strewn with the wreck of splendid structures, the walls of which have been pitched outward by the violence of the first shock, which was far the worst.

Gas Mains Wrenched Apart.

Tangled electric [illegible] and fallen trees and trolley poles litter many of the thoroughfares. The gas mains have been torn apart by the wrenching of the earth till the air is laden with the odor of escaping gas. In like manner the water pipes were wrecked and the supply of water cut entirely off. Not a street car is running in the entire city. Few of the dead, who are believed to be in the ruins, have been taken out, and no estimate of their number is possible.

From the Calle Bellavista to the Calle Almendral the ruin is complete. This section comprises the best of the business section of the city. Here are numberless fine structures and many fine homes of rich people. Those that did not succumb to the shock have since become a prey to the flames.

Pall of Smoke Over Town.

A dark pall of smoke hangs over the entire town and its once beautiful suburbs. In the outskirts the pretty gardens are blackened and withered as if scorched by a sirocco. The houses are tenantless, the inhabitants having left in the first panic which seized upon all classes alike.

While it is now believed that the first reports of damage to the shipping in the harbor and along the coast were exaggerated, it is yet too early to tell just what has happened. Following the earthquake a severe storm came down from the north and is now blowing a gale from the sea. This makes it all the more difficult to cope with the fires which are constantly breaking out in new places.

Wind Fans Flames To Fury.

Fanned by the wind the flames leaped across the narrow streets, lapping up everything in their path. To make it still worse, the [illegible] are continuing and every few minutes [illegible] tremor of the ground. As a result the entire population that remains is panic stricken. It is feared that what is left of the city will go down before a fresh shock. Even if no further damage should result the loss of property will be stupendous and the death list must run high. It is difficult to get a word from the interior, owing to the prostration of the wires, but it is feared [illegible] of the republic has been devastated.

Santiago Wrecked by Shock.

Word has come from Santiago [illegible] splendid capital city, that the city is demolished. Fully one-half of the town is gone and the flames are sweeping on unchecked. Whole [illegible] buildings were [illegible] foundations and [illegible] streets in a [illegible] which many are [illegible] injured.

Darkness broods [illegible] save for the fitful flash [illegible] are cutting [illegible] a battery of art[illegible] down rows [illegible] walls of which [illegible] and firemen [illegible] Santiago said [illegible] the guns [illegible] the deserted [illegible]

Fire Devours Provisions.

In the path of the fi[illegible] the great wareho[illegible] surplus food sup[illegible] loss of this is irre[illegible] almost without a [illegible] page of the railways [illegible] from coming in.

A messenger [illegible] Quillota, twenty-six [illegible] that the town is [illegible] the people were [illegible] and it was reported [illegible] had been very [illegible]

Devastates All Country.

He declared that the entire district through which he traveled to [illegible] paraiso looked as if it had [illegible] a cyclone. Farm houses [illegible] churches were demolished [illegible] wandering aimlessly [illegible] of a [illegible] of the way [illegible] and he found [illegible] into all sorts [illegible] be impossible to run [illegible] for many [illegible]

It is said that the [illegible] line which runs to Santiago [illegible] down and [illegible] were buried in [illegible] lered to be true [illegible] during the day and [illegible] here at night.

Calm Before the 'Quake.

It is recalled now that the first shock came without the slightest premonition. Thursday was calm and beautiful and the sea was as placid as a summer lake. Suddenly, just after 8 o'clock, there was a sudden wrench and with a loud roar buildings fell in all directions. Many did not have a chance to leave their homes and were buried in the wreckage.

As the earth swayed and rocked there were loud rumblings and after the first shock [illegible] continued throughout the night. Most of them were light, but they were sufficient to keep everyone in a panic. The native population swarmed the dark streets and, falling on their knees, prayed loudly for hours. The priests did everything within their power to reassure their parishioners, but even they were almost helpless to restore anything like feeling of confidence.

Flee City for Refuge in Hills.

All night the panic went on, and when morning broke long lines of pale faced people could be seen wending their way to the hills, many of them dragging with them their poor little belongings. All were hungry and none had slept a wink.

All day the exodus has continued and now the police and troops are the chief residents left. They have been working without intermission ever since the first shock and most of the time without food. They have strict orders to shoot all looters and many of these ghouls have been summarily executed. No effort has been made to bury [illegible], many of which are still [illegible] fell.

The banks [illegible] been heavy sufferers. Most of them [illegible] in ruins and their vaults are buried under tons of wreckage. They are being guarded by troops as far as possible.

Sweep of Earthquake.

It is now believed that the sweep of the earthquake was of greater extent than at first believed. A report has come in from Vallenar, which lies 300 miles north of Santiago, that the town has been wrecked and is in flames. It was a thriving place of about 5,000 inhabitants. The entire country between there and Santiago was swept clean. In this area of devastation was included the town of Illapel, about midway between Santiago and Vallenar. There were about 5,000 people there and nearly all of them have been rendered homeless. All are suffering from lack of food. Fires have [illegible] so far as can be learned [illegible] the earthquake. [illegible] the first shock was [illegible]

While it is too early to speculate, it is safe to say that it will be years before Chili recovers from this, the greatest blow the Republic has ever suffered. The property loss will run far into the millions.

Business of all kinds is at a complete standstill and must remain so for weeks.

Sea Peril Now Threatens.

A new danger was reported to-night. It seems that when the first shock came hundreds of people fled to the vessels in the harbor for safety and some of these are in great peril. The storm which has developed into a howling gale threatens to drive many of the vessels ashore.

Efforts are being made to land the women and children, but owing to the high seas which are running this is very dangerous. The roadstead at all times is a treacherous one, owing to its exposed position and the vessels are in danger of dragging their anchors and sweeping on to the beach.

One of the most pathetic features of the disaster so far is the helplessness of the poorer portion of the people. Dazed by the extent of the misfortune which has befallen them they are praying for rain to extinguish the flames, and on every elevation about the city groups of them are congregated on their knees. As they pray their little homes are being swept out of existence one at a time by the awful rush of the flames which never fail. The poorer quarter has suffered equally with that occupied by the rich, and there seems now no hope of saving even a small part of the proud city.

Flames' Onward Rush.

At this hour (8 p. m.) all hopes of stopping the flames have been abandoned. Rapidly the fires are eating their way northward and not vestige of the buildings is left standing. All is swept clean. As far as one can see is one sea of flames.

The fire started at the Plaza de Oro and the shock had hardly subsided before the streets were lighted up by burning buildings. Many of the engine houses were in the zone of the worst [illegible] and the machines were [illegible]

LABOR PROTEST CONCEALED BY CANAL BOARD.

More Than a Year Ago Knights at Washington Objected to Coolie Labor in Zone.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 18.—The Isthmian Canal Commission has studiously and stupidly concealed the fact that the Knights of Labor of this city have protested formally against the importation of Chinese to the canal zone.

The Knights protested a year ago when the matter was being agitated, and it was about that time that Mr. Shonts disposed of the whole subject in cavalier fashion by telling President Gompers of the A. F. of L. and James O'Connell, one of his lieutenants, that there was no intention of bringing coolies to the Isthmus. The protest filed by the Knights of Labor is as follows:

To the Honorable, the Members of the Isthmian Canal Commission:

Gentlemen—At the regular meeting of the District Assembly No. 66, Knights of Labor, held at their hall, Thursday evening, April 13, 1905, the following resolution was unanimously adopted and a committee consisting of the undersigned was appointed to present the same to your honorable commission.

Violation of Eight-Hour Law.

Whereas, it has come to the knowledge of this body that the act of August 1, 1892, commonly known as the eight hour law, is being violated on the public works of the United States located in the canal zone, the Isthmus of Panama, in that laborers and mechanics are required or permitted to work more than eight hours for a calendar day, and,

Whereas, it is stated in the public press that the executive committee of the Isthmian Canal Commission has decided to employ alien "Chinese" coolies and Japanese "laborers" under contract on said public works of the United States.

Therefore, Resolved, by D. A. No. 66, Knights of Labor in regular meeting assembled, that we enter our solemn protest on behalf of American laborers against the violation of the act of August 1, 1892, as well as against the proposed violation of the act of February 26, 1885, known as the "Alien Contract Labor Law," and respectfully request your honorable body to remedy the evil complained of and to remove the "army of the unemployed," which is made in this country, unnaturalized foreigners as well as former slaves and their descendants, by giving them this public work, rather than add thousands of Mongolians to this horde of the unemployed.

Charged as Special Monitors.

The representatives of D. A. 66, K. of L., advocated the above mentioned laws before the committee of Congress prior to their adoption and enactment into statute law, and feel that they are charged as special monitors being located at the National Capital to call the attention of the authorities to all violations or attempted violation of the same. Should your honorable body desire to hear arguments or to have authorities submitted on this matter we will be glad to present them for your consideration. Very respectfully,

HERMAN J. SCHULTEIS,
ELIAS J. DAKIN,
Special Committee, K. of L.

DOLLAR ICE IN PAWTUCKET TO-DAY.

Price Is Doubled and Local Company Says It Has Only Two Weeks' Supply.

Pawtucket, Aug. 18.—Beginning to-morrow, the people of this vicinity will be furnished with "dollar ice." That statement means that there is going to be a lot of suffering, especially among the children who are being fed with milk and prepared foods.

Up to the present time the local ice company has been delivering ice to families at the rate of 50 cents per 100 pounds, but, owing to the [illegible] now the rate will be doubled, and a addition to that the statement is made that there is only a two weeks' supply in sight. There are several companies doing business here, but they all follow the lead of the Pawtucket Ice Company in fixing the price, and it is probable that the same rate will prevail everywhere.

One statement which [illegible] stranger made to the correspondent of the BOSTON AMERICAN was of special interest to Providence people. It was that he had been offered a large quantity of ice by the Providence Ice Company, but that the price which was asked for it was so high that he would not pay it.

It will [illegible] noted that an investigation [illegible] made into the ice conditions in Providence, where the [illegible] Ice Company [illegible] it had such a small supply [illegible] and [illegible] was forced to keep [illegible] for its own protection. Apparently, however, from the statement of Mr. [illegible], himself the Providence concern is so well supplied that it can spare a large amount for other dealers.

POLITICS ONLY A SIDE ISSUE AT OWLS' PICNIC.

Over one thousand people attended the annual picnic of the Owl Club, of Ward 18, at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, yesterday. Members of the club expected that the picnic would develop into a political boom for different candidates, but [illegible] John B. Barrett of [illegible] Darling, the [illegible] Casey, a prominent member [illegible] announced his candidacy for the board of Aldermen from Ward 18.

The [illegible] resulted as follows: [illegible] Frank J. Kane [illegible] in the one-mile [illegible] won the one [illegible] second. Raymond won the one-hundred yard dash. Campbell [illegible] won the broad jump. Delaney second. McEachern won the swimming race, with [illegible] second.

"LORD BACON," PIG, SELLS FOR $3,000

Independence, Mo., Aug. 18.—Lord Bacon [illegible] Berkshire boar, was shipped by James Qurollo this week to F. W. M[illegible], Wis. The animal is sent [illegible] herd of Berkshires and was sold by Mr. Qurollo for $3,000. Lord Bacon was raised by Mr. Qurollo at his place [illegible] Independence avenue, just west of town, and is a grandson of the boar he sold two years ago for $1,000, a World's Fair prize winner. This boar, Masterpiece 77,000, was afterward sold for $2,500, which, until Mr. Qurollo sold his grandson for $3,000, was the record price in the United States.

Mr. Qurollo has been raising record-breakers among the Berkshires for some years, and his hogs are known wherever fine herds of this popular breed are found.

HEIRS GOT BUT $100 TO CONTEST WILL

Worcester, Aug. 18.—Relatives of Rebecca E. Butler of Uxbridge, who received but $100 from her will, are to contest its allowance and have retained counsel to fight the probating of the instrument.

Mrs. Butler was a well known Worcester County woman, and in her will gave $500 to the Massachusetts Baptist Convention and $1,000 to the New York Baptist Missionary Society. The North Uxbridge Baptist Church gets a large share of the estate.

The testatrix directed that none of her property should go to the brothers of her husband or to her own brother. J. B. Kelley of Boston appears for the contestants.

BOY HANGING ON TO ICE CART IS BRUISED

While hanging on to the rear of an ice wagon on Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain, late last night, John Burns, eight years old, living at No. 183 Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain, fell to the ground and was struck by the hoofs of a horse attached to another wagon. He received a severe gash on his forehead.

ASKS A MILLION OF CITY FOR TUNNEL.

Rhode Island Co. Wants Providence to Back Its Latest Transit Plan.

WILL PAY INTEREST ON AND REDEEM THE BONDS

Providence, Aug. 18.—A scheme to give the Rhode Island Company the use of the city's credit for the promotion of its private interests, along with the other traditional privileges which the street railway trust enjoys, the latest product of the brain of President Marsden J. Perry, the company's wizard of finance.

That the scheme [illegible] work not the least remarkable [illegible] of it, or it embodies the [illegible] vexed question of rapid transit to the East Side by [illegible] route, a consummation which the [illegible] have so long and devoutly wished [illegible] they are quite ready to swallow [illegible] hook and all, that Mr. Perry [illegible] them at the psychological [illegible]

Makes Tunnel Proposal.

Mr. Perry, after toying with the city by insisting on a surface approach or nothing until he had got the cross-grain of public sentiment firmly riveted on the tunnel idea, to which he led people to believe he was opposed, has now made a proposal to the City Council Committee, agreeing to the tunnel route. What is more remarkable is that [illegible] possession of Mr. Perry [illegible] tunnel idea entails the condition that the city will expend the $1,000,000 necessary to build the tunnel, the Rhode Island Company will pay the interest on the bonds, redeem them as they become due, and eventually take the tunnel off the city's hands without its costing the municipality a cent.

The astounding details of the proposition leaked out unexpectedly to Mr. Perry, who likes to have a deal irretrievably tied up before letting the public know what is doing. It is this policy that has enabled the Rhode Island company to get about everything it has wanted from both the city and the State.

Willing to Pay a Million.

The people are now awaiting, however, just how badly the Rhode Island Company really wants a tunnel, when it is willing to pay $1,000,000 for a right of way through College Hill and the necessary construction work for half a mile.

The company does not propose to pay this money out in a lump, however, nor again to attempt to float its own bonds at high interest rates. Neither does it propose to subject itself to an annual draft upon its resources indefinitely, in the shape of a yearly rental for the use of the city's property. It proposes, in effect, to make an agreement with the city whereby the yearly rental will be applied on the purchase price, so that in the end it will own the tunnel absolutely by the payment of $55,000 a year for forty years. Instead of investing its capital, which can be made to pay so much better in other ways, or issuing its own bonds at a high rate of interest, the proposition is for the city to fund the enterprise, and issue a low rate bond at 3 or 3½ per cent., thus saving the Rhode Island Company some $10,000 or $15,000 in interest each year.

There is a pronounced sentiment that the tunnel should remain forever under public control, instead of passing to that of the railway company, with its virtually perpetual franchise.

"BLACK HAND" THREAT FOR RICH MAN.

North Adams, Aug. 18.—Similar to the threats made against the life and property of the late Daniel B. Wesson, the millionaire Springfield revolver manufacturer, is the warning sent to Alanson [illegible], wealthy retired merchant of [illegible] by representatives of the "Black Hand."

Within a week Mr. Millard has received several missives that threaten his life unless he meets the demands of the society. He turned the letter over to the police. Last night his house was stoned by persons who escaped in the darkness.

One of the letters advised him to meet a "director" at a certain point in Kemp's park. He was warned that he would suffer unless he kept the appointment.

Mr. Millard thought it best to go to the park and while there he was approached by a stranger who talked for a time about the scenery and then switched the conversation to the dangerous work of the "Black Hand." At the same time the stranger drew a revolver, but Mr. Millard says he did not threaten him with it.

Since then Mr. Millard has received two letters of a threatening nature, both of them being signed with a black hand in ink. One of these was left on the steps of Mr. Millard's house and the other was delivered to him while he was walking along the street. The latter missive was given him by a boy, who told him that a stranger had asked him to deliver it. On one of the letters Mr. Millard was warned to mind his own business or it would go hard with him.

Mr. Millard admits that money was demanded in one of the letters, but will not say how large a sum.

WILD DEER DAMAGE WORCESTER CROPS

Worcester, Aug. 18.—Wild deer are more plentiful in Worcester and vicinity this summer than for many years. The oldest inhabitant fails to bring forth a story that compares with the record-breaking visits of deer to the city this year.

Elliott Moore of No. 27 Amherst street has filed a complaint at City Hall alleging that wild deer have consumed pretty nearly everything in his garden.

Recently a deer was seen on the streets near the centre of the city and reports from nearby towns are to the effect that deer are plentiful. A large number of claims against the State will result.

BABY FALLS 18 FEET; SKIPS INTO HOUSE

After falling out of a second-story window at her home, No. 48 Sutton street, Lynn, and landing on her hands and shoulder on the sidewalk, a distance of 18 feet, little Helen Plough, the three-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ida Plough, picked herself up and ran into the house. Except for a few slight bruises about her face and hands she was uninjured.

Havoc Wrought By Earthquake In South America

Santiago, capital of Chili, half destroyed. Half of 350,000 population homeless. Starvation threatens refugees.

Valparaiso, chief seaport, a mass of ruins. Homes deserted as people flee to the hills. Fires still raging. 5,000 reported dead.

Vina Del Mar, Quilpuque and Limache, suburbs of Valpariso, in ruins. Dead unknown.

DENIES SUICIDE; IS MISSING HUSBAND.

Wife of Albert Palmer, Travelling Salesman, Confident He Will Return.

FATHER ALSO SHARES BELIEF THAT SON IS ALIVE

Neither the wife nor father of Albert M. Palmer, a traveling salesman who had been missing for a week, believe that he is the man whose body was found in the Jackson Park lagoon in Chicago. A card found in a garment of the dead man bore the name of J. P. and D. Plummer of No. 9 Blackstone street, this city. Palmer, whose home was at No. 8 Dorset street, South Boston, was employed by that house and his territory was New England. He left home on August 17 and when he did not return at the expected time, Mrs. Palmer, in worry over his absence, went to Jamaica Plains to consult her father-in-law. She was told by the latter that he had received a telegram from Palmer saying that he was in Chicago.

Believes Husband Will Return.

"I don't believe my husband is dead," said Mrs. Palmer to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter. "It must be another man whose body was found. Just because they found a card of my husband's firm in that man's pocket is no proof that he is my Albert. My husband never committed suicide. He is too fond of his children. Our little girl is at Hampton Beach and I have telegraphed her to come back. It will be a sad home-coming. My boy is but nine and she is twelve. They have never known what trouble was and I have never dreamed of anything like this. I don't think I can stand the strain much longer.

"Until we know something definite the suspense will be terrible. My brother-in-law will take steps to find out the truth. But I am sure that my husband is alive and that he will soon come home. He has done nothing [illegible] ashamed of. He worked as [illegible] and was not to blame [illegible] was [illegible] I suppose he got discouraged and went away trying to better himself."

Devoted to Family.

Mrs. Palmer's faith in the return of her husband sustains his father during the ordeal of suspense.

"My boy will come back," said Mr. Palmer's father. "I know that he will make a full explanation."

The telegram received from Chicago was the first news that his employers had received of Palmer in a week. He had not been connected with their house for long. He had previously been employed by J. A. Budlong and Sons Co., selling their goods from a wagon.

"Palmer had worked for us fourteen years," said Harry Budlong, the Boston manager of that firm. "He was perfectly honest. I am more than surprised if he is dead. I cannot account for it. He always spoke in the most lovable terms of his wife and family and seemed to be generally contented with his lot."

OLDEST GRADUATE OF HARVARD IS DEAD.

Lawrence, Aug. 18.—Rev. J. W. Cross died to-day at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mary Ryder, 66 Bradford street, of old age. He was ninety-eight years and two months old.

Rev. Mr. Cross was the oldest graduate of Harvard University, having graduated from the institution with the class of 1828, of which he was the last surviving member. He retired from active work in the ministry a [illegible] of years ago. At that time he was [illegible] in West Boylston.

Mr. Cross was [illegible] in East Bridgewater, June [illegible] 1808. At the age of twenty he [illegible] Harvard, having [illegible] classmates R. C. Winthrop and George S. Hillard. He at one time represented West Boylston in the Legislature. He was a member of the State Constitutional Convention in 1858. He was very active in the abolition movement.

Besides being the oldest Harvard graduate, he was the oldest alumnus of Andover Theological Seminary and the oldest Congregational minister in the United States.

KEPT ON TAKING PE-RU-NA RESTORED TO PERFECT HEALTH

Mrs. Burns and Child

How Mrs. Hortense Burns, Whose Health Was All Run Down from Pelvic Trouble, Obtained Relief. In a Few Weeks' Use of Pe-ru-na She Was Changed from a Semi-Invalid So as to Be Able to Attend to Her Household Duties

Thousands of Women in the United States Will Read Mrs. Burns' Testimonial to Pe-ru-na with Eager Interest.

DENVER, COL.—In a letter to The Peruna Drug Mfg. Co., Mrs. Burns says: "My health was all run-down from pelvic trouble and I was not able to obtain relief until I began using Peruna. In a few weeks I began to feel like a different being, was able to attend to my household duties, and life looked different to me.

"I kept taking Peruna until I was restored to perfect health and strength. I shall always keep a bottle on hand and take a dose or two when I am exhausted. I shall always be glad to give my endorsement, as it did so much for me." (723 W. 7th Ave.)

The Calamity of Sickness.

A gloom is cast over the household when the wife and mother is sick. No amount of love or prosperity, culture or self-denial, can restore to the home perfect tranquillity and order so long as the mother suffers from ill health. The restoration of one such case has a greater influence that can be pictured.

The Blessing of Health.

Peruna has entered many a house in times of darkness and despair, and by the relief it has given, brought courage and happiness. After a woman has dragged her weary body about, week after week, vainly trying to attend to her duties, the joy which she experiences in discovering a remedy for her ailments can scarcely be imagined.

Disease clouds the intellect, weakens the courage and converts happy, hopeful people into discouraged, listless invalids. No man can measure the far-reaching influences for good which flow directly from the restoration of the housewife to her rightful place in the home.

PLAN FOR VAST WHITE RIBBON GATHERING.

Boston to Be Mecca for World's Christian Temperance Union Delegates in the Fall.

FLOCK TO HUB FROM EVERY LAND AND CLIME

The seventh triennial convention of the world's Women Christian Temperance Union, will be held in Tremont Temple, Boston [illegible] last three or [illegible] tions are [illegible] tainment [illegible] will visit [illegible] State [illegible] and [illegible] have representatives [illegible]

The [illegible] Lady Somerset [illegible] depleted [illegible] unions and [illegible] to which this [illegible] has [illegible] vious visits to New England in 1891, 1893, and again in 1902. In [illegible], Lady Somerset [illegible] for more than twenty years [illegible] the American [illegible] in one of the Back Bay [illegible] Winter, while Lady Henry's son pursued studies at Harvard University.

Mrs. Stevens to Preside.

It will indeed be a cosmopolitan body over which Mrs. Stevens will preside in Tremont Temple, late in October, for daily deliberations on questions of great moment within and without temperance circles.

Mrs. Stevens is also national president of the American forces of the union. This office she assumed under conditions that would have [illegible] one of weaker calibre, but the [illegible] woman responded to the call of the mighty organization in its crucial hour, when Frances E. Willard died, meeting and solving the many grave problems confronting her, leading with unflinching courage the 300,000 who had called her to be their leader.

Delegates from Even Africa.

Not only will the United States and Canada be ably represented at the convention, but Africa will also send delegates. Mrs. Kaji Yajima of Tokyo, the president of the Japanese union, will represent that country. Far away Africa will send her president, Mrs. Mary F. Fermie of Natal [illegible] Baroness Von Hansen, a recognized [illegible] circles as well as [illegible] home city Dresden [illegible] Austria will come Fraulein [illegible] the daughter of distinguished parents whose lives are connected prominently with that of the great Vienna University.

Distinguished Women Coming.

Great Britain will send her full quota, among whom will be Miss Agnes Slack, one of the two honorable secretaries of the World's convention. Miss Slack's brother, John Branford Slack, has just been knighted by King Edward, in recognition of distinguished political service. Miss Swankie Cameron, whose name is prominent in parliamentary circles, through her father's affiliation with that great body, will also represent England. Delegates from Sweden, Greece and every land on both sides of the Atlantic, will be present.

The programme, which will be issued shortly, will show that the white ribbon army is fighting a good fight "For God, and Home and Native Land."

WILD STEERS TEAR THROUGH STREETS OF BRIGHTON.

Thirty-four steers ran wildly through the streets of Brighton for several hours yesterday. The animals were consigned to the Brighton Abattoir Company, and before they were captured six had been killed by the employes of the abattoir and the Brighton police.

The trouble started after two of the steers had made their escape from a cattle car while it was being unloaded at the abattoir yards. When these got away the men who had charge of them gave chase and this gave the others a chance to get out of the cars.

The animals ran through the streets and for a time the residential section of Brighton resembled a Western prairie. The residents were highly excited. One man was knocked down by the animals who had become wild upon gaining their liberty. He was not seriously hurt, however.

Captain Warren of Police Station 14 was one of the first to join in the chase. He summoned the reserves and they joined with the employes and citizens in the chase. The shooting of the revolvers seemed to terrify the animals all the more, and they ran upon lawns and through yards in the vicinity of the abattoir, tearing up flower gardens and grass plots as they went along. It was late this afternoon before the steers were all captured and the excitement subsided.

MRS. FISH GIVES DINNER FOR 100 GUESTS THIS WEEK

Campanari's Singing the Only Entertainment Which Will Be Provided.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 18. Official announcement has been made that Mrs. Fish gives a dinner on Saturday, August 25, at Crossways for about 100 guests who are to be seated at small tables. For this occasion there will be neither cotillon nor vaudeville. The only feature after the elaborate dinner course will be Campanari, who will sing to accompaniments by Professor James Hazard Wilson.

It is the intention to have this dinner noted for its elegance and good taste from every point of view. The Cotillon Orchestra will furnish the music.

Mrs. Fish contemplates concluding her dinner ceremonial functions with another dinner on Horse Show week, Sept. 4, when there will also be music.

Among the guests for tonight were Prince and Princess Cantacuzene, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Oliie Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. J. DeForest Danielson, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Dyer, Jr., Miss Natica Rives, Miss Sadie Jones and Miss Charlotte Warren.

DOCTOR BLAMED FOR DEATH OF GIRL.

Secret Inquest to Determine Responsibility for Operation Which Caused Peritonitis.

PROVIDENCE MAN IS NAMED BY THE VICTIM

Providence, R. I., Aug. 18. Absolute secrecy is attending the inquest to determine the responsibility for the death of Miss Agnes [illegible] of Edgewood, which [illegible] according to the certificate of [illegible] Austin H. Longfellow, [illegible] following an operation.

When the result of the autopsy was reported to Coroner Otis A. Hawkins of [illegible] the Attorney General's department was informed of the case and the [illegible] was ordered.

An ante-mortem statement implicating a well known physician of Providence [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] was 27 years of age, of English parentage and was well known [illegible] district where her father is engaged in the grocery business. The evidence taken at the inquest will not be divulged until the report is filed with the attorney general.

FOSS, THE OPTIMIST, SAYS HE'LL BEAT DRAPER.

"I Am Going to Be the Next Republican Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor," Insists the Champion of Reciprocity

"I'm going to be the next candidate of the Republican party of Massachusetts for Lieutenant-Governor and we are going to [illegible] the sort of platform we want, too."

Eugene N. Foss to a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

The most optimist man in Massachusetts politics today is Eugene N. Foss, leader of the tariff revision and reciprocity forces of the Republican party and candidate for the nomination for second place on the State ticket.

He is conducting a thorough, systematic campaign in every section of the State, and will try to have delegate lists in every city and town. He realizes that it is a serious task to do this, but he is sanguine that it can be done. His defiance to the State machine is printed above. More than that, Mr. Foss says:

Expects to Beat Draper.

"Reports that I am receiving from all over the State are most encouraging. I have every reason to be hopeful."

"Do you really mean to say that you think you will beat Lieutenant Governor Draper for the nomination?"

"I do, that is just what I mean, exactly."

"That you are really going to fight to the finish this year?"

"Certainly."

"Well, you were not so insistent last year in the convention as people supposed you were going to be."

"To Shake Off Machine Rule."

"Why, I was not a candidate for anything last year. But I got the kind of platform the tariff revision and reciprocity folks wanted. You ask General Draper, if you don't think so. This year I am a candidate for Lieutenant Governor and I am going to get the nomination. And I am going to have the sort of platform that the tariff revision and reciprocity element wants. The Republican party is going to shake off the machine control this time."

MANY DASHED OVER LEDGES TO DEATH IN ALPS

Record of the Season's Casualties Has Reached an Unusual Figure.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Geneva, Aug. 8. This season's record of Alpine casualties has already reached an amazing figure.

A French tourist named Alexander, forty-five years of age, was traversing the narrow path that joins the Alpine hamlets of Roclots and Passsen with Savoy, when he slipped in the darkness and fell thirty yards to the Coulols. He was instantly killed.

A young Swiss named Ruti was killed near the summit of the Saasberg in the Canton of Glaris. While attempting to reach some Edelweiss which was growing on a different ledge he slipped and fell headforemost down a precipice, 100 yards. Death was instantaneous.

Christian Jann, the veteran guide, of Celre, seventy-eight years of age, who has been on every peak of importance in Switzerland, has been drowned near Klosters.

A shepherd named Candenzi, and his son, aged fifteen, drove down the cattle from the Alp Urschin in the Canton of Grisons. Upon arriving at the village the son was missing. The father went in search of the boy and found him unconscious and dying in a ravine beside the steep path.

Herr Videmann, a German visitor at Montroux, while attempting to pick Edelweiss, rolled down a steep grassy slope on the Praz, but fortunately caught a tree on the very brink of the precipice. He lay there for hours unable either to ascend or descend. He was finally saved by a party of returning Alpinists.

TWO DEATHS CAUSED BY BIG MINE CAVE-IN

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 18.—A cave-in at the Warrior Run mine, near here, caused the death of one man and a young woman, the destruction of a house by fire and considerable damage to the town, the surface being affected for a large area, and a large crack shattering the foundations of a number of houses.

"WIDOWS" SWINDLED MANY DUPES IN BOSTON, SAY NEW YORK POLICE

YOUNGS HOTEL

SCHEMES LAID HERE TO CATCH RICH VICTIMS

Said to Have Claimed Headquarters at Young's and Touraine Hotels.

Boston police have been appealed to by the central office detectives in New York to make the most strenuous efforts to ascertain all the facts of the career in this city of Mrs. Bina F. Verrault, alias Helen Hamilton, and Mrs. Izella Brown, alias Mrs. James Pemberton Brown, the "widows" who are charged with conducting the matrimonial syndicate at No. 323 West 82nd street. Detectives who have been on their trail since the exposure came believe that if there were operations here they were possibly more extensive than anywhere else in the country.

Mrs. Verrault is at liberty on bail on the charge of using the mails to defraud, but authorities are of the opinion that if a Boston record is produced it may be possible to reveal much more than they already have.

Think Bostonians Victimized.

From evidence secured by them the Boston police are of the opinion that many Bostonians have been victimized by a gang pronounced by New York detectives to be the most dangerous clique of swindlers ever known in this country.

What makes it difficult for the Boston detectives to verify the theory on which they are now working to establish by fact is that any state street bankers, Back Bay millionaires who fell into the same net as Wall street men, foreign noblemen, insurance magnates and rich brewers will not come forward and tell how they were duped, preferring the loss of large sums to having it made public that they fell in love and were deceived by the beautiful adventuresses and the bad but brilliant men who were their confederates.

It has been stated that the handsome, captivating women used the Hotel Touraine and Young's Hotel to receive mail and that they pretended to their victims to have suites there.

That they received men at either hotel is something the sleuths have not been able to prove. The managers of both places deny that any such women have ever been at either place.

In fact, detectives believe that the women while [illegible] out of rich Bostonians used some mansion in the Back Bay district as a base of operations just as they [illegible] New York [illegible] harvest in that city. In the beginning of the Boston operations, before the beautiful "widows" found Boston victims with enough money to enable them to set up a palatial establishment, they put up in South End lodging houses.

Assistant United States District Attorney Carmody, of New York, is confident that the fraud was worked as extensively in Boston as anywhere else where the gang selected a field.

He would like to have Boston police find out the names of Boston millionaires who bought stock in the Kentucky Wood Alcohol & Fuel Co., a wild cat company whose stock was sold through bogus spiritualistic seances.

Mail at Young's Hotel.

"I have been [illegible] of the Verrault woman's doings in Boston," said Assistant District Attorney Carmody. "I have been informed that lots of mail addressed to her went to Young's Hotel up to within a few weeks ago. I have been told that a Boston physician figures in the case but I have tried in vain to obtain his name. It is said that he was not a victim of the woman, but is the only man who so far has been mentioned as actually captivating her. I want to locate this doctor. He may be able to shed much light on the operations of Mrs. Verrault in Boston."

All the schemes which the "widows" worked in New York seemed to have had a trail ending here. If it was not a place where they sought prey, the police [illegible] it surely was their [illegible] of refuge.

Count Gregory Zaboroff, one of Mrs. Verrault's victims, told the authorities [illegible] real estate matter that would take her to Boston for several weeks and she did not return until in March."

Leo Kelster, who says he gave her large sums, tells another story in which the woman's operations in Boston figure.

"She told me," said Kiester, "that she has been willed by her father a large estate in Boston [illegible] she said she lived but that a [illegible] named James B. Browne was fighting [illegible] and had held up her [illegible] Massachusetts courts. She [illegible] aside. [illegible] back with the endorsement 'J. B. Phipps.'"

Dealt With Mrs. Browne.

J. B. Phipps [illegible] says that [illegible] nothing at all about the "widows" but he recalled having some dealings with Mrs. James Pemberton Browne, who is one of the aliases, the police say, of the other woman, and that he cashed [illegible] checks for her. He [illegible] dignantly [illegible] any further knowledge of the woman [illegible] the extraordinary case.

Boston police are convinced from what they have already learned about the fascinating "widows" that Mrs. Verrault is the handsome woman who sought to inaugurate a treasure hunt here several months ago. This woman said she knew where pirates had buried $2,000,000 in coin, gold plate and jewels, and that the secret was hers alone. If she found any dupes to this scheme they have not come forward and told [illegible]

This "Sadie Mason," lived in several South End houses. Police Captain Dugan, assistant chief inspector, says that George Allen Mason, who posed as her brother, is an ex-convict who had served a term with his brother, Frank Albertson Mason, in Springfield jail for blackmail.

It is supposed that "Sadie Mason" is the "Maria Mason" who lived at No. 7 Bond street for several weeks with a woman whom she said was her mother, possibly Mrs. Browne [illegible] whom she said [illegible] who claimed to [illegible] supposed to be George Allen Mason.

Borrowed $63 From Walkers.

"Maria Mason" became acquainted with [illegible] Walker of No. 36 Mil[illegible] applied at that house [illegible] sell stock in the [illegible] She talked of a [illegible] Nova Scotia, and [illegible] phate and silver [illegible] to No. 36 Milford [illegible] several sums of money [illegible] finally left owing [illegible] Waltham street, who [illegible] tried to sell mining [illegible]

[illegible] woman is very handsome [illegible] who is a brunette [illegible] exceedingly well proportioned [illegible] complexion is of a rich olive hue [illegible] eyes a meeting brow. Mrs. Izella Brown, who is believed by detectives to have been the chief "widow" in the syndicate, is of the peroxide blonde type [illegible] built with shifting hazel eyes [illegible] daughter, Miss Sara Brown, is very beautiful. Mary Mason, a niece of Mrs. Brown, was one of the most attractive of the beautiful young women who surrounded the "widows."

LITTLE SHOPPER OF THREE LOST IN CROWD, BUT HAPPY

Got Separated From Mother and Found by Police Eating Cake on Washington Street

Arrayed in a dainty white gown, a tiny mite of a girl [illegible] pretty appearance [illegible] attention of every shopper [illegible] standing at the [illegible] of Washington and West streets yesterday. [illegible] of the Lagrange Street Station.

The child was later identified as Esther Salman, aged 3, of No. 22 Minot street, [illegible] to her [illegible] Abraham Salman.

The two came down town on a shopping tour with her mother and in the crowd the parent and daughter got separated. Mrs. Salman had given the child a piece of cake and she was munching it contentedly when the officer found her in the jostling crowd of Saturday afternoon shoppers.

Officer R[illegible] could elicit no information from the girl further than her one word, "Esther," to all questions. She was sent to the Lagrange Street Station, where her father found her several hours later.

HARVARD OPENS GREAT SCHOOL OF SCIENCE.

With Beginning of University Year Work Will Be Begun on McKay Foundation.

INCOME OF $2,000,000 ALREADY AVAILABLE

When Harvard University opens this [illegible] Graduate School of Applied Science [illegible] McKay [illegible] [illegible]

The new Graduate School of Applied Science does not supplant the Lawrence Scientific School. The future of the Lawrence [illegible] changes have been made in [illegible] awarding that [illegible] the four years [illegible] may lead to either the degree of [illegible] for of science, the latter becoming a general and not a technical degree.

Highly Specialized Work.

The Graduate School of Applied Science offers to men who are graduates of colleges or scientific schools, or who are otherwise suitably prepared, opportunities for pursuing technical studies in the several fields and becoming candidates for professional degrees.

The plans of study leading to these degrees presuppose in each case certain preparation on which the more highly specialized work of the School of Applied Science is based.

[illegible]

Wide Range of Degrees.

The school provides for instruction and offers degrees in engineering (civil, mechanical, electrical), mining, metallurgy, architecture, landscape forestry, applied physics, applied chemistry, applied zoology and applied geology.

Opportunities for special advanced study will be opened also to students not candidates for a degree; and students of special advanced standing will be admitted to any course for which their training fits them upon obtaining the approval of the division or department under which they desire to work.

The following scholarships are open for the year to the students in the new school who have given evidence of ability and promise: One scholarship of $250, one loan scholarship of $[illegible], [illegible] $250 and [illegible] university scholarships of $150 each.

Degrees in the several courses will be conferred on a student entering the Graduate School of Applied Science who has fulfilled the requirements established by the department or division concerned. It is believed that this school will offer facilities for scientific study second to none in the country.

WOMAN'S TEARS GET HUSBAND OUT OF JAIL

St. Louis, Aug. 18. The tears of a wife and two small children at Belleville obtained for Clarence Compton, of East St. Louis, his freedom from jail, where he was held for abandonment.

Mrs. Compton, with her two little children, one an infant, called at Prosecutor Kruger's office and pleaded for an hour for the release of her husband. Attorney Kruger consented to have Compton enter a plea of guilty in the county court, be fined and then have the fine remitted.

HUNGER PANGS FORCE GIRL TO STEAL.

Starving, Friendless in Strange City, Pretty Margaret Edwards Turns Thief.

PATHETIC TALE MOVES COURTROOM TO TEARS

With hair dishevelled and clothes awry, eyes unnaturally feverishly bright, swaying from utter exhaustion, pretty Margaret Edwards, aged about nineteen years, yesterday faced Judge Dubuque in the Municipal Criminal Court, charged with a theft which she had committed only when driven to the verge of desperation by sheer starvation.

Shrinking, quaking with fear, overwhelmed with sense of trembling guilt, a mere leaf from the weakness resulting from days of enforced fasting, the attractive looking young woman presented as pitiable appearance as she was led before the judge.

As in a dream Judge Dubuque listened while fate-like portrayed his interest and compassion for the unfriended, homeless girl who only broke the law against theft only when impelled beyond endurance by the first law of nature, that of self preservation.

Came to City to Find Work.

Margaret Edwards has a mother living in a little town in the Western part of Massachusetts. Until some three weeks ago they lived together and managed to eke out a modest existence. Then the clouds darkened around the little home and the brave young woman determined to come to Boston and try her fortune in the great city. Pressed by poverty, she bade her mother a fluttering goodbye and came to Boston to earn money to support herself and mother.

Faces Cold, Cruel World.

With but a pittance in her purse the girl secured a place in a hotel here, but after working a couple of weeks she was thrown out of employment through the closing of the house to undergo repairs. Out into the street the girl was turned in a city where she knew no one, an utterly insignificant atom of humanity, with a heavy and hopeful soul but friendless among friends, homeless among homes.

Out of her scanty savings she rented a little room in a house in Fremont street, South End. She paid in advance until next Tuesday, hardly day she settled forth bravely, hopefully at first, in search of work. Everywhere she met with refusals, but too often with harsh refusals in a city where even that evil one was at work this one lone girl could get no employment.

Eats Her Last Meal.

Her little stock of money dwindled at an alarming rapid rate day by day no matter how she started herself in pursuit. Last Monday night after paying her rent she had but one meal she was possessed of which was to turn. Without work, without money, without food she was turned out. There was no place for her to go, no one to whom she could appeal for a penniless girl. Wearily she walked the streets all day Tuesday. Wednesday she was without food. Thursday she was without food. Friday dawned as did Saturday. Sunday came and her hopes—for she had a girl's heart—fled before cold reality and she became desperate regard less of her future possibilities. Such was the mood in which she was found.

Harsh to Tempter's Voice.

Her acquaintance refused her because she, too, had no money. But she advised her to slip into one of the big department stores and watch her opportunity and snatch up some articles and then pass it. With what she got this way she could live a day or two longer.

Margaret freed the temptation and fell before it because she was too weak, too famished, to resist. She loitered into a store, and, when to such a pass she had come as was natural, and was at once arrested. When taken to the city prison Friday night she could scarcely stand, so weak and emaciated had she become. The matron questioned her and went away from her the truth.

Food was procured. Yesterday Miss Maynard, the probation officer, in her regular visit to the prison heard the story and went with her before Judge Bennett where she pleaded for and obtained mercy. The girl was released on probation. Miss Maynard promised Judge Dubuque that she was provided with food and shelter until she could procure work here or be returned to her home.

ROCKPORT BIDS FLEET FAREWELL

After closing one of the gayest weeks that Rockport has ever known the Atlantic fleet under the command of Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans left yesterday for Gloucester, passing the Thatcher Island lights. Admiral Evans and the officers of the fleet were the guests of the Rockport Yacht club during their visit here, and the club members did everything in their power to make the visit a pleasant one. The fleet was sighted off Cape Ann early yesterday morning, and as the ships passed in review before the Rockport Yacht club house they were saluted by the members of the club. The fleet was escorted to the harbor by a large number of yachts and launches, and as the ships passed out of the harbor they were saluted by the inhabitants of Rockport, who had gathered on the shore to see the fleet pass. The fleet will remain in Gloucester harbor until Tuesday, when it will sail for Portland.

CHELSEA BANK TROUBLES DISCOVERED BY EXAMINER EWER AS LONG AGO AS MARCH

Paper Endorsed by President Hinckley Regarded as Questionable; Made Out to Men Whom Directors Don't Know

That the First National Bank of Chelsea, which closed its doors on Tuesday, was threatened with financial difficulties as long ago as last March because of the discovery by National Bank Examiner Arthur Lowe of irregularities in a paper offered by President Sylvester B. Hinckley, was the statement made by Director Thomas Martin to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter last night at his home in Wakefield.

"Bank Examiner Ewer suspected some kind of irregularities in some of the paper offered by President Hinckley upon his last examination last March," said Mr. Martin, "and he brought the matter before the directors. Since then the bank has discounted some of Hinckley's paper, but would it even renew the loans he had already made when payment was due upon them.

Notes to Persons Unknown.

Among the assets now held by the closed bank are four notes, one of them for $18,000, endorsed by President Hinckley and made out by persons wholly unknown to the directors of that institution. It is evident that the bank had loaned the money on the strength of the endorsement of its president upon the notes of four mysterious individuals, each for the same amount. The president endorsed and in which they got the sums of money, the officials of the government who are probing the bank trouble are trying hard to discover.

Neither Director Martin nor Bank Examiner Ewer will state whether these four signatures in regard to the security. The blotting of irregularities in connection with the making of paper held by the bank and the presence of the names of the entirely unknown to all of the directors, makes the paper, it is added by them, a rather complicated condition of the bank's affairs.

President Hinckley Dying.

The illness and approaching death of President Hinckley complicates the difficulties under which Director Martin and Bank Examiner Ewer are laboring in their probing into the affairs of the closed institution. Both of them, it is said, personally would throw any light in the bank's affairs they may have acquired by his inducement to borrow so heavily from the bank.

Late last night Mr. Hinckley was said to be sinking and very low.

That the Bank of Chelsea will ever be reopened is now believed only by people who know its condition. Those who are in a position to know declare that the bank is so greatly involved in the financial affairs of its dying president that it will be impossible to get depositors in order to make a resumption of general banking business possible.

The talk that the stockholders of the closed institution will be assessed 100 per cent on their holdings is gaining ground. It is thought that it is entirely probable the assessment will be made.

Hinckleys Own 841 Shares.

The capital stock of the Chelsea bank is $100,000. If such an assessment were to go into force, an amount equal to the $100,000 capital stock would be assessed. But how low it may go is not known yet that this is very rarely the case. President Hinckley and one of his sons own 841 shares of the bank's stock. If this were assessed in full it is apparent that this would cut off one third of the money owned to be realized in this way.

Assistant Bank Examiner Robert Lynn, who is also in charge of the examination in Washington, came here today to assist Receiver Lowe in his work of straightening out the tangle in the bank's affairs.

Discussing the first discovery of irregularities in the paper offered to the bank by President Hinckley, made by Examiner Lowe, Director Martin said:

"I cannot state the nature of the irregularities discovered by Examiner Ewer last March. I do not know that there was any. It is the business of examiners of all the institutions of the nation to discover irregularities. I had just returned from Lakeville at that time.

Owes Bank Over $300,000.

Pres[illegible] Hinckley owes the bank [illegible] personally, between $300,000 and $400,000. On his own notes he owes a [illegible] more, although it is said by the bank officials that [illegible] through the notes of others. For instance, the Bay State Organ Company, of which Hinckley is a director, borrowed $25,000. Some money was [illegible] under the name of Hinckley Brothers. Colonel Pope, whose daughter [illegible] young Hinckley married, also gave his note for some.

"We, the directors, trusted Hinckley. He would bring in his business paper and we would vote to accept it upon the recommendation, thinking that he was an honest and capable man and that the bank's interests were well cared for under his direction.

"We had a legal right to loan this money since it was not loaned to the same individual or company. But when Bank Examiner Ewer told us that some of these notes were questionable we did not like to make any more of them to Hinckley. We would not even renew outstanding notes which we expected us to do so.

Took Hinckley's Advice.

"Mr. Hinckley was arrogant in the bank and liked to have things run his own way and by his own hands. He was displeased when any of his acts were questioned or whenever he was crossed in anything. The directors thought that he was a wealthy, honest and responsible man and largely took his advice in the transactions.

"Neither is his behavior leads me to believe that he did not want to be questioned as to his transactions. I believe it was nothing more than his own personal hardihood. Doubtless he worried for the welfare of the bank to his own interests but I believe that he would have come out all right in his investments if he had remained well. He knows, coupled with financial difficulties, pulled him down and I don't know whether an assessment against Hinckley and his son will be worth anything or not. According to Hinckley's statements in the past I should say that he would be able to meet it, although I know nothing definitely. It is true that he and his son own nearly one-third of the bank's stock and if they could not meet their assessments it would be of considerable loss to the bank.

May Get All Money Back.

"I believe that there is still a large equity in the property President Hinckley turned over to the bank. If the people are patient and give us a little time to realize on it, I think that they will get their money back dollar for dollar. This is the result I am working for now and before I consider the question of an assessment.

"The question of the bank's possible reorganization is another that is untimely I would remind that I still have the confidence of the business people of Chelsea. I have always been honest with them and have made nothing out of this deal. What, if any steps will be taken toward a reorganization of the bank, I cannot say. All I want now, and all I will try for is to get the depositors' money back for them."

UNIONS BAN NEW FEDERAL BUILDING

Washington, Aug. 18.—The new municipal Federal building in course of erection here has been placed under the ban of organized labor because it is said the contract for the plumbing and gas fitting work has been awarded to a firm that will employ non-union workmen.

Eight seven building contracts, involving about 150 structures have been entered upon the "black list" of "The Building Unions." The tie up of building operations has assumed a most serious aspect.

RAILROAD RALLIES TO AID OF 'RATE BILL' HEPBURN.

Insincerity of "Fight" Against Measure By Roads Shown By Activity of Burlington to Re-nominate Congressman

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Aug. 18.—One of the most illuminating facts of the year showing that the railroads' "fight" against the Hepburn rate bill is "buncombe," and they are really satisfied with it, comes from the Congressional district of Representative "Pete" Hepburn, the father of the rate bill, the President, of course, being a part-producer of the remarkable document.

Here is what happened in Hepburn's district as joyously and naively put by a high Republican source to-day:

"In the eighth district things looked equally for Colonel Pete Hepburn for a time, but the clouds have rolled away. The Democrats were talking of nominating Claude Porter to run against Colonel Hepburn, in which event there would have been some grab in the eighth district, but the Burlington railroad, which has at least a little something to say in Iowa politics, took a hand in the game. The Democrats nominated Mr. Porter for governor, thereby getting him out of Colonel Hepburn's way, and at the same time putting up the strongest candidate against him possible. Which was gratifying to the Burlington, coming and going.

$10,000,000 BABY IS FIGURE IN BROWN HOUSEWARMING.

Mistress of Magnificent New Villa, "Harbour Court," on Halidon Hill, Throws Open Home to Newport Society

Newport, R. I., Aug. 18.—"Harbour Court," on Halidon Hill, Mrs. John Nicholas Brown's magnificent new villa, was thrown open for the first time since completion this afternoon from 4 to 6, when Mrs. Brown gave a large reception to the vintage colony. An appropriate playground on the lawn, where the $10,000,000 baby Brown, in a white sailor suit, was a prominent figure.

A few of the present included Mrs. George Pomroy Wetmore, Miss Edith Wetmore, Mrs. Prescott Lawrence, Miss Katherine Lawrence, Mrs. Adolph Lauenburg, Mrs. H. A. Johnson, Mrs. Henry A. C. Taylor, Miss Alice Ketcham, Mr. Henry Lawrence, Mrs. W. S. Sherman, the Misses Sherman and Mildred Sherman, Mrs. Charles H. Berryman Mrs. Fred Sheldon, Mr. and Mrs. T. Boston Young Man Brings Suit for Breach of Promise Against Pretty Salem Girl Who Says She Doesn't Care for Him

Salem, Aug. 18. Declaring that her refusal to marry him after promising to become his wife had done him great damage and injury, Samuel Grand of Boston to-day brought suit for $500 damages for alleged breach of promise to marry against pretty Rosie Kaplan of No. 147 Derby street, Salem, in the first District court.

"I don't care anything about the man. I never promised to marry him, anyhow," snapped the young woman to-day to a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

She tossed her shapely head, which is crowned with a wavy mass of dark brown hair, and her brown eyes snapped. Further than that Miss Kaplan refused to discuss the suit against her. She has retained Jackson & Jackson as her counsel, while Grand is represented by Attorney S. L. Ballom of Boston.

The papers filed by the plaintiff state that "in consideration of the plaintiff's promise that the defendant did then and there promise to marry the plaintiff, and that the said plaintiff has always been ready and willing to marry the defendant; that the defendant refuses to perform her promise, to the great damage and injury of the plaintiff."

Miss Kaplan is about twenty-one years of age, small, attractive and very pretty. She is a social favorite among the Hebrews of Salem. Grand is about twenty-six years old and for a year lived here

WHITNEY A PUPPET TO SAVE GASTON MACHINE

BOSSES WOULD RUIN PARTY TO KEEP REINS

Expect Defeat, but Are Determined, Through Quincy's Plotting, to Retain Control.

CANDIDATE'S DARK RECORD

It leaked out yesterday that advocacy of Henry M. Whitney for Governor by the Gaston-Quincy machine has no sincerity [illegible] designed only to enable the [illegible] to keep control. The Gaston-Quincy [illegible] which is regarded by the people [illegible] and most dangerous of the Trust [illegible] in Massachusetts, would prefer [illegible] Governor [illegible] as the candidate, if the latter [illegible] Douglas will not. He knows [illegible] John B. Moran in the field [illegible] be elected. He will not be a [illegible] for the [illegible] agents [illegible] gas and [illegible]

Willing to Be Knocked Down.

Whitney is in politics for self-interest. He does not expect to be elected Governor and isn't worried over the prospect of defeat, regarding his service as a machine tool as likely to be a good investment in the protection of any future enterprises which may take him to the State House. He is as anxious as Gaston and Quincy to have the [illegible] machine [illegible] of the Massachusetts Democracy. He is willing to stand up and be knocked down at the polls.

Gaston, Quincy and Whitney have no desire to have any [illegible] elected Governor. They [illegible] keeping control of the Democracy [illegible]. A presidential campaign isn't far off. To be the machine which [illegible] means a good deal to [illegible]. [illegible] is Business all the time when they take a hand in politics. [illegible] in politics for offices, others for the "goods."

Chairman Quincy of the Democratic State committee, after pleading in vain with for [illegible] bosses, publishes a statement [illegible] Whitney as nominee for Governor. Whitney is coy, and flirts with the proposition till he hears the call of other "friends." Sentiment in his behalf in railroad and public service corporation circles is unanimous. Then he consents and the machine gets busy.

Public Favors Moran.

It starts work throughout the State to beat Moran for the nomination by machine methods. Ben Gibby, notorious in the haunts of the State House lobby, is one of the busiest [illegible] in the machine hive. He knows country politicians, where [illegible] arguments to use.

The sentiment of the rank [illegible] of the Democracy in Boston and throughout the State is [illegible] city and State machines have begun to work overtime to defeat the will of the people. Moran never had a machine nor worked with one. He is and always has been against machine methods. His style of campaigning has been to go straight to the people. He has always fought outside the breastworks.

The political question of the hour is well understood. Will the State and city machine be able to keep the people from dominating the Democratic State convention?

Mayor Not Yet Off the Fence.

Quincy went to Mayor Fitzgerald last week and urged him to get on the Whitney band wagon. The Mayor hasn't climbed so far off the fence yet that the people can see his feet on the ground. But all Moran men expect to see the Mayor working in the end as hard for Whitney as most of Fitzgerald's political friends are now doing. The Mayor organized a machine of his own to get elected Mayor. It is a trifle shattered owing to the disappointment of his followers, but the remnant has raided the arsenal in preparation for the slaughter of the District Attorney.

The convention date is October 4 and the place is Boston. The machine wanted it held where there would be an opportunity to pack it with city employes. There is likely to be a great row in the convention, for the machines are ready to try the ancient prize ring tactics, "win, tie or wrangle." But with Moran district attorney of Suffolk county, lawbreakers will be in danger.

Trying to Throw Off Yoke.

If the Democracy of Massachusetts represents the people of the State, the proposal to nominate Whitney for Governor is an insult to every honest man in the party. It is a double insult because at the present time the people of the United States, aroused to the danger threatening public morality and free institutions through the rule of the interests Whitney typifies, are striving everywhere to throw off the yoke of bossism and drive into retirement the very class of men he represents.

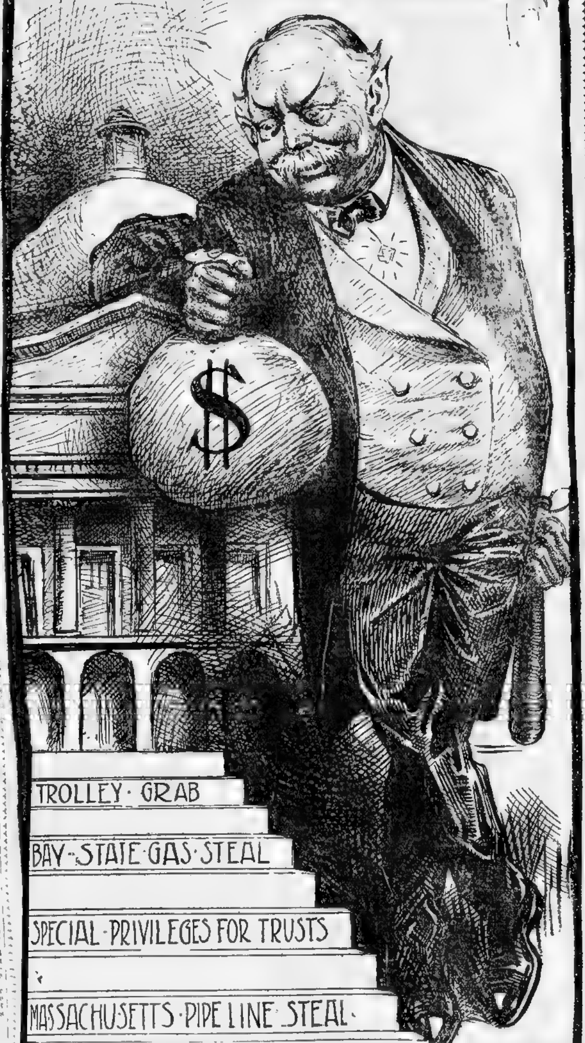
If what is said of Whitney is true and he has never sought to bring his acts [illegible] record is a stench [illegible] of the decent. Although he [illegible] office he has a State [illegible] His [illegible] at the bar of public [illegible] it is revolting to every citizen [illegible] that legislators are elected [illegible] people and not to fill the [illegible] self-seeking corruptionists who believe [illegible] has no rights which a briber, lobbyist or venal lawmaker is bound to respect.

$1,000,000 to Bribe Legislators?

Whitney has been accused by citizens as prominent and responsible as he, of typifying the men who believe that all ends justify the means of unloading watered stock on credulous people, or the grabbing for perpetual use of any public thoroughfare that will serve for the laying of a street car [illegible]

He has been [illegible] up to national inspection as the [illegible] lobbyists to live luxurious lives and sends legislators home broken in moral health.

The Insult to Democracy.



Unloader of watered stock on public.

Franchise grabber.

Head of Lobby.

Accused of setting aside $10,000,000 to use on Beacon Hill.

Gas Franchise manipulator.

Traction franchise amalgamator.

[illegible] who is responsible for [illegible] kind of a man who [illegible] government for and by the people.

He was accused at the State House of setting aside on the books of his New England Gas and Coke Company $1,000,000 for the purpose of bribing the Massachusetts Legislature.

He has been accused of creating the most monstrous machinery ever produced for corrupting and debauching human souls and the Massachusetts Legislature.

He has been called the leading representative in Massachusetts of the vicious system of lobbying legislation.

Admits He Used the Lobby.

The passage of the anti-lobby bill was a sequence of the investigation of his State House methods. For years his name has been in the mouth of Beacon Hill scandal.

Whitney's reply to these accusations is, "I freely admit making use of the lobby." [illegible]

The plan to nominate Whitney for Governor is a plot to throw away all chances [illegible] for Governor [illegible] election of a governor [illegible] by the defeat of the party at the polls in November.

LYNN SOLID FOR MORAN; CONNERY SEES VICTORY

Lynn, Aug. 18.—William P. Connery, leading Democrat in this city, stated tonight that the twenty-two Lynn delegates to the Democratic State convention would vote solidly for the nomination of District Attorney John B. Moran of Boston for Governor. He says that Mr. Moran will surely be nominated and that nothing can prevent his election. Mr. Connery said to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN:

"The fostering of the candidacy of Whitney and Sullivan will not detract from the support to be given the people's choice, John B. Moran. I believe the people of this State are aroused as they have seldom been and are ready for a change on Beacon Hill. They want a man now who goes into office avowedly to enforce all of the laws in a fearless and honest manner.

"The principal issue of this campaign will be [illegible] lines of corporate wealth versus [illegible] The people will [illegible] the office with the interests [illegible] and the promise to enforce the laws.

People Are Aroused.

"It is plainly [illegible] be a revelation for [illegible] tive information that he has aroused great interest among this class. We can no longer remain indifferent to the rapid encroaching of corporate wealth and the domination of the trusts. The people are fully awake to the situation now, and I am sure will look upon the candidacy of Whitney and Sullivan with nothing short of contempt.

"How can Whitney with his vast holdings in corporations be expected to carry out the pledges of the party when the people want a remedy from the trusts. Can you expect him to bite off his own [illegible] with the corporate interests [illegible] if shorn of personal interest [illegible] of the wealth he represents?

"Will Not Injure Moran."

"Whitney and Sullivan as a choice will not injure in any way the chance of Moran. On the contrary, I believe they will help Moran to victory.

"The manner in which Moran has [illegible] duties of his present official position has placed certainly all the support [illegible] before.

"Moran has set an example to the young [illegible] District Attorney [illegible] manner as to leave no doubt [illegible] Governor he will wage the [illegible] fight against all law- [illegible] irrespective of position or person.

"[illegible] say Moran lacks the courage [illegible] convictions. He has proved [illegible] amply and I know he will do [illegible] he promises. He [illegible] vote for District Attorney [illegible] Moran."

POLICE PURSUING GANG OF THEIVES

Somerville police are actively engaged in seeking to break up a gang of thieves who have successfully engineered a fourth robbery in the last forty-eight hours. The house of William Dane, No. 27 Medford street, the second-story apartment in a two-family residence, was entered by means of skeleton keys, and over $100 worth of jewelry stolen.

Mrs. Dane was away from home for a part of the afternoon and upon her return found her apartments in confusion. The following articles were missed: One gold watch, a handsome gold ring, a gold brooch, gold neck chain, gold band ring, gold enameled ring and a pair of fine opera glasses.

AUTO WRECKED IN GASOLENE BLOW-UP

[illegible] explosion of a tank of gasolene [illegible] belonging to Hery M. Max [illegible] representative of Lynn [illegible] damaged at King's Beach [illegible] yesterday afternoon. The [illegible] was in front of a garage and [illegible] supplied with gasolene by Fred [illegible] when the explosion occurred. [illegible] was badly burned about the hands while attempting to put out the blaze. The Lynn fire department was summoned, but after a long run found nothing to do.

OIL KING LOSES BATTLE OF MILLIONS

Wild Stock Market Sees Harriman Best Rockefeller in War on Pacifics.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Aug. 18.—[illegible] that the tremendous rise in Union and Southern Pacific stocks is the outcome of a pitched battle between John D. Rockefeller and E. H. Harriman Wall street [illegible] bought the securities to lay.

The floor of the stock exchange witnessed a day of such excitement as has not been seen since the days of the Northern Pacific corner in 1901.

It was reported [illegible] New York today that John D. Rockefeller [illegible] home at Cleveland [illegible] interpreted this [illegible] Pacific stocks [illegible] that John D. Rockefeller [illegible] "went short," this [illegible] a decline in Union and Southern Pacific and that only recently did they begin to "cover" their "short" interest.

Expected Partial Panic.

It was stated in Wall street that the Standard Oil people expected a partial panic [illegible] from their [illegible] on President [illegible] as retaliation for the attitude of President Roosevelt toward Standard Oil.

[illegible] Union Pacific stock soared [illegible] points to 185, a new high record, while Southern Pacific [illegible] points to 90¾, also a new high mark.

The rush of buying orders was like a torrent. Brokers seemed utterly regardless of the prices that would have to be paid for the stocks. Under this bull boom the Pacific securities shot upward a point and in some instances even more at a time.

Big Profits for the Kings.

About $3,500,000 worth of Southern Pacific stock changed hands within a few moments while $3,00,000 of the Union Pacific securities was sold almost as the market opened. The [illegible] more wildly right after the opening. The [illegible] orders increased and the general excitement on the floor of the exchange grew with them. The prices fluctuated a whole point between sales.

With the furious bull [illegible] in the Harriman stocks, the other issues in the list also went up sharply. Pennsylvania in sales of 10,000 shares at the opening went up two points to 143½. Smelters rose 1⅞ points to 167 and Amalgamated Copper gained a point on sales at 106¾.

The profits of Edward H. Harriman and his friend, together with Sir Edward Cassell, who has been doing a little business in Southern Pacific for King Edward, were increased by several million by today's advance. King Edward's filler is said to have netted the royal pocketbook many thousand dollars.

When the gavel fell at 12 o'clock 1,633,300 shares [illegible] bonds, breaking the high record of February 25, 1905, when 1,272,8[illegible] shares were traded in.

HOTEL FIREBUG IN QUINCY SOUGHT BY POLICE.

The police of Quincy are looking for a firebug, who, they believe, set three fires, which were discovered in the Crescent Hotel, Quincy.

There were more than twenty five guests in the hotel at the time.

A strange man was seen coming from the hotel by Inspector of Police Daniel McKay and Patrolman Harry J. Mathews, who were a short distance away. They chased the man for a block, when Dr. E. H. Bushnell, a prominent physician, joined them. In the darkness the officers mistook the physician for the man whom they were chasing, and the stranger got away. When the firemen arrived the guests who had retired became excited but their fright subsided when they learned that the fires had done little damage.

The first fire was discovered by the chef. He smelled smoke, and when he went to the cellar to investigate, found that a mattress in one corner was ablaze.

A minute or two later one of the guests, on going into the parlor, found that a curtain was on fire, and then another curtain in the dining room was discovered to be burning.

When Inspector McKay and Patrolman Mathews heard the alarm of fire their suspicions turned toward the stranger whom they had seen coming from the hotel and run down the street.

He had gone only a short distance and they started after him. The guests of the hotel who were sitting on the porch joined in the chase. Dr. Bushnell was also on his porch and saw the stranger pass his house. Seeing the crowd of citizens and officers coming Dr. Bushnell joined them. He had run out a short distance when the officers overtook him. After his identity was learned he was released.

SAY BURGLAR IN JAIL IS BIGAMIST

Bennington, Vt., Aug. 18.—Fred Butler of Schenectady, N. Y., was yesterday sentenced to eighteen months in State prison for burglary. Two years ago he came here and married Miss Lillian Newton, daughter of a local business man. The marriage was opposed by the parents, and later Butler left the State. It was then reported that he was living with a former wife.

How Whitney Stands Accused at the Bar of Public Opinion

HENRY M. WHITNEY has been accused at the State House of setting aside on the books of his New England Gas & Coke Company $1,000,000 for the purpose of bribing the Massachusetts Legislature.

He has been accused of creating the most monstrous machinery ever produced for corrupting and debauching law-makers.

He has been called the leading representative in Massachussetts of the vicious system of lobbying legislation.

5TH REGIMENT ON WAY TO THE CANADIAN CAPITAL

British Societies From Boston and Providence Also Go to Take Part in Big Ottawa Parade.

The Fifth Regiment, M. V. M., is now on the way to Ottawa, Canada, where it will be the guest of the Forty-third Regiment, the Duke of Cornwall's Own Rifles. Both Colonel Oakes of the Fifth and Bandmaster Flouton of the Fifth Regiment band of Waltham deny there is any truth in the story published in the Ottawa Journal to the effect that the American musicians would not parade with their regiment if the Forty-third [illegible] were in the line of march. The alleged reason given by the Canadian newspaper is that the Forty-third band had done something to disqualify in labor union standing.

Colonel Oakes said: "Whatever our hosts [illegible] I am [illegible] amused at such a story."

Bandmaster Flouton said:

"I know nothing of the story. My band will certainly march with the Fifth Regiment under any and all conditions. The union rules provide that a non-union band attached to a regiment as a regimental band has no effect upon other musicians marching in the same line. Regimental bands which are non-union are not included in the general provisions against non-union musicians."

Another Boston Organization.

In the Ottawa parade in which the Fifth will appear will be another Boston organization represented. Nearly fifty men from this city who are members of the British Naval and Military Veterans' [illegible] Massachusetts, under [illegible] Smith [illegible] veterans from Providence and Fall River. The Boston [illegible] South station and marched across [illegible] with them to the [illegible] for Ottawa was [illegible] the Fifth [illegible] destination.

A [illegible] Duke of Cornwall's Own Rifles visited Boston, and the Massachusetts [illegible] and former British soldiers [illegible] to former guests. The visit of Yankee soldiers to Ottawa has caused much enthusiasm there, and the Canadians have planned to overwhelm the Massachusetts men with hospitality.

15,000 Men to Be in Line.

The parade in Ottawa tomorrow will be one of the greatest ever known in the Canadian city. There will be 15,000 men in line and the Governor General will review it. In the evening a grand ball will be given. The banquet at the Hotel Victoria will be another feature for which great preparations have been made. Only King Edward and President Roosevelt will be toasted [illegible] when Lieutenant Colonel [illegible] Forty-third [illegible] their [illegible] and Canadian soldiers and all others will rise and sing "God Save the King" and "My Country 'tis of Thee."

Among those who have been invited are Sir Frederick Borden, Canadian Minister of Militia; Brigadier General Hon. Matthew Lord Aylmer, Brigadier General Percy [illegible] Lake, C. B., C. M. G., Chief of Staff; Colonel Pinault, C. M. G., Deputy Minister; Colonel D. Macdonald, I. S. O., Q. M. G.; Colonel W. D. Gordon, O. C.; [illegible] W. P. Hodgins, D. O. C. The commanding officers of all the local units [illegible] twenty, will also be present [illegible] the Mayor, the president of the Ottawa Electric Company and the president of the Hull Electric Company.

The British veterans are to stop in Montreal on Tuesday while on the way home. Among the Boston men in this party are John Black, Charles Powers, Thomas May, Captain R. H. Bryant, Captain J. V. Skillings, Captain William McManus, Lieutenant G. B. Cross, F. S. Carter, William Shedder, Henry Ma[illegible], T. W. Preston, Sergeant Major Hon[illegible], J. H. Dives, Joseph Clancy, Peter [illegible] N. Stirling, William Pitt[illegible], P. Wright, A. Stuart, Wilson Reg[illegible], H. Teel, Sidney Yokes, George Frith, Edwin Bon, J. F. Crawford, J. P. Walters, A. Brown, William Renton, A. D. Hepworth, George Kitchell, G. W. Coullard, J. W. McIntosh, C. A. Harding, G. A. Sleep, H. J. Perry, F. F. Marroway, J. A. Davis and J. H. Kennedy.

LAW TO KNOCK OUT DUMMY HOLDING CO.'S URGED.

A law to knock out the dummy holding companies known as "voluntary associations," will be one of the most important bills presented to the next Legislature.

The latest move of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, in adding another to its many trolley holding rings, together with the inaction of Attorney General Dana Malone, has simply made it imperative that drastic legislation, intended to put an end to this merging farce in Massachusetts, should be enacted, or, at least, offered for enactment.

No one can be found who is so guileless as to believe that the New Haven road has sold out its holdings in Massachusetts trolley lines, just because President Mellen has given notice that another holding company has been formed, which, he hopes, will some day offer some of the stocks it controls to the public.

Victory for Mellen.

Everyone who knows anything about the railroad and street railway merging game believes President Mellen has simply played leap frog with the Attorney General and won the game, for the time being, at least.

Despite Mellen's boast before the joint committee of the Legislature that his railroad had done nothing wrong, and that the very best counsel had advised him he had absorbed entirely lawfully; and despite the statement which he solemnly made to the committee that he was anxious to have the matter settled in the courts and despite his promise that he would honestly divest the railroad of all trolley holdings in this Commonwealth in the event of a decision against the railroad, he has now taken a decidedly new tack, crawled on his boast and moved to keep out of the courts.

Legislation Demanded.

The above is the substance of many opinions from members of the Legislature. And the consensus of opinion is that there must be some law to determine whether Representative "Bill" Turtle of Pittsfield, House chairman of the railroad committee, is right in his opinion that the Legislature is not smart enough for the railroads and will always be at least one year behind in the effort to catch up with them with controlling laws.

SCARED THIEF DROPS JEWELS; GETS CASH

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 18.—George E. Whitney, a wealthy mill owner and one of the most prominent turfmen in New England, saved a case of valuable jewels yesterday by shooting at a burglar whom Mrs. Whitney had discovered in the house. Mr. Whitney's shot did not hit the thief, but he dropped the jewels, making away with $200 in money.

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE TIDE IS FAST FLOODING THE STATE

Vigorous Branches Organized Last Week In Taunton, New Bedford and Lowell—State President Osgood Declares Membership Will Include 20,000 Names Inside of Six Weeks. Wage Earners' Clubs Declare for Alliance In Fight for Honesty.

"Before October 1 there will be 20,000 members of the Independence League in Massachusetts, and I shall be surprised if I am not putting the figure very low at that," said President William N Osgood of the State League last night, after hearing reports from a large number of towns and cities in which either organizations have been already formed or are in process of formation.

100 CHARTER MEMBERS AT NEW BEDFORD.

Three unusually enthusiastic leagues were formed during the week just passed—in New Bedford, Lowell and Taunton. In New Bedford there were more than 100 charter members at the initial meeting and no greater enthusiasm has ever been displayed at a political meeting in the city. The principles of the league and mention of men who indorse them were cheered to the echo, and the personnel ity of the men elected to serve as officers gave deep satisfaction to all present.

The State secretary has received communications from dozens of cities and towns throughout the State, asking for literature, for membership blanks and for assistance in perfecting organizations. Every moment that he has been able to spare from his routine duties during the past week he has spent in the field in reply to these requests, giving local enthusiasts such assistance as was in his power

WAGE WORKERS DEEPLY INTERESTED.

In every league formed thus far the local members of labor unions have taken a deep interest, and the names of the most prominent representatives of organized labor are to be found in every list of officers. In towns where Wage Earners' Clubs have already been formed the members have similiy allied themselves with the Independence League also and in places where only the Independence League has been organized the members announce that as many of them as are eligible purpose to join the Wage Earners.

A cordial spirit exists between the two organizations, each working to attain similar ends. This was especially demonstrated at the Wage Earners' Club meeting at Wells Memorial building, Boston, Friday night, when a committee, including President John E. Potts, First Vice-President Jeremiah J Donovan, Second Vice-President Charles E. O'Donnell and Secretary Harry Noble, was appointed to arrange for a meeting with the Independence League officials and arrange for co-operation in the joint work.

PLAN ALLIANCE IN FIGHT AGAINST GRAFT.

A member of the executive committee of the State Independence League said last evening that his body had not yet been called by the Wage Earners' committee, but that he knew the League would be glad to meet the Wage Earners, and that there could be no doubt of a harmonious and co-operative plan of work.

JOSEPH C. DESMOND

SNAG IN CONVENTION FOR QUINCY'S PLATFORM.

No matter who is named by the executive committee of the State machine, as the platform writer for the Democrats, he will only be a figurehead. Josiah Quincy has made up his mind that he will draft the document to which the chairman of the resolutions committee and the members at large, appointed by Quincy, will affix their names

If the two wings of the party were not in battle array that program could be carried out all right and the Quincy platform as swallowed by the convention under the label of another name But as it really looks now, the Quincy platform will be turned down, no matter what the label it bears if the full committee approves it, which is the somewhat doubtful, if not treylse to bumps" in the convention

It is expected that George Fred Williams will be there with the Moran brand of platform and will offer it as a substitute for the Quincy kind of canned goods in the political principle line. In the opinion of those of the political wiseacres of the State who will have the majority of the committee with him that the Quincy platform will be thrown into the waste basket resemble planks, color and all.

Fight on the Platform.

There is going to be a fight on the plat form question as well as on the chairmanship of the convention. That much has just occurred to Quincy, and he has made up his mind not to entrust to anyone else the task of trying to draw up a platform that will please all parties. He would like to persuade ex-Governor Douglas to sign his name to the Quincy platform, but he is not sanguine of doing this.

If the committee on resolutions rejects the Moran platform presented by Will iams, it will be submitted to the convention and then the fight will be on in earnest

Quincy has a new scheme for settling the vexing question of a permanent chairman. The full committee has declared for Quincy, but Governor Douglas and Quincy has decided to name the man for the executive committee after the platform. If the caucuses show an overwhelming number of delegates for Moran the Quincy selection will be anybody who wants the job, if the delegates are largely in favor of Whitney, Quincy will suggest Congressman McNary

Quincy May Keep Gavel.

If it looks like a close fight in the convention he is Quincy's present intention to hold on to the gavel and act as the permanent chairman himself. Two or three others, whom he would like to see in into the chair in the event of a tight pinch, have given him to understand that they will have nothing to do with the seat of trouble and are well respected in the convention. Both are hard workers and are throwing much effort toward making the Independence League a success.

John F. McBride, chairman of the executive committee, is an astute politician and one very popular with all classes He was president of the "Flying Wedge" movement two years ago and was through out the entire campaign a formidable aspect. McBride is secretary of the local aerie of Eagles and is a member of the Typographic Union.

With McNary out of the race with the fight between the forces of Joseph O'Connell and Senator Edward Logan has become sharper Editor John T. Merrigan, the latest aspirant in the field, will have a hard time in South Boston and John J. Curley, brother of the late Dan from Ward 17, will keep some strength away from O'Connell

Here at Holy, the Republican candidate in the tenth, says he is holding his forces well in hand and confidently expects that some Democrats will vote for him He says he would not be surprised if most of McNary's friends indorsed him on the Hot Fight in Fifth.

Senators Lane and Sodethith are getting hotter every day as the fight for the nomination in the Eleventh district progresses Many Republicans in the district are saying openly that they will not vote for either of them but will support Andrew J Peters for mayor and help him to defeat the Democratic nominee

In the Fifth district the hottest kind of a fight is being waged between Congressman Richard H Frank E. Brimmins for the Republican nomination Both are hard workers and the chances are probably in favor of the present incumbent Mayor Casey, of Lowell, is a friend of Brimmins and it is said that Friends are working the district with that in view, but hopeful of his success

BLAME CATS FOR SCARLET FEVER

Holyoke, Aug. 18. Health authorities blame cats for the spread of scarlet fever, which is almost epidemic here. The Board of Aldermen will be asked to take some action regarding cats at the next meeting, but the city fathers are in a quandary as to what can be done. One suggests that cats which go from house to house should be kept in quarantine districts. It is believed that house cats will be asked to keep all cats indoor

SERVANT GIRLS AT A PREMIUM IN DENVER

Denver, Col., Aug. 18 – Here are some of the things Denver matrons are promising servant girls, but the girls are not even tempted by these promises

"Thirty dollars a month; the best parlor to sit in, off one day a week; off two nights a week; time for church services on Sundays; sweetheart two calls a week; best bed in house; may flirt with the policeman.

And they can't get them at that

"We have ordered seven servants girls, or girls for general housework, on our books since May 2, and cannot fill them," says the Denver Employment Agency clerks "Good girls are fed like dogs; they get a good house and $30 a month and the best of everything in a private house."

NEW BEDFORD MEN EARNEST IN BIG FIGHT AGAINST GRAFT

New Bedford, Aug 18. "This is to be a fight of principle, not graft," said Fred erick W. McGuinness, of the New Bedford Branch of the Massachusetts Independence League to-day:

Every man in New Bedford who knows Mr. McGuinness—and that means almost every man in New Bedford—knows that if this were not true Mr. McGuinness would not be at the head of the ticket. His election at the organization meeting, Thursday, was by enthusiastic acclamation.

An important addition to the ticket was made last evening, when Benjamin F. Sykes, president of the Wage Earners' Club in this city, inscribed his name on the membership roll, securing independent control in the executive committee, and Mr. Sykes was unanimously elected to fill it

Favors Alliance.

"I think the League should be joined by every member of the Wage Earners' Club," he said to-night. "More good can be accomplished by two forces, striving for the same object, than by one. Both organizations have the same principles and should be supported by all honest citizens, irrespective of their political affiliations."

The formation of the League, with a list of original members comprising men prominent in business and associations of working men, has created great attention in the city. The committee carrying the membership rolls has been almost besieged by the number desiring to join It is already apparent that the New Bedford League will be a banner one in the State, in point of membership at least.

The principles of the League, which favor public ownership of public utilities, the elimination of graft and grafters and the seating on the legislature of honest men who will not bow to the dictation and will of the corporate interests, made a big impression on many of this city, who have the spirit of independent thought and action so peculiar to politics, in fife.

Fight Against Greed.

Both ends of the city are getting into line, and Secretary Joseph C. Desmond declares the membership will number thousands before many weeks are over.

The fight against the greed of boss ism and graft is not confined to New Bedford to the Independence League. The Wage Earners have thrown down the gauntlet of graft and corruption with a platform very similar in its aims and purposes to that of the Independence League At an enthusiastic meeting of the Wage Earners' Club, held Friday night, the corporate interests of the city, whose organized representatives are likely to experience a hard time. The local Independence League is particularly fortunate in the selection of its officers, who are representative men, well known for their business integrity or for their prominence in labor matters. The league is strictly non partizan and as such is being joined by Democrats, Republicans and Socialists.

Secretary Desmond is well known in New Bedford. Naturally an earnest and considerate worker, he is throwing all his accustomed energy into the independence movement and is meeting with marked success.

John H. Jean, member of the executive committee, is one of the most influential men in Ward 1. Mr. Jean is a Republican, but is in hearty accord with the principles of the League, and his attitude will probably have much influence with the Wage Earners' Committee of Fifteen Alfred, who took upon Mr. Jean as one of their leaders.

"Flying Wedge" Chiefs.

Matthew Hart, on the executive committee, is secretary of the Weavers' Union and an influential labor man. He was secretary of the "flying wedge movement which resulted in Douglas' overwhelming victory over Bates.

Thomas J. Meaney, who is also on the executive committee, is one of the best known Democrats in the city. He has a large following in Ward six and is an indefatigable worker. Mr. Meaney is engaged in the real estate business and his probity is well recognized.

Frank G. Wood and George R Lane are prominent members of the Farmer's Union and are well respected in the community. Both are hard workers and are throwing much effort toward making the Independence League a success.

John F. McBride, chairman of the executive committee, is an astute politician and one very popular with all classes He was president of the "Flying Wedge" movement two years ago and was through out the entire campaign a formidable aspect. McBride is secretary of the local aerie of Eagles and is a member of the Typographic Union and President of the C. L. U. but you will find that Taunton will do her share toward making the State organization large and strong.

The executive committee is planning to hold a public meeting within a fortnight or so, at which the principles of the league will be discussed by local and out-of-town speakers

'NOT A GRAFTER IN THE RANKS' SAYS TAUNTON LEAGUE MAN

Taunton, Aug. 18.—"We feel pretty good about the Taunton Independence League in its starting," said one of the executive committee today. The first twenty-five members are almost equally divided between Democrats and Republicans. There's a machine politician in the lot. Some of the best-known and most highly trusted officials of labor unions have joined. Our president is the president of the Central Labor Union and the secretary is a member of the executive committee of the wage earners. We haven't got a grafter on the list, and we won't have one. And when election comes you'll hear from the Taunton Independence League for honest government."

The member who was quoted was very enthusiastic, but hardly more so than the others. Secretary Thomas Houston has been busy giving out pledges and receiving them back signed, and his membership rolls are assuming a formidable aspect.

"We're not talking much," said President Charles H Kidder, who is a member of the Typographical Union and President of the C. L. U., "but you will find that Taunton will do her share toward making the State organization large and strong."

The executive committee is planning to hold a public meeting within a fortnight or so, at which the principles of the league will be discussed by local and out-of-town speakers

LOWELL LEAGUE PLANS BIG PUBLIC RALLY ON THURSDAY

Lowell, Aug. 18.—Plans for a public meeting at which the principles of the league shall be set forth by speakers from in and out of town have been made by the Lowell Independence League, which has organized as a branch of the Independence League of Massachusetts The meeting is to be held on Thursday evening next, and President John J. Mahoney says he has no doubt that the membership will be greatly increased as a result.

The new league has a charter membership of considerably over fifty. "The reason there weren't more at first is because we couldn't get around to see all said one of the officers. "Nobody whom we want is refusing to join. They realize too well, from the example we are witnessing in New York, how powerful for good such an organization as this can become.

President Osgood of the State League, a well known lawyer of Boston, who resides in this city, was present at the opening meeting and made an address. He is also expected to be present at the Tuesday night meet-

RETURNING TEACHERS CHARMED WITH HISTORIC SCENES IN EUROPE

Letters Vividly Tell of Visits to World-Famed Cathedrals and Art Galleries, and the Marvelous Sights of Paris and London—Some of the Happy Tourists Now Homeward Bound

Twelve of the twenty teachers of Boston and New England who composed the BOSTON AMERICAN Shakespearian Tour to England and Paris are delightedly telling their friends and acquaintances about the splendid time they had abroad and the sights they saw on the trip, while eight others who [illegible] tinued to take a little private excursion of their own to Ireland are on their [illegible].

Tonight or tomorrow the ten teachers of the European tour will arrive in Boston on the staunch steamship Caledonian. The ten teachers of the Grand Tour are today in mountain-enthroned Geneva, in the heart of the Alps. They arrived there yesterday. Tomorrow they will go by a fast day express train to wonderful Paris.

HOME AFTER DELIGHTFUL TRIP.

[illegible] teachers of the Shakespearian Tour party who are at home are Helen M. [illegible]gan, Perry school, Somerville; Katherine Y. Prescott, Reddington, Swampscott; Madeline R. Driscoll, Lewis, Roxbury; Susan B. Gould, Lafayette, Everett; Ellenette Pillsbury, Adams, East Boston; Mary A. Haverty, Dudley, Roxbury; Edith Farrington, Ames, Lowell; Alice J. O'Gara, Maple Street, Spencer; Nellie E. Carroll, Northville, East Bridgewater; Mabelle M. McKeon, Oliver, Bristol, R. I.; Beatrice May, Union, St. Johnsbury, Vt., and Nellie M. Worth, High, Brewer, Me.

The eight teachers of the party who decided to extend their vacation and make a little tour of Ireland are: Misses Mary B. Tenney, Williams School, Boston; Elizabeth Rogers, Prescott, Charlestown; Minnie E. Donovan, Lincoln, Quincy; W. May Nash, Harvard, Cambridge; Nellie G. Connors, Perkins, Brockton; Leonora Teasdale, Walnut, Clinton, Bessie L. Churbuck, Indian Neck, East Wareham, and Gertrude T. Brennan, Hope Street, Woonsocket, R. I.

LETTERS TELL OF TOUR.

The twelve teachers of the first party to return declare one and all that they never had such splendid or profitable days in their lives as those they spent on the ocean palaces and in Europe as the guests of the BOSTON AMERICAN. Several of them have written letters expressing their gratification at being able to share in the joys and benefits of the great holiday abroad.

So thoroughly did these twenty young women fraternize and so much did they find in common that while in Chester, England, they formed a secret society which they styled the "T. R. R's." They will meet every year in Boston to commemorate the pleasures and experiences of their rare trip abroad.

FIND HOUSES OF COMMONS AND LORDS IN SESSION

Regarding [illegible] vacation which the teachers had abroad, Miss Mary A. Haverty of the Dudley School, Roxbury, writes:

"On the way to Liverpool we had the most delightful trip, very few of the girls being sick. We had a dance and a concert on board so we managed to pass the time very quickly and pleasantly.

"Arriving in Liverpool we had our baggage examined, and all through the trip the custom house officials treated us with the utmost consideration and courtesy.

Crypt at St. Paul's.

"The crypt of St. Paul's beautiful church is very interesting on account of the tombs of Nelson, Wellington, Millais, [illegible] and such men.

"We visited the State and National Galleries, the British Museum and the Wallace collection of rare pictures and priceless [illegible] manuscript, etc. The only [illegible] in going through the [illegible] and museums was that [illegible] enough to feel satisfied [illegible] I think that the most [illegible] could have spent several [illegible] the pictures and [illegible] But it was inevitable [illegible] up and doing all the [illegible]

In Westminster Abbey.

"[illegible] Albert Memorial is most wonderful and [illegible] pressive. On and around it are [illegible]xquisite bits of statuary. We were [illegible] one day to see the King [illegible] members of the royal family [illegible] foreign princes who were visiting at Buckingham Palace.

"Westminster Abbey is very interesting and very beautiful. We were very much interested in the coronation chair, which [illegible] years old, and the tomb of [illegible] and Mary and many of the [illegible] and of such men as Addison, [illegible] and Dickens.

"Through the kindness of a friend whom we met on board, we had a very delightful trip to Hampton Court, coming home by the Thames, passing by some beautiful houseboats and exquisitely kept lawns and little tea-houses. The scenery was beautiful.

Shopping in London.

"We were fortunate in being able to see the Houses of Commons and Lords while in session. We saw many noted men in both houses, and, after visiting all the apartments of interest we had tea on the the terrace facing the Thames.

"After we had done some shopping in London we embarked for Paris, filled with anticipation and expectation. I think we liked London a little better because it seemed more like home to us. London is beautiful, but Paris is so much more artistic in her buildings and general surroundings. Her streets and buildings are intensely interesting, because of so much that is tragic, sad and stirring in her history.

Drive Through Paris.

"Our drive through Paris on the way to the chapel of Louis IX. was very beautiful. The chapel has the wonderful stained windows which luckily escaped the fury of the mob.

"The Supreme Court of Appeals, in which the famous Dreyfus case was recently settled, has the most gorgeous ceilings and walls and is sumptuously furnished. In front of the Louvre is the site of the massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day. One would need pages to describe the Louvre. There are many students copying the masterpieces and some of them have done very fine work.

"We saw the statue of Lafayette near by, which was presented by the school children of America. We visited the Gobelin tapestry works. A man can only do a square inch a day and it sometimes takes a year for a square yard. The Pantheon, in which Victor Hugo is buried, and in which are some famous paintings, is most imposing.

Famous Notre Dame.

"We visited several churches, including the Cathedral of Notre Dame, the Madeline and the tomb of Napoleon. The day we spent at Versailles was one to be treasured forever in our memories. We felt as though we were living in another age.

"In England we visited Warwick, the quaint old town of Chester, the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's home. When we arrived we were very tired, indeed, and needed the long rest we had while sailing home. Our homeward journey was just as pleasant as our outward voyage. We had a very interesting field day aboard, with all sorts of races.

"We were all delighted when we saw land, and were quite satisfied to be home again. The BOSTON AMERICAN certainly treated us splendidly, and I am very grateful, indeed, for the interesting and profitable trip."

SOME OF THE TEACHERS VIEWING PARIS FROM TOWER OF FAMOUS NOTRE DAME

ALPS IN MAJESTY TOWER OVER PATH OF TRAVELERS

In a [illegible] letter written from the Hotel Ro[illegible], Lucerne, on July 29, Miss Anna [illegible] Ma[illegible]re, of the Henry Vane School, of West Roxbury, a member of the Grand Tour, says:

"We left Heidelberg, Saturday morning last and reached Lucerne at 4 o'clock. Our ride from Bale was through the mountains. The scenery was extremely beautiful. The Alps rose above us on both sides, so high that [illegible] and [illegible] reflecting the mountains. We passed through two long tunnels, one of which took us four minutes to pass through. When we neared Lucerne our guide pointed out to us [illegible] Mt. R[illegible] which we are to ascend to-morrow. It is 5,100 feet high. We are to go to the foot of it by boat, then by rail to the summit.

Mountains Everywhere.

"Lucerne is a very beautiful and thrifty city. No matter in what direction one looks, one sees the beautiful mountains towering above one. The city is built around the pretty lake of the same name, with the mountains in the background. The hotels are the most beautiful we have seen, and they are all crowded with tourists. The strangest thing about all of these foreign cities is the fact that the shops are open on Sunday, some for part of the day and others all day. It makes it very convenient for tourists who have only Sunday in a city.

"Here we saw the famous lion of Lucerne cut out of solid rock. The expression on its face is almost human. [illegible] a glacier [illegible] The rocks which were left by the glacier are as smooth as glass from the action of the water. Here in the solid rock are holes from ten to twenty feet [illegible] by the constant grinding of [illegible] the force of the water whirling [illegible] the rock in motion.

Show Petrified Leaves.

"Many of the rocks show petrified leaves and fossils of sea shells. It is interesting to know that Switzerland was once a tropical country, as the petrified palm leaves prove. This glacial rock has been made into a very charming rustic garden, with pretty little seats and arches. Here also is built a high tower, from the top of which one gets a very fine view of the city.

"When we are en route to Interlaken we are to see a real glacier, then we shall have a better idea of the wonders of Nature."

WAGE DISPUTE TIES UP WORK ON ARMORY

Providence, Aug. 18.—Because the brick layers union has determined that its members employed on the new million-dollar postoffice building and the almost equally expensive State armory shall be paid off Saturdays instead of Wednesdays as at present, work on those imposing structures is tied up for an indefinite period.

There is no dissatisfaction with the wages paid nor with the hours, but the men claim there is a principle involved in the question as to which shall be the one to say when they shall receive compensation for their work—themselves or the concerns employing them.

The contract for the postoffice calls for the completion of the brick and stone work by December 31 of this year. The contractors claim the strike will not embarass [illegible] as they are so far ahead on the work that a few weeks delay will make no difference.

WOMAN FIREBUG GOES TO JAIL FOR A YEAR

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 18.—Mrs. Cara Baines has been sentenced to one year in the penitentiary in Polk County, Tenn., on the charge of attempting to burn her husband's property, after she had made other attempts.

TORN-UP STREETS STOP LABOR PARADE

Providence, R. I., Aug. 18.—The officials of the Labor Day parade are bitter against the Rhode Island Street Railway Company because of the apparent disregard of the effect upon the Labor Day parade that will follow the tearing up of Westminster street for several hundred feet of its length in the heart of the business district.

Westminster street is the main street of the city, and is always included in the route of a parade. The Labor Day leaders were specially desirous of passing through the business district, where many members of the parading organizations are employed as clerks and in other capacities in the big department stores and mercantile establishments.

GREAT FORTUNES MADE IN WILD ADVANCE IN STOCKS

INSIDERS DENY THEY ARE SELLING STOCKS

BY THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

New York, Aug. 18.—Leaders of the present sensational advance in the stock market deny indignantly that they are distributing stocks, although all signs point to the contrary. They say they are not selling to the public and don't want the public in Wall street for a year. They say, and by they is meant "The Seven," that the public will add more value to the stock market if it will remain quietly at work on the farms and in the factories piling up wealth.

Leading bankers insist that the present prices do not by any means mark the value of securities. This is true in many instances, and the course of prices vindicates the argument, which for several months was made to look fallacious, that honesty in the conduct of corporations is a bull argument. That argument was originally enunciated in this column, but the campaign of "The Seven," which finally accomplished its purpose of making the Federal Government promise not to prosecute the trust criminals personally, made the argument look ridiculous until now, that financial markets are resuming the normal condition. While there will undoubtedly be tight money this Autumn, the enormous value of the crops must not be lost sight of. Wall street proposes to discount the value of these crops early in the season and to move them later.

There is evidence that the public is beginning to buy stocks, being incited by the great profits that have come suddenly to the insiders. But the public buying is not great enough yet to make possible the unloading of stocks on a wholesale scale. The ground work of a bull campaign is so thoroughly laid that barring disaster even the most conservative bankers admit that the rise will be continued much farther. Some deals of monumental importance are yet to be announced.

Remarkable Scenes in the Market as Result of Pacific Railroad Dividends.

The effect of the astounding dividend declarations in Union Pacific and Southern Pacific was continued in the stock market yesterday. Amid scenes of the wildest excitement stocks jumped up from one to five points farther. After two hours of feverish energy had subsided and those who participated paused to take breath and reflect upon what had happened it was decided that the market of Friday and Saturday was one of the most remarkable in the history of the Street. Some traders even predicted that it was the inauguration of a record-breaking bull movement.

There will be too much opportunity to take profits during the next [illegible] days for the upward movement to be continued without any hindrance but the indications are, nevertheless, that the leaders will take advantage of present conditions to raise still higher the price levels.

The announcement Friday that Union Pacific had been placed on a 10 per cent basis and Southern Pacific on a 5 per cent basis did more to lift stocks than all the assurances of [illegible] could have done in a year. The market [illegible] of its own volition. The floors of the exchange were crowded; on Friday there was the most active full day market for weeks, and yesterday the short session saw the most active Saturday market on record. Total sales Friday were 2,524,000 shares and yesterday there were 1,003,000 shares. The latter is an enormous amount for a Saturday. Of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific alone there were sold 487,700 shares, and this figure would be fairly large for the entire exchange on a summer Saturday.

"The sudden rise in the market certainly came unexpectedly. Deadly dullness and heavy stocks usually prevail at this time of year. The fact is that the market leaders have executed a "coup." When they returned mysteriously to Wall Street a few weeks ago, coming from Summer resorts and cooler climes, the market began to rise gradually. As the date of the meeting of the directors of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific approached, the coming of portentous events could be felt in the air.

The "insiders" bought the two stocks quietly. Union Pacific has always been a market leader, and the buying of it did not attract outside attention. The unexplained activity of Southern Pacific drew a few into line, but it is safe to say that few other than the chosen bought the two stocks at the low prices. The general run of traders and the outside public will be buying the stocks, of course, now that they have jumped up many points.

As usual the old, wearying story will be repeated. The public buying at top prices, will provide a market for the leaders, who will unload their shares at enormous profits. This will be twice this year that the same thing has happened; in fact, it was done several times during the great bull movement of last Winter, the greatest and most prolonged ever known. History is only repeating itself again in Wall street, and the public is still reading it backward.

As for the dividend declarations themselves [illegible] the insiders undoubtedly [illegible] of them in advance [illegible] point is that action exceeded predictions. As the public had assumed that the predictions were exaggerated the [illegible] the announcements was genuine. A [illegible] force was created. The action of the Harriman roads will provide food for thought for the bears for some time to come. It cannot be digested at once. It affords another evidence of the folly of being bearish on this country's conditions.

The bearish talk, going to the extreme as it did, was not justified any more than extreme bullish talk would be justified now. It was based on the idea that the United States had reached the height of its prosperity, and would steadily sink. The bearish ideas have been exploded. The danger now is that too much reliance will be placed on the market leaders making a continued bull market. They will let the prices go only as high as they want to. The thing to do is to learn when to stop buying and begin to sell.

The two hours of Wall Street trading made a record. Prices went up more, notably more, and closed practically at the best. Union Pacific rose 6⅛, to 185, closing at 184⅛; Southern Pacific ran up 3⅜ more, to 91, closing but ⅜ lower. Other notable gains included Reading, 5, to 139⅝, easing 1 at the close; Pennsylvania 2⅝, to 146; New York Central 1⅛, the crossing of price of New York Central by Pennsylvania is notable. Northern Pacific advanced 3, to 209; Atchison 2⅛, to 99; Amalgamated Copper 3⅝, to 109⅝; United States Steel 1⅝, to 45⅛, and preferred 1⅛, to 108⅛; Louisville & Nashville 2½, to 148⅛; Atlantic Coast 2½, to 146; Canadian Pacific 2⅛, to 169⅝; Jersey Central 4½, to 229⅞; Great Northern preferred 3, to 309⅝; Illinois Central 2¼, to 173⅝; Tennessee Coal & Iron 5, to 160; Smelting 5, to 160; and Sugar 1¾, to 138⅝—these for conspicuous examples.

KING'S BULLETIN

I want to send my weekly financial newspaper free to every investor in corporation securities—to every person with money deposited in banks or trust companies.

"King's Financial Bulletin" is a large 8-page newspaper and is published for and in the interest of honest investors.

It is issued on Saturday of each week and is sent free, postpaid, to all making written request for it.

It is absolutely independent in all things.

It has no advertising space for sale, and is, therefore, in position to hew straight to the line, letting the chips fall where they may.

At all times, in season and out of season, "King's Financial Bulletin" will be found standing for, insisting on and demanding a "square deal" for investors.

It is the personal organ—the special envoy—of a financial agent who believes that Right is Right—who believes that Wrong is Wrong, whether committed by a bank president or a bootblack—who believes that four cents does not begin to represent adequate compensation for the labor of an American dollar a full calendar year—who deplores the fictitious form of speculation fomented by Wall Street and its apostles and disciples—who believes that the trading in stocks on margin is a broad and beaten path that leads more men and women to destruction every year than any other form of gambling—who believes that banks, trust companies and all corporations should be conducted in the interests of the people whose funds make their success possible, whether deposited in vaults in the name of safety or invested in their securities—who believes that the crying need of our country is a clearer understanding of the rights of corporation stockholders, whether the engraved certificates represent a one-share interest in the Billion Dollar Steel Trust or a ten dollar peanut stand.

Always "King's Financial Bulletin" will stand for and commend without favor all things in the world of finance that are Right, and condemn without fear all things that are Wrong.

My hope is that the doctrine of Correct Investing, which I boldly proclaim through this publication from week to week, may touch a responsive chord in the hearts and minds of investors, and to the end that I may be able to render the greatest good to the greatest number, I invite personal correspondence with all interested persons, to whom I will gladly send this liveliest and most vigorous of all financial newspapers, free postpaid, so long as its weekly visits may be desired. No investor should be without it. Write for it today. Address

GIRL OF FIFTEEN ELOPES WITH CHAUFFEUR

Miss Nellie Coyne of Nahant and Edward Williams Wed and in Baltimore.

ASKS HER PARENTS' BLESSING IN LETTER

News has leaked out of the sensational elopement of Miss Nellie Coyne, the fifteen-year old daughter of Patrick Coyne of Nahant, with Edward Williams, a chauffeur of Baltimore, in an auto on Saturday night, July 28. The two are now married, according to a letter received by the girl's mother.

Although the daughter fled with Williams before the very eyes of her parents while they were walking along the Military Way at Bass Point, thronged with people, the parents knew nothing of it, and not until the next day, when the girl did not appear did they report the matter to the police.

When the search was commenced it was learned that Williams was also missing and suspicions were aroused. These were confirmed when the mother received a letter from the young wife in Baltimore announcing their marriage and asking her blessing.

Planned in Advance.

Williams is known to have shown a liking for Miss Coyne when he was here last Summer as chauffeur for the family of D. H. Thomas, a wealthy Summer resident from Baltimore. This Summer Williams did not return with the family, but on the Sunday of the elopement came to Nahant on a visit. It is supposed that the couple had planned beforehand to make this their opportunity.

In the evening Miss Coyne, in company with her parents, went to Bass Point Pier, while strolling along the crowded Midway Williams appeared in an automobile. Watching his opportunity he drove the machine alongside the party and Miss Coyne jumped in and was whirled away. She had no coat on hand and this is one reason that her parents supposed that she had simply gone away with some girl friends. When the next morning she had not arrived home they reported the matter to Chief Larkin, enjoining him to secrecy.

Leave Auto; Take Trolley.

The couple are known to have gone only to Nahant in the auto and from there they took the trolley to Lynn. When the parents first reported the matter to police officers their every effort was to prevent the marriage, but since the mother received the letter from her daughter yesterday she has been disposed to extend to them her forgiveness.

Miss Coyne was in the first year of the High School. She is spoken of among her schoolmates as being very attractive and popular. Her father is a handsome gardener employed by Thomas Noland, a florist. Patrick Coyne and his wife are among the oldest residents of Nahant and are well known among the townfolk.

LAUGHS AT STORY THAT SHE WAS JILTED FOR HEIRESS

Pretty Nell Kilcoyne of Salem Says Stage Romance Became Comedy by Mutual Agreement.

[illegible] Aug. 18.—Miss Mae Kilcoyne [illegible] Salem [illegible] comedy company [illegible] stamped her [illegible] indignation when told the press despatches from California reports that she had been abandoned by a faithless lover was [illegible] Los Angeles [illegible]

[illegible] said Miss Kilcoyne [illegible] Why, the idea [illegible] Joseph Galbraith was free to marry any one he wished.

Galbraith is an actor in Los Angeles and [illegible] Miss Helen Sherman, member of a wealthy family there, on Tuesday last. He and Miss Kilcoyne met as stage folks do, [illegible] for a while it was a happy romance. Galbraith wished to wed the lovely opera singer [illegible] she desired delay. The two had a tiff and parted.

"It is true," said Miss Kilcoyne, whose home is with her parents at No. 19 [illegible] street, Salem, "that Mr. Galbraith and I were engaged and I expected to marry him. But six months ago we broke the engagement. For various reasons, however, I felt it best not to tell my father that everything was over between me and Joe, and so when father told a reporter in Salem that I was engaged he spoke what he believed to be the truth. Six months ago Joe said, 'Why should we wait when we love each other so dearly? Let us get married now.' But I was in mourning for my brother and wished to wait. Joe was an ardent wooer and could not understand. The result of it all was a quarrel, and we gave each other up.

I knew that he knew Miss Sherman when he and I were engaged and I have met the young woman. I heard some time ago that they were engaged, and this is the first I have heard of the marriage. I wish them both all the joy in the world and hope that this story in the newspapers won't cause Mrs. Galbraith any grief. As for me, I am deeply hurt that our engagement should have made so much talk. Really, I do not like notoriety."

Miss Kilcoyne is about twenty-six years old and has been widely known as a sweet contralto singer since she was a child. She then sang often at St. James' parochial school entertainments in Salem and later in the church choir. She joined the chorus of an opera company in Boston and has been with the Herald Square opera company.

$8,000 BLAZE WIPES OUT WAREHOUSES AT MEDFIELD.

Medfield, Aug 18.—One of the most destructive fires this town has ever had wiped out the grain warehouses of Blood Brothers late this afternoon, and only the gallant work of the firemen saved the entire business section of the town from destruction. Many houses caught fire but none was badly damaged.

The cause of the fire is said to have been sparks from a locomotive which set some bailed hay afire. The doors of the place, which is close to the railroad, were left open at various times.

The large barn owned by the Grant heirs, directly across the street, was on fire several times and would never have been saved had not a stream been put on from the Mitchell hat factory.

Two horses were in the barn at the time. One made a wild dash out, but was so badly burned that it will have to be shot. The other was cremated. The loss is $8,000, partially covered by insurance.

BALL PLAYER HELD, CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

Pitcher Joseph Yeager of the Fall River New England League baseball team was arrested in Lynn yesterday, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Thomas F. Burke, an East Boston lawyer and left fielder on the Lynn New England League team, who died at the Lynn Hospital August 11 from injuries received by being struck on the skull by a pitched ball by Yeager in Lynn on August 9.

The arrest was made by Inspector Fitzgerald and Officer Lynch of the Lynn police force on an order of Judge John W. Berry at Hotel Seymour, where Yeager was stopping with the Fall River team. His bail, which was fixed at $500, was furnished by Dennis J. Eagan, a Lynn business man. The case will be called next week.

Burke was struck on the left side of the skull by a fast inshoot thrown by Pitcher Yeager. He was picked up unconscious.

DENIES STORY RICH GIRL WON FIANCE FROM HER

LONGWORTHS AT HOME IN CINCINNATI.

Congressman 'Nick' Plans Busy Campaign Looking After Political Fences.

Cincinnati, Aug. 18.—Representative Nick Longworth and his wife, the daughter of President Roosevelt, arrived here at their future home this evening. Both Mr. and Mrs. Longworth expressed pleasure at being again in Cincinnati, and said they would now remain here permanently. They will reside in the old Longworth mansion, Rookwood, on Grandin road.

Congressman Longworth said that he would leave the city only once until after the election and that this would be for a brief trip to New York in connection with his new duties as secretary of the International Policy Holders' Committee. Mr. Longworth will at once begin his canvass for a return to Congress from the first district of this city. Mrs. Longworth said, laughingly, "I would willingly try to help my husband return to Congress if he would [illegible]"

Mr. Longworth [illegible] Speaker [illegible] Joe Cannon [illegible] Cincinnati and make a [illegible] in behalf of his candidacy in the first district during the campaign.

LESLIE CARTER TO GET $1,500 A WEEK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Aug 18.—Mrs. Leslie Carter Payne, by the terms of the five-year contract she has signed, will receive one of the largest salaries ever paid in the history of the American stage. It is understood she will get $1,500 per week for forty weeks of each year, which is at the rate of $60,000 per annum. For five years' [illegible] she will have received $300,000.

Mary Anderson Navarro was once offered $100,000 to return to the stage for a season's engagement in the United States. [illegible] Irving, Booth, Salvini, Rejane [illegible] Marlowe and other great actors and actresses have earned large sums, but this five-year contract, with financial [illegible] according to Mrs. Carter Payne, stands almost alone.

GIRL OUTWITS BRACE OF ROBBERS.

Sandbagged and Chloroformed, She Recovers and the Burglars Flee.

[illegible] Aug 18.—Burglars who broke into the house of Miss Augusta Sandford, No. 99 [illegible] street, Raynham Centre, [illegible] chloroformed and sandbagged [illegible] Jennie McClosson when she discovered them at work.

The cries [illegible] by the girl frightened the burglars and they ran from the house, leaving her suffering from the effects of the chloroform and the blow on the head.

Recovering from the attack, the girl seized a [illegible] horn, and blew an alarm from the [illegible] window. The neighborhood was aroused and a posse of citizens started after the burglars, but they got away.

Miss McClosson is a protege of Miss Sandford, one of the oldest and wealthiest residents of Raynham Centre. Because of the girl's courage, Miss Sandford has her jewelry and silverware today, which the thieves had tied up.

GOLF CHAMPIONS TO MEET IN PROVIDENCE

Providence, Aug 18.—Golf championship matches, under the auspices of the Rhode Island Golf Association, will be held at the Wannamoisett Country Club in East Providence September 5 to 8, and will bring together some of the best players in the State. A championship cup, runner-up cup, consolation cup and cups for the thirty-six hole medal play will be conferred.

The programme for the tournament is as follows: Wednesday, September 5—Qualifying round, medal play, 16 to qualify, eighteen holes. Thursday morning—First round, match play, eighteen holes. Friday afternoon—Semi-finals, match play, eighteen holes. Saturday—Finals, match play, thirty-six holes, also thirty-six hole medal play, open to all participants in the tournament.

Members of clubs belonging to the Rhode Island Association in good standing, whether or not residents of the State, are eligible to play. The entry list closes Friday, August 31. United States Golf Association rules will govern the play.

GOMPERS IS CHEERED IN MAINE.

Great Fight Against Congressman Littlefield Opened in Lewiston.

FIRST ADDRESS IS GIVEN IN CITY HALL

2,500 People Hear and Applaud Noted Labor Leader's Arguments.

1,200 MEN MARCH IN BIG STREET PARADE

Nation's Eyes on Warm Fight Begun by Labor Men in Pine Tree State.

Lewiston, Me., Aug. 18.—Organized labor made its debut in national politics here to-night when Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, addressed a rousing meeting in City Hall on the merits, from a workingman's standpoint, of the fight against Littlefield in the Second Maine Congressional district. Mr. Gompers comes to the Pine Tree State for the express purpose of defeating Congressman Charles E. Littlefield, with whom he has had numerous clashes on labor matters in Congress.

The eyes of the whole country have been focused upon this particular congressional battlefield because of this new move in the labor world. The men "with a union card" in the district are practically united in their opposition to Littlefield.

To beat him a majority of 5,400 votes, by which he was elected two years ago, must be overcome. Mr. Gompers believes it can be done. Entering into the election in this district and into the State fight is a factor of more local moment than that of labor.

Fight on Liquor Law.

It is the question of re-submission to the people of the prohibition of the liquor traffic. This law has been on the statutes about half a century. It has become a farce. Many people want it changed. Just how many, only a vote will tell. The Republicans, represented by Governor Cobb and Congressman Littlefield, "stand pat" on the present law. The Democrats, led by such candidates as Cyrus W. Davis, of Waterville, for Governor, want the matter submitted to the people again. This and the labor phase of the contest are its two chief elements.

The meeting in City hall was prefaced with a parade through the principal streets of Lewiston, in which more than 1,200 men were in line. The marching was enlivened with band music and fireworks. It was estimated that there were about 2,500 in the audience, representing organized labor and other citizens in Lewiston, Auburn and other nearby cities. There were many women in the gallery. Particularly noticeable were the large number of aged men in the audience. There were rows and rows of men with bald and gray heads.

Mr. Gompers was cheered when he stepped onto the stage at 8.10 o'clock. He was introduced by Henry E. Frost, instead of by Alden M. Flagg, who had been selected to preside but who could not be present.

"I assure you" began Mr. Gompers, "that my entrance into your city has been undertaken with a great deal of diffidence and consideration. It is not a small matter for me to come here in this district and lay before you such matters as I have to, no matter how uncongenial my mission.

"Legislators Labor's Foes."

"I was here last June and I said the members of Congress and our various Legislatures had proven themselves hostile to labor and that the thinking people had become utterly tired of the modern politician, who has been miscalled a statesman. It is not a habit of mine to conduct a long range criticism and I called attention to the conduct of the congressman from the second district of Maine. At the close of the meeting in June men and women urged me to come again to Maine and expose the conduct of this misrepresentative of the people of Maine.

"It was there and then that I said I would come here, and I have never yet intentionally broken my word or my promise. Since then several things have transpired, among them the renomination of the Hon. Charles L. Littlefield to Congress. It is not necessary for me to say anything about how that nomination was secured.

"I shall leave that to the conscience, elastic as it may be, of Mr. Littlefield and the gentlemen who were betrayed by the proceedings. Mr. Littlefield has not made one speech but what the major portion was devoted to Samuel Gompers, president of the A. F. of L. I am grateful. There must be some justification for my coming here.

"Mr. Littlefield has made my task comparatively easy. At Rockland he disposed of my whole mission in a word. He said he would challenge me to produce anything in his record showing that he was against labor. He is not a fool and I have good reason to know it, but that he believes that I am a fool is evident.

Accepts His Challenge.

"I accept his challenge to prove by his public record whether he is or is not an enemy not only to the interests of labor, but to the people of the Second District of Maine. In 1895 Congress passed a law which abolished a system of imprisoning seamen who would for any good reason to himself leave his vessel.

"It abolished slavery for seamen. The HARD WORK IS HER PANACEA AT 104.

'Sleep Long and Never Worry,' Is Mrs. Brown's Motto at Sunset of Long Life.

WORCESTER WOMAN IS OLDEST IN BAY STATE

Worcester, Aug. 18.—"I have always made it a point to sleep as hard as I worked. I have always avoided worry. I never carried resentment against a human being overnight," is the way that Mrs. Johanna Harper Brown, who to-day celebrated her 104th birthday, summed up the rule of her life which has lasted well over a century.

At the home of her daughter, Mrs. Matilda Young, No. 53 Lake street, this woman, the oldest in this city and probably the oldest in Massachusetts, with her great, great grandchild on her lap, greeted the reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN and other guests who came to offer her their respects and congratulations.

Mrs. Brown has never had occasion to use glasses of any kind and her hearing is remarkably keen. During her entire life she has never suffered from a serious illness. She has had slight attacks of rheumatism.

Patiently Waiting Death.

To one [illegible] to-day Mrs. Brown said that 104 years was too long for anybody to live and she hoped that she would not see another birthday.

"I sometimes feel as though I am in the way of the young folks," she said. "Of course, they tell me that I am not, but I must be a burden at times. When one feels that way it is best that they should go and I have been patiently waiting my turn for a long time now."

Mrs. Brown is a native of Montreal, and was born in that city Aug. 18, 1802. She came to Worcester shortly after her marriage, when she was twenty-one, and with the exception of short visits to relatives she has always lived in this city. She recalled today with marked clearness the rapid growth of the city and remembered incidents of sixty and seventy years ago with as much keenness as if they happened yesterday.

Hard Work Her Panacea.

When asked to what she attributed her long life, Mrs. Brown said that she had always worked hard and that this was all the medicine that was needed to keep one in the best of health and spirits.

"I have worked hard all my life," she said. "I have had good health because of that fact. I have never been troubled with dyspepsia, and even to-day eat whatever I feel like. I have always avoided worry, which never helps and often unfits one for the tasks in life. I have always attended church and have tried to live up to its teachings. I have always made it a point to sleep as hard as I worked. My mind was kept clear and that means a whole lot."

Mrs. Brown came from a family of six, of which she is the eldest and her brother, John Flagg, aged eighty-seven, of Whitinsville, is the youngest. She has a son, William, aged seventy, who lives in Oxford, and who is himself a great grandfather. Last Sunday Mrs. Brown visited this son, going and coming all the way in a carriage. She returned enthusiastic over the trip and looks forward to another trip to visit her great great grandchild with the eagerness of a youngster looking forward to a picnic or visit of a circus.

ROCKEFELLER, ILL, MAY HAVE TO CALL OFF SUNDAY TALK

Immature Apples or Overripe Melon May Be to Blame, But Doctor Is Silent.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 18.—John D. Rockefeller, the richest man in the world, is in bed to-day with cholera morbus. The oil king, under Dr. Bigger's careful hands, may be able to go to church Sunday, but his churchmen fear not.

Rockefeller was taken suddenly ill Friday and was unable to receive a bunch of Erie passenger agents invited to Forest Hill. He is still among the "down and outs" today, with nurse and physicians flying about him and the weakening course of the disease has left him unable to attend to any business.

Today even his trusted business associates here were refused admittance to his room. Dr. Bigger refuses to say whether the disease was due to the mastication of immature apples or the consumption of overripe melon. The physician declares, however, that he will have his patient on the way to Wellville by Sunday and that in all probability he will be able to make his customary Sunday school talk.

PRESIDENT'S BIG NAVAL REVIEW TO COST $1,000,000

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Aug. 18.—President Roosevelt's first salute from the fleet at Oyster Bay on Labor Day will be a discharge of 504 six-inch guns, the biggest and most costly salute in the history of the American navy. Later, as he visits each flagship will be saluted on arriving and departing by each of the six flagships, the total number being 258 guns, making a grand total of 750 guns during the review.

The officials having to do with the mobilizing of the ships and the preparation for review agree that the cost of the event will not fall much less of $1,000,000. This is not far short of the cost of sending the American warships out to battle with the Spanish fleet. The American navy is twice as large to-day as it was in 1898, and the Atlantic fleet will be in full fighting trim when reviewed by the President.

GIRL TIRED OF LIFE DIVES OFF FAST TRAIN

Cincinnati, Aug. 18.—Estella Bloomingdale, of Marietta, Ohio, leaped from the window of a coach on the Baltimore & Ohio's New York flyer near Madisonville yesterday. Although the train was going more than forty miles an hour, she was not instantly killed, but her injuries probably will result fatally.

As she jumped she shrieked: "I don't want to live any longer."

CAMBRIDGE PATROLMAN SHOT BY BURGLAR AFTER A DESPERATE ENCOUNTER

Diagram illustrating Cambridge burglary and shooting of policeman. The wounded officer and his little daughter, Ethel McNamara.

Thief Who Shot to Save Confederate Escapes After Exciting Chase.

PRISONER HIT BY PAL IN FIGHT FOR FREEDOM

Shot by one burglar while struggling with another whom he had made his prisoner late yesterday afternoon, Patrolman Patrick H. McNamara of Cambridge is in the Cambridge Hospital with a bullet in his chest and a shattered right lung.

A second bullet intended for the policeman hit his prisoner, Frank Tracy of Plympton street, inflicting, however, only a slight scalp wound. After an exciting chase through the streets the man who did the shooting escaped.

The burglary and attempted murder took place in broad daylight on Harvard street in the old college section, where McNamara encountered the burglars as they were escaping from a residence which they nearly succeeded in robbing.

A telephone message was received by Captain Murray of Station 1 a few minutes before 5 o'clock that burglars had been seen to break into the house of Jacob Vancarst, No. 380 Harvard street, corner of Rivington. Mr. Vancarst and his family are away on vacation.

In answer to the message, Captain Murray sent Patrolman Edward F. Horrigan to the Vancarst house in an automobile. By forcing open a rear window Horrigan gained entrance to the premises and began to reconnoitre.

"As soon as I got through the window I heard footsteps upstairs," said Horrigan later. "I drew my revolver and tiptoed it through the kitchen into a hallway, which was dark, for all the blinds were down and the shutters were closed. I waited for a minute or two in the hallway. Presently I heard a great running about upstairs. When I got to where I thought the noise came from there was nobody there. The birds had flown from a window."

Jumped from Window.

In the meantime Patrolman Patrick H. McNamara, whose post was in the neighborhood, was strolling past the Vancarst house when he saw an excited looking man spring from one of the windows of the supposedly deserted premises. The young man fell almost into McNamara's arms and when McNamara asked him what the trouble was he started to run away.

Thereupon McNamara seized him by the collar and was in the act of questioning him about his business when a second young man as excited looking as the first, leaped over a fence that divides the Vancarst house from the sidewalk and, pulling a pistol from his hip pocket, fired at the officer.

Bullet in Chest.

Although the bullet hit McNamara squarely in the chest the policeman pluckily held on to his prisoner, who took advantage of the situation to make a break for liberty.

Running backward a few paces, the young man with the pistol took aim at McNamara again and fired. Judging rightly that the would-be murderer was aiming at his head, McNamara ducked and the bullet hit the prisoner.

At this critical point of the adventure and just as McNamara's prisoner was fighting fiercely to rid himself of McNamara's iron grip, Patrolman Horrigan appeared on the scene. His tour of investigation inside the house had been interrupted by the sound of pistol shots outside.

When the shooter saw Horrigan he pocketed his pistol and fled. Horrigan gave chase. In Dana street the burglar disappeared. Horrigan did not see him enter any house in that street.

Confederate Escapes.

"There were not many people about at the time," explained the policeman. "I simply can't explain how he managed to get away from me. The sidewalk seemed to swallow him."

While Horrigan was chasing the burglar who did the shooting, Patrolman Timothy Corcoran and James H. Holt, who had been sent from the station house to the Vancarst house, had taken charge of McNamara's prisoner and arranged for the wounded policeman's removal to the Cambridge Hospital.

Hasty examination by the doctors showed that the bullet had entered McNamara's right chest near the shoulder, penetrating the lung. The policeman's condition was so weak that no attempt was made to probe for or extract the bullet last night. This morning the X ray will be used on McNamara.

The prisoner he held while being shot was hustled to Station 1, where a doctor dressed a slight scalp wound, which the second bullet from his pal's pistol had caused. The prisoner said he was Frank Tracy and that he lived on Plympton street, Cambridge. He declined to give the name of his pal.

HEROIC WORK SAVES THREE MEN FROM DROWNING.

Three young men were rescued from drowning by the heroic efforts of Reserve Officer George S. Hilton, assisted by J. F. Farrell and Gabriel Farrell last evening. The men were Barney Gross of No. 102 Poplar street, Morris Statensky of No. 4 Levereft place and Morris Raney of No. 297 Chambers street.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the three men went for a row on the Charles River. When about twenty-five feet from the boat house the boat capsized and all three were [illegible]. The accident was [illegible] Hilton on the [illegible] bridge, who rushed to [illegible] upon a raft, he [illegible] the water as he was [illegible] second time. In the [illegible] been joined by J. OFFERS $1000 FOR LYNCHING OF NEGRO

Editor of Atlanta News Publishes Remarkable Editorial.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 18.—A remarkable editorial appears in the Atlanta Evening News, which is owned by Colonel J. N. English, chief of staff of Governor Terrell, in which a reward of $1,000 is offered for the lynching of a negro in Atlanta guilty of an offense similar to that committed by Bob Davis, who was lynched at Greenwood, S. C., Thursday night.

20TH CENTURY FLYER DITCHED; FEW HURT

Elyria, O., Aug. 18.—A misunderstanding [illegible] the derailment of the Twentieth Century Limited train on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad a mile west of this city at 8.10 o'clock to-night. No one was seriously injured, although the passengers were badly shaken up and several railroad men slightly hurt.

DRAPER TO STAY IN CHAIR OF ALDERMEN.

Will Not Resign in Favor of Cauley, as "Marked Card" Deal Required.

Charles M. Draper, chairman of the Board of Aldermen, will retain his office until the expiration of his term, and not resign in favor of Alderman Cauley at to-morrow's meeting of the board.

Thus ends the "marked card" deal, superintended by Mayor Fitzgerald and afterwards investigated by the Grand Jury, which landed Alderman Draper in the chairmanship.

Mayor Fitzgerald is authority for the statement that there will be no further developments in regard to the chairmanship and Alderman Cauley says that he is willing to forget the deal by which he was to be elected chairman after Draper had served five months.

Was to Resign August 1.

According to the agreement made when the shuffle of cards and the flip of a coin landed Draper in the chairmanship, he was to resign on August 1 and Alderman Cauley, the choice of the Democratic members, was to serve out the remainder of the term.

The [illegible] by which Draper was elected took place in Mayor Fitzgerald's private office on February 28, after the Board of Aldermen had been deadlocked for two months.

By drawing the properly marked card Alderman Cauley became the choice of the Democrats. By the turn of a coin, Draper, choice of the majority of the Republicans, became chairman for the first half of the term.

The seven aldermen in the agreement then went into the aldermanic chamber and there the result of the game of chance was proclaimed by a vote of the seven who participated in the deal, and Draper was elected chairman.

On March 9 Secretary O'Connell and Aldermen Cauley, Curley, Hennessey, Baldwin, Berwin and Kneeland were summoned before the grand jury. Alderman Draper was not summoned. The law under which District Attorney Moran sought indictment provides that no city official shall seek or accept an appointment in which there is a consideration.

Jury Reported No Bill.

The finding of the grand jury was made public Monday, March 12. The record on the return of the grand jury to the court was as follows:

"Charles M. Draper, for corruptly accepting a position beneficial to himself, under an agreement to do certain things in violation of the Revised Laws, Chapter 210, Section 7. No bill."

Fear that Moran might again take up the case is the reason that Draper will stay where the two-spot and coin sat him down.

MISS TOWNSEND, SOCIETY BRIDE, AT BAR HARBOR

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 18.—A very pretty society wedding took place at the little Church of Our Father at Hull's Cove to-day, when Miss Martha Felton Townsend, of New York, daughter of Mrs. James Rodman Townsend, became the bride of Theodore F. Brapkrey, also of New York.

The little chapel was well filled with the members of the summer colony and was beautifully decorated with ferns, palms and cut flowers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frederick Crost, curate of St. Savior's Church. The bride had no attendants, with the exception of the matron of honor, Mrs. Henry Slack, of New York, her cousin. The best man was Charles C. Hodge and the ushers included Charles C. Townsend, Albert M. Woodruff, William F. Meredith and Charles C. McKenzie, all of New York.

After the ceremony a large reception was held at the Bowen Cottage, Hotel Roan House at Hull's Cove, where Mrs. Humphrey has been passing the Summer as the guest of her aunt, Mrs. J. T. Bowen, of Chicago.

The bride wore white lace over white satin and carried the conventional orange blossoms. The matron of honor was gowned in blue silk. The bride was given away by her brother, Arthur Rodman Townsend.

POINTS DEFEAT FOR WHITNEY CANDIDACY.

Inconsistency of Josiah Quincy on Reciprocity and Other Issues Shown Up.

COMPARISON OF MORAN WITH HIS OPPONENT

A keen observer of political conditions in Massachusetts, discussing the attitude of Chairman Josiah Quincy and of Henry M. Whitney, Quincy's man for the gubernatorial nomination, on the subject of reciprocity and other political issues, finds in the past records of the two men points for interesting comparison. He also sharply analyzes the apparent reasons for the Whitney candidacy against John B. Moran. He says:

"Mr. Whitney having yielded to the earnest solicitation of Mr. Quincy, and having formally announced himself as a candidate in which he tells the Democracy that the issue in the campaign for the Governorship is reciprocity, it seems advisable to call the attention of the public to the position of Mr. Quincy upon reciprocity in 1902.

"Just preceding each congressional campaign a Democratic campaign book is issued stating the Democratic doctrine upon all matters involved in political discussions, to be used as a guide book by Democratic political speakers throughout the country. This book is sent by the authority of the Democratic Congressional Committee having headquarters in Washington, D. C. In the year 1902 such a campaign book was issued. At that time Josiah Quincy, of Massachusetts, was a member of the executive committee of the Democratic Congressional Committee. On page 277 of the book appears an article entitled, 'The Reciprocity Humbug,' which says:

"Reciprocity cares nothing for the consumer and hunts foreign markets with a club. Its stock in trade is high tariff, favoritism, discrimination and retaliation. It threatens to slam our doors in the face of foreign countries which will not open their doors to our products. Reciprocity is based upon the same false theories as is protection and, like protection, is a sham and a humbug, and to most people has been and will ever continue to be, a delusion and a snare.

Does He Favor Reciprocity?

"This was or was not a true statement of the Democratic position upon reciprocity in 1902. It is hardly conceivable that fifteen or twenty selected leaders, including Josiah Quincy, of the Democrats of the country should have put out a falsehood for the purpose of deceiving the people of the entire country. We must therefore assume that it was true Democratic doctrine at that time. Mr. Quincy says now that he is in favor of reciprocity.

"Is it possible that Mr. Quincy is in the same position relative to reciprocity now that he was relative to Mr. Bryan in 1896? He claims that he was with Bryan in 1896. He was Mayor at that time, attended the Chicago convention as a delegate, refused to vote and persuaded the majority of the delegates to refuse to vote on any matter in that convention after he learned the convention was in the control of the supporters of Bryan. He left the convention before its final session, returned to Boston and buried himself in the arduous duties of the mayoralty. When Bryan visited Boston Quincy declined to attend the banquet.

"When Bryan spoke in Music Hall Quincy declined to be even present. He never told the public how he was going to vote. He concealed it as if it were a matter to be ashamed of, but he says now that he was with Bryan at that time. We all know that he was not with Bryan at that time. He says now that he is with reciprocity. We know from the quotation above that he was against reciprocity in 1902.

"In 1900 during the second campaign of Bryan [illegible] Quincy wrote a letter [illegible] which he said 'I could of course, [illegible] if I had to in support of certain planks of the Democratic platform, but I do not want to do this. I am quite confident that Bryan cannot be elected now, and I think I shall be in a better position in the future if I can have a good excuse, viz., [illegible] in Europe for keeping out of the [illegible] except to the extent of [illegible].

Quincy as Dictator.

"It may be claimed by Mr. Whitney and his friends that Mr. Quincy's attitude is not the subject of criticism in the present campaign. It would not be if Mr. Whitney was not the candidate selected by Mr. Quincy and a few other Democratic leaders who presume to dictate to the people who should be nominated for Governor by the Democratic convention. So long as Mr. Quincy is the head and front of the Whitney combination, Mr. Quincy is the legitimate subject of criticism upon political matters.

"The Democratic leaders antagonistic to Mr. Moran's candidacy were vigorous in their denunciation of him when he published a platform of principles upon which he said he was a candidate. Mr. Whitney pursues the same course, and instead of receiving criticism he receives commendation. Mr. Whitney presumes to dictate to the Democracy of this State that the sole and chief issue of the campaign shall be reciprocity. He has no more right to dictate than Mr. Moran has. Each has the right to state what his principles are in order that the public may choose between [illegible] Mr. Moran in his declaration [illegible] hides, free coal, free lumber and free [illegible].

"Legislation to save Massachusetts manufacturers from their present handicap [illegible] the unjust tariff on the raw materials of their product.

Mr. Whitney's Principles.

"Fostering international commerce by generous and friendly concessions in the adjustment of our tariff to all nations opening to us their markets for our products.

"Tearing down the tariff walls which entrench monopoly and sustain enormous fortunes exacted from honest labor and flaunted in the faces of their toilers by their gross and vicious possessors."

"As Mr. Whitney enters the contest only because of principles, it follows logically that he is opposed to the above quotation from Mr. Moran's platform. Otherwise he has no justification for being in the contest at all. Last year he claimed to be in favor of free hides, free coal, free lumber and free iron. Why is he opposed to these now? Last year he was in favor of legislation to save Massachusetts manufacturers from their present [illegible] the unjust tariff on the raw [illegible] of their product. Why is he opposed to that plank in Mr. Moran's platform now?"

BIG LINER FLOATED.

Hamburg, Aug. 19.—The Hamburg-American liner Pretoria, which went aground Friday, was floated Saturday and towed into the harbor. She is believed to be uninjured.

LONGSHOREMEN THREATEN TO TIE UP HUB SHIPPING.

8,800 to Quit Work Wednesday Unless Employers Accede to Their Demands.

DISPUTE OVER ILLNESS CAUSE OF DIFFERENCE

May Involve 6,000 Teamsters at Loss to Boston Commerce of $250,000 a Day.

A great strike along the Boston water front is threatened unless the Metropolitan Steamship Company adjust the differences with the longshoremen, who quit work on Wednesday, because they claimed that Stevedore De Lap discriminated against union men.

There are 200 men out now, and if the word is given for sympathetic action 8800 more may stop work. They would include all the freight handlers, shipping clerks and others engaged in loading and unloading steam and other craft.

Besides these men 6000 teamsters might be called out, and it is figured that the men would lose $37,500 a day in wages and that the loss to Boston commerce would be $250,000.

Men Say Illness Cost Job.

It is years since such a serious situation has confronted shipping interests and all day yesterday officers of local unions were conferring with steamship officials. Steve[dore] De Lap says he had trouble with the longshoreman now out because he was notified a week ago [illegible] one of the men that he was going to give up the job. When the man returned to work on the following Tuesday, the stevedore would not take him back. He says he did not know that the man had quit because of illness. The longshoremen say that five men have been dismissed because they failed to report for duty while sick.

President Calvin Austin of the steamship company says he has investigated and that he sustains the stevedore. But the union men are firm and refuse to yield the point that no man should lose his job because he is temporarily kept away by ill health.

What Master Workman Says.

"If one goes back all will go back," said Master Workman John H. Dalton of Longshoremen's Assembly 1002, Knights of Labor. "If we are not all taken back soon Boston will see a water front strike the like of which it never beheld before. We have the sympathy of every freight handler and longshoreman in the city.

"Every statement made by our men as to the cause of the trouble can be verified. The district officers are doing their best to prevent a situation which will force a great strike, but we must have justice."

Whitney Backs Water.

It was stated late last night that five union men had just had a conference with Henry M. Whitney, who has posed as a great friend of the laboring man, and asked him to intercede, but the report along the water front was that he was noncommittal and the delegation got no satisfaction.

The crucial conference will come to-morrow, when the leaders will have another talk with President Austin of the steamship line. It is understood that this conference will be final and that a great strike will be ordered if he refuses to take all the men back.

THINK STENSLAND PRISONER IN THE NORTH WEST.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—The police this afternoon received a dispatch stating that a man answering thoroughly to the description of Paul O. Stensland has been arrested at Midway, British Columbia. The authorities place considerable credence in this report.

At least one million dollars have been lost through the manipulation of the Milwaukee State Bank, and possibly more. This is the estimate of Bank Examiner Jones, who made in his report to State Auditor McCullough to-day.

The losses are divided as follows: Forged and worthless paper, $468,500; at least questionable paper, if not forged, $200,000; other losses, $150,000; real estate losses, $175,000.

The report says that [illegible] of Cashier Hering by the State Attorney, Hering denied having forged [illegible] notes and failed to implicate President Stensland, but intimated plainly that [illegible] Dorrance had done the work, and that Stensland had given him $50,000 [illegible] leave the country, and that he is now [illegible] Milan.

HELD FOR SLASHING WOMAN WITH RAZOR

Vincenzo Brocopis, 34 years, of No. 330 North street, was arrested last evening, by officers from the Hanover street station, charged with assault with a razor upon Bridget McGrath, 32 years, of No. 2 Waltham street, Waltham. The assault occurred opposite No. 100 Cross street. The woman received a cut extending from the left side of her face to her nose. She was taken to the Relief Hospital.

QUINCY POLICE LOOK FOR A TILL TAPPER

The police of Quincy are looking for a till tapper who got $20 from the store of the Norfolk Hardware Company last night. The stranger, a young man, walked into the store while the clerks were all busy, went behind the counter and took the money from the till and walked out again. A number of the customers saw the act, but thinking that he was employed in the store paid no attention to the man.

Russian Women Arming to Aid In Uprising Against the Czar

VICTIMS OF CZAR'S TYRANNY AND WOMEN WHO MAY AID IN AVENGING THEM.

In the upper picture are Russian women at rifle practice, who, according to recent dispatches, may later fight side by side with the revolutionists in the inevitable conflict against bureaucracy. In the lower picture is a character study of two Polish Jews, victims of the race hatred fostered by the government at St Petersburg

WILL FIGHT SIDE BY SIDE WITH MEN

Police Trying to Suppress Target Practice by Women of the Working Classes.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 18.—There are no more ardent patriots among Russian revolutionists than the women, and when the long expected uprising against the Czar, Grand Dukes and oppressive officialdom comes, mothers, wives and sisters will be found fighting side by side with men for the freedom of their country.

A sign of the disturbed times is the number of women who have taken to practicing marksmanship. Shooting at targets has been a fad with aristocratic dames for some time, but when the women of the working class began to follow the example the secret police immediately took notice. They knew that the poor have too little money to buy ammunition for mere pleasure and there is talk of prohibiting women from displaying or acquiring marksmanship at fairs, where the target galleries are so extensively patronized.

Women in All Plots.

The Russian officials whose duty it is to guard Czar Nicholas are always greatly in dread of women revolutionists. In almost every plot against the ruler's life women have been concerned, and they have been found even more fearless than men. The revolutionists have warned women in their circles to exercise the utmost caution in all they say or do lest the police find a pretext for a wholesale deportation to Siberia. The roads to the dread prison country are thronged with prisoners, who are being exiled for no other reason as a rule than the fact that they have become objects of suspicion. One police official says that the women who patronize the shooting booths are more expert shots than the average Russian soldier who fought the Japs. The Czar has heard of this new menace in alarm. He knows that French women led the mobs which stormed the Bastille in Paris.

The treatment of Jews by Russian police is becoming more barbarous each day, and members of the down-trodden race are almost on the verge of despair. Blamed for every outbreak, whether inspired by revolutionists or the outraged peasantry, each disturbance is seized by soldiery and civil authorities as excuse for the perpetration of atrocities that if made known would shock the civilized world. The Jews are evicted from their homes with the utmost brutality and their shops are looted and their household goods destroyed. Aged men and helpless women and children are made to run the gauntlet of heartless mobs, are stoned, beaten and robbed as a pastime.

Neither Age Nor Sex Spared.

Neither age nor sex is spared by their ruthless tormentors. In all ghettos there is constant fear that a massacre such as occurred in Kishineff will be repeated elsewhere.

The unfortunate Semites live forever in constant dread of being massacred and robbed of every worldly possession. It is one of the commonest sights of the day to see a group of homeless, impoverished Jews sitting with downcast heads on the steps of some public building and silently lamenting the barbarity of which they have been victims.

COST PARIS $500,000 AS HOST OF SISOWATH

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Aug. 18.—Now that King Sisowath is gone, his hosts are beginning to count the cost of his visit, and they are appalled to find that the Government has paid $500,000 for the pleasure of the dusky monarch's company and that of his large household. While the treasury officials are busy paying bills a disinfecting corps is at work on the premises occupied by the princesses and royal ballet.

The King was very cross at not being allowed to stay longer in the French capital, and when he got to Marseilles he actually balked and refused for four hours to go on board the Government boat commissioned to take him home.

FRISCO KID "SHINES" THE SWISS PRESIDENT

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Bern, Aug. 18.—The "Frisco Kid," the young Californian who is touring around the world with the object of blacking the boots of European heads of States, has succeeded better here than he did in London Berlin and most of the other capitals he has visited.

After a few days' wait he was received by M. Henri Fazy, President of the Confederation, who is a simple and amiable gentleman. After talking a few minutes with the young adventurer, the Chief of State gave his boots into the tender care of the "Frisco Kid," who has now received a certificate to this effect.

Reynolds asserts that the anarchists are supplied with abundant funds, the money having been diverted to them wrongfully from the Russian revolutionary funds.

$2,500,000 ART COLLECTION SOLD

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug. 18.—The Agnews have acquired the Alexander Young collection, which contains fifty pictures by Corot and many by Daubigny, Troyon, Mauve and Maris. The collection was valued recently by experts at over $2,500,000. In accordance with the wishes of Mr. Young special conditions will be made to facilitate the acquirement by the nation of specimens of the modern Dutch school.

50,000 COOLIES IN UPRISING AT CHEFOO.

Constabulary Unable to Cope with Disturbances by the Native Population.

UNITED STATES FLEET NEAR SCENE OF TROUBLE

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Chefoo, Aug. 18.—The political situation here has taken a serious turn. There has been an uprising of the native population, which at present is swelled by 50,000 coolies from Canton, on their way to the Manchurian wheat fields.

The Chinese constabulary side with the mobs, and the settlement police, which is maintained by the foreign embassies, are powerless. It is not unlikely that they will be ejected from the city if they are not withdrawn.

Part of the Eastern squadron of the United States navy, including the battleship Wisconsin, the cruisers Galveston, Chattanooga, [illegible] destroyers Barry and Bainbridge and the gunboat Quiros, are here. The battleship Ohio, the cruisers Raleigh and Baltimore and the gunboat Rainbow are expected to arrive soon.

Washington, Aug. 18.—State Department officers believe that the reported trouble in China is entirely local in Chefoo, as no advice has been received here indicating any disturbance of serious consequence. There are at the present a dozen or more American ships in Chefoo, but they were not dispatched to that port because of any trouble pending or feared.

COQUELIN GETS GOLD MEDAL FOR CHARITY

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Aug 18.—President Fallieres, all the Ministers of State and a large number of distinguished men in the world of politics and art assembled at the Old Actors' Home, founded by the celebrated comedian, M. Coquelin, to witness the inauguration of that institution.

At the close of the ceremony President Fallieres presented M. Coquelin with a reward which many men esteem greater than that of the Cross of the Legion of Honor, namely the gold medal of the Department of Public Charities. This is a distinction which is conferred only in very exceptional cases. There are in all France only five other such medals.

BOMBS FAIL TO GET WARSAW CHIEF.

Three Thrown at Governor's Carriage—Wreck Houses, but Kill No One.

POLICE QUIT POSTS FROM FEAR OF DEATH

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

St Petersburg, Aug. 18.—Three bombs were thrown into the carriage of Governor-General Skallon, at Warsaw, Poland, at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Two of the missiles exploded, wrecking the windows of houses in the neighborhood. No one was killed, however. The bomb throwers made their escape.

Since the acute revival of terrorism, the ministry of the interior has been flooded with complaints forwarded by chiefs of police in all parts of the empire to the effect that the police are resigning by wholesale, and it is said that if this state of affairs continues it may compel a practical replacement of the police by troops.

Cabinet Hesitates.

The cabinet has given serious attention to the situation in Poland, and the question of sending out punitive expeditions has been discussed, but no decision has been arrived at.

The monarchist organizations are trying to arrange a national congress at Kieff, with the view of placing tickets in the field for the parliamentary elections, which it is now believed will occur in November.

Both Premier Stolypin and War Minister Rudiger are receiving many letters demanding the punishment of the officers and soldiers concerned in the whipping of Mlle Anna Smirnoff, the dressmaker who made a sarcastic remark as a squadron of the Chevalier Guards was passing, and the newspapers continue to be filled with indignant articles on the subject.

Exodus from Empire.

M. Stolypin has ordered an investigation of the affair, but so far as known, the war authorities have made no move. The girl is in a hospital and her condition is reported to be serious.

The emigration from Russia this year exceeded 250,000 persons.

A bomb factory was discovered at Kishineff [illegible] Professor [illegible] of Odessa University. Several arrests were made.

GERMANY AND BRITAIN IN HARMONY

Berlin Foreign Office Exultant Over Meeting of King and Kaiser.

TO WORK TOGETHER IN FUTURE POLICIES

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, Aug 18.—[illegible] tion prevails at the foreign office [illegible] the results of the meeting [illegible] between King Edward and Emperor William. The latter has expressed [illegible] is highly satisfied with the outcome of his personal conferences with the King.

The discussions between the monarchs in the presence of their diplomatic representatives covered many points [illegible] tions of interest to both countries [illegible] aiming at reaching special arrangements, but with the view of creating [illegible] understanding respecting the policies pursued by the two countries.

This was accomplished in the main, and the foreign office expects to see the improvement in the relations between them continue. The recent friendly demonstrations, originating among the British and German peoples from dissatisfaction with the political hostilities attributed to the two governments, facilitated the Friedrichshof meeting, since King Edward had no desire to see German antipathies continually attributed to him.

So far as the report of a personal estrangement between the two monarchs is concerned, this has been wholly dissipated by the personal talks at Friedrichshof, and their relations have now grown cordial.

MRS. DREXEL GIVES DRESDEN AN ALTAR

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Dresden, Aug. 18.—Edward Butler, proprietor of the Buffalo News, is staying here. He will go on to Carlsbad for the cure.

James R. McKee, son-in-law of the late president Harrison, and his son, are now at Dresden.

Mrs. Joseph Drexel of Philadelphia has presented the high altar to the new Church of the Sacred Heart, through T. St. John Gaffney, the American Consul. It is a fine piece of work in carved wood and stone.

DRAGO DOCTRINE TO INDIVIDUAL NATION.

Pan-American Conference Disposes of Issue of Forcible Debt Collection.

AMERICAN UNION OF PATENTS IS FAVORED

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Rio Janiero, Aug. 18. The Pan American Conference's committee on the Drago doctrin has decided to report in favor of a recommendation that the individual governments [illegible] the conference consider the advisability of presenting the doctrine to The Hague [illegible] for deliberation, not only with regard to the forcible collection of public debts but of all pecuniary claims. Argentina was routed on all points in the discussion.

Senor Francisco de la Barra, Mexican Minister to Belgium and the Mexican member of The Hague peace [illegible] committee, will go to The Hague as soon as the Pan American conference [illegible] present the resolution to the [illegible]. Senor de la Barra is head of the Mexican delegation here.

For American Patent Union.

The Committee on Patents, Trade Marks and Copyright concluded its work with the adoption of a resolution recommending the formation of an American Union of patents, trade marks and copyrights, with registration offices at Havana and Rio Janeiro. The two registration offices are for convenience, but it is contemplated that they shall be made practically one through a monthly interchange of all documents. It is also recommended that each contracting country shall remit monthly to all other countries in the union all records of patents, trade marks and copyrights granted by it.

Difficult Problem Disposed of.

There are no more difficult questions for the conference to consider, except possibly the question of fixing the next place of meeting. The Argentine Republic is making strong bids to have the delegates agree to meet in Buenos Ayres, but there is much opposition to fixing the date [illegible] to the Bureau of American Republics and to the conference has selected the place of meeting.

The Brazilian government is considerably worked up over the official distribution in Buenos Ayres of pamphlets containing comparative statistics of the agricultural and commercial conditions of Argentina and Brazil, in which the Brazilian figures are greatly minimized. The pamphlet may become the subject of diplomatic representations.

Barefoot Boy at Play Is Queen's Prize Snapshot

QUEEN'S MOST CHERISHED PHOTO OF ITALIAN HEIR.

With a strong dislike for pictures of her children taken by professional photographers, the royal mother of Humbert, seeking pictures free of "posing," has taken a great fancy to the camera and frequently snaps her children at play; the above shows her favorite picture of several which she has recently taken.

Mother's Triumph With Camera Shows Humbert, Italian Heir, Digging in Sand at Seashore.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Rome, Aug. 18. Prince Humbert, the youngest child of the King and Queen of Italy, has already shown an enthusiastic delight in outdoor life and is as fond of [illegible] as his grandma, Dowager Queen Margherita. He also loves the sea shore and is never happier than when [illegible] playing in the sand like a child of plebeian birth.

The present Queen of Italy is a devotee of amateur photography and delights in taking snapshots of friends and members of her family. But the picture which pleases her more than any other is one of [illegible] taken while he was [illegible] except that [illegible] Queen [illegible] always tries to take her subject when the [illegible] absolute ease and [illegible] objects to pictures taken by professional photographers because she says they always try to pose her children with a consciousness of their rank. To her they are not Princes or Princesses, but just her babies.

KING PICKS OUT HIS HOLIDAY CLOTHES

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug. 18. The King's tailors have been attending at Buckingham Palace with patterns for His Majesty's holiday suits. After choosing the cloth and giving orders for the [illegible] of [illegible] King Edward is troubled no further about his suits, which are fitted on to a dummy his tailors keep at their workrooms.

A deep blue, rather coarse serge is His Majesty's favorite cloth for holiday wear. But whenever possible he adopts the characteristic dress of the country where he is spending his holiday. At Marienbad he wears the picturesque green Tyrolese hat, and at Balmoral the kilt, which, by the way, he has no liking for.

Although he always keeps up with the prevailing modes and often sets the fashion himself, the King never adopts a new fashion unless he finds it suits him. He has never worn the frock overcoat, so fashionable last Winter, but which only suits men of good stature and youthful figure.

DUKE TAKES THIRD MORGANATIC WIFE

Ludwig of Bavaria Seems to Have Passion for Left-Handed Marriages.

Special Correspondence to Boston Sunday American.

Munich, Aug. 18. At the age of seventy-five, Duke Ludwig of Bavaria, is about to take a third morganatic wife. The lady of his choice is a pretty young opera singer, Fraulein Tordek, who appears at the Munich Royal Opera House.

Before the venerable Duke can marry again he has to obtain the Prince Regent's permission to divorce his present wife, Antonie Barth, whom he married morganatically in 1892.

The Duke has had a penchant for morganatic marriages since 1859, when he married [illegible] who was created Baroness [illegible] in 1891 [illegible] in morganatic [illegible] has cost Duke Ludwig [illegible] the royal [illegible] of Bavaria, which he renounced in favor of his younger brother, Karl.

FIELDING LOSES PARLIAMENT SEAT

Shelburne, N. S., Aug. 18.—The Supreme Court has unseated the Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance in the Canadian government, as a member of Parliament for the Queens-Shelburne district on charges that he held his seat illegally, it having been stated that during the last election his political workers resorted to corrupt practices.

Minister Fielding is the right hand man of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Canadian Premier. In order to sit again in Parliament he will be obliged to seek re-election.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND KEEPS MANY A BAR

Principal Tenants of Ecclesiastical Landlords Said to Be Saloonkeepers.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug. 18.—One of the anomalies of the Established Church of England is that—like the Trinity Church estate in New York—it owns vast property in London and Lancashire, of which the principal tenants are saloonkeepers.

Recently the Church of England Estate Commissioners were requested to publish details of their saloon property in London. Reluctant to make public the amount of church revenue from the liquor traffic, they refused to do so.

It is known, however, that there are fifty-seven saloons on the church's Lancashire property, and there must be many more in London. Doubtless action will be taken in Parliament, which created the Estates Commission, to force the church officials to give the desired information.

The taxpayers think themselves entitled to know the details of the church's revenue as they contribute $20,000,000 of it annually in tithe tax.

PROFESSORS THRIVE ON COCOANUT DIET

Two German Scientists Pursue the Simple Life in a South Pacific Island.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Melbourne, Aug. 18.—The real simple life has been put in practice by two Germans, Professors Engleharit and Bethmann—who are living in Kabakon, a small island in the Bismarck Archipelago, at a cost of [illegible] a day.

Their sole food is cocoanuts, their costume is simply a loin cloth, and they amuse themselves by sitting in the sea and reading, or watching the lighthearted Polynesian natives dancing.

Professor Engelhardt is the pioneer of this exceeding simple life. Suffering ill health from childhood, he experimented with a fruit diet. Finding that European fruits were not the ideal [illegible] he sought the tropics. First he tried Ceylon, and in 1904 he went to Kabakon.

The cocoanut, he declares, is the most suitable food for man, and he also insists that it was his original diet. At any rate, he and Professor Bethmann, who has since joined him, are thriving on it.

AMERICANS BUY UP MOTOR-BUS SHARES

Accidents in London Cause a Slump Which Shrewd Yankees Turn to Profit.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug. 18. The terrible accidents which have befallen motor omnibuses in and around London have caused a great slump in the shares of the various new omnibus companies. The most frantic selling of shares has taken place. Clergymen, widows and spinsters, living in the country, dreaming of fortunes to be obtained from the vehicle of the future, have become panic-stricken and sold out at great losses.

Meanwhile, a small syndicate composed of London and New York financiers is buying up all these shares at the very lowest prices. They realize very well that a reaction will take place shortly, and they know that no matter how many accidents may happen the motor omnibus has come to stay.

They, therefore, look forward cheerfully to reaping a very large profit some time before Christmas.

JEWS FLOCK BACK TO THE HOLY LAND

They Have Settled in a Fertile Region East of the Jordan as a Colony.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Jerusalem, Aug. 18.—The Zionist movement—the return of the Jews to Palestine—is being carried actively on, and during the last few months there has been a remarkable influx of Israelites into the Holy Land.

A fertile region, East of the Jordan, toward Kerak, has been inspected by a party of Jewish [illegible], with the idea of colonizing it. Their plans are likely to be opposed by the local Bedouin tribes, who do not wish any intruders to take up land in the neighborhood.

The intending colonists are negotiating with the Government for the purchase of land and for guarantees of protection against the Bedouins.

Five thousand Jewish emigrants from Russia and the Balkan States recently landed at Jaffa. They will be distributed among the various Jewish colonies, which are to be found in all the fertile districts of Palestine. It looks as if the Chosen People are literally coming to their own again.

'UNITED STATES ARGENTINA'S FRIEND.'

Keynote of Great [illegible] Welcome to Secretary [illegible] at Buenos [illegible]

CHEERS AND AP[illegible] FOR THIS [illegible]

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Buenos Ayres, Aug. 18. [illegible] warm friendship displayed [illegible] States for Argentina and [illegible] ample the great republic [illegible] world was the keynote [illegible] delivered here by former [illegible] at a banquet given by the [illegible] Commerce in honor of Secretary of State Root. The speaker also expressed [illegible] that the day is approaching [illegible] relations will be established [illegible] the states of the American continent.

Fully 400 guests [illegible] the banking and commercial [illegible] the country [illegible] When Senor Drago proposed [illegible] United States as the [illegible] most democratic of [illegible] responded with evident [illegible] for [illegible] country.

Admiration for United States.

The foreign minister said the people of Argentina greatly admire [illegible] disinterested policy which the United States has so often pursued and greatly appreciate the friendship it has manifested [illegible]. The establishment of close [illegible] all nations on the continent [illegible] free from complications and will act as a counterpoise to the scheming of European diplomacy.

Referring to the now famous Drago doctrine declaring against the collection of public debts by force [illegible] said it was inspired by a desire to protect the American States from [illegible] and threatened dangers and maintain their integrity against hostile aggressions by European countries. The doctrine if accepted is calculated to make conquest [illegible] of collection of claims [illegible] Its aim he declared is identical with that of the Monroe doctrine.

"Roosevelt's Name Illustrious."

He referred to President Roosevelt as a man "whose transcendental initiatives had made his name illustrious." Turning to Secretary Root [illegible] spoke of [illegible] as "the great representative of solidarity" and said Argentina felt honored by his presence.

The speech was vigorously applauded and Mr. Root was similarly applauded during the brief address he made in response. At the conclusion of Mr. Root's speech the ladies, who crowded the galleries of the opera house, where the banquet was held, showered [illegible] with flowers and clapped their hands vigorously.

MRS. CORNWALLIS WEST TO OPEN NOVEL RESTAURANT

Snapshot of Mrs. Cornwallis-West, Taken Recently at the Goodwood Races. London Rumor Says She Is Seriously Considering Opening a "Restaurant" for the World's Elite.

London Rumor Says She Will Back Enterprise to Tempt the Palates of the Aristocracy.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug. 18. English society is startled by the statement that Mrs. Cornwallis West, whose first husband was Lord Randolph Churchill, is going to establish the finest restaurant in the world in this city and have a daily menu which will provide the most epicurean repast ever served. She intends to have viands that cannot be gotten anywhere else in England, and which would delight the palate of Lucullus, the greatest bon vivant ancient Rome ever knew.

Princely Salaries for Chefs.

The appointments of her cafe will be magnificent to the smallest detail, and it will be a resort exclusively for millionaires and the nobility. She will employ a corps of chefs, who will receive individual salaries which a cabinet minister would be glad to get. They will be familiar with every known style of cuisine and provide dishes which will be creations.

Mrs. Cornwallis West thinks that American visitors in London would make such a restaurant pay, if they were its only patrons. But she is sure that it will be frequented as well by dukes, counts, barons, lords, baronets and everybody with a title who also has money. Princes of the royal house would also find it an ideal resort, if her plans are consummated.

St. Regis prices in New York will be as far beneath those asked in her establishment as the most costly restaurant charges are above quick lunch rates.

Has Yankee Enterprise.

Mrs. Cornwallis is an American woman and therefore regarded as naturally enterprising. She is the daughter of the late Leonard Jerome of New York and a cousin of District Attorney Jerome. Her first husband was a famous British statesman, and she has been one of the beauties of the Court of St. James. She is very [illegible] and still remarkably handsome. Her second husband is twenty-five years younger than she, and even the junior of her own son. Owing to the disparity in their ages the Prince of [illegible] George Cornwallis West opposed his marrying Lady Randolph Churchill, but both broke down all opposition, and were wed several years ago.

ENGLISHWOMEN NOW WEAR THE MONOCLE

Five of Them Seen in Half an Hour at Ascot with the Single Eyeglass.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug. 18.—Many fashionable women are wearing the single eyeglass this season, and at every open air function the monocle is to be seen fixed awkwardly under fair brows. At Ascot five women were seen in half an hour on the exclusive lawn wearing the single eyeglass.

This curious fashion lends no charm to the feminine appearance. Several of the devotees wear veils, probably to keep the monocle in its place, but many have mastered the knack of holding it secure in the eye socket.

STEAMSHIP RATE WAR IN FAR EAST

Japan Company Reported to Be Cutting Against German Line.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, Aug. 18.—According to advices received here from Japan, a rate war has broken out between the Norddeutscher Lloyd and the Japanese steamship line, Nippon Yusen Kaisha, which latter recently acquired a Pacific fleet in order to influence passenger traffic between Asia and North America.

The struggle is confined at present to the line from Swatow to Bangkok, where rates have been reduced to a minimum. It is feared in German shipping circles that the war will extend to Australian, American and European lines in which the Nipon is interested.

PRINCE WRITES ALL ABOUT INDIAN CURRY

Dhuleep Singh, Having Sold All His Art Treasures, Compiles a Cookery Book.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug. 18.—A cook book by an Indian Prince is to be published. After selling all his household treasures at Old Buckenham Hall, Norfolk, as recently reported in the AMERICAN, Prince Victor Dhuleep Singh [illegible] has devoted his energies to theoretical cookery.

He has retired to Carlsbad, where he is deep in the compilation of a cook book de luxe. It is to be called "The Last Word," and will contain a number of special curry recipes and a menu for each of the 365 days in the year.

His wife, a daughter of the Earl of Coventry, is assisting him. The Princess's brother Lord Deerhurst married an American, Miss Bonynge, of San Francisco.

Millions Just To Be Clean

THE mammoth Pabst Brewery is a model of neatness that might well be taken as a pattern by other pure food manufacturers. Millions have been spent on the Pabst plant to make the manufacture of Pabst Beer absolutely clean, pure and wholesome.

Pabst Beer is not fermented in open vats as is usual in breweries—but in sealed tanks where no air but pure, filtered air can reach it.

Pabst Beer is not cooled in rooms where men walk in and out, but in specially constructed sealed coolers where no hands can touch it, no breath of foul air can taint it.

Pabst Beer is stored and aged only in specially constructed, hermetically sealed tanks that are kept pure and clean by rinsing only with filtered water. Absolutely no chance is taken for the slightest contamination by dirt, germs or tainted air.

Pabst Beer, in addition to being the cleanest beer, is a pure beer—the most wholesome beer because made only from the "Pabst exclusive process eight-day malt," which retains all the rich nutrition—the strength and health building elements—of the barley, and the exclusive Pabst process of brewing with eight-day malt makes Pabst Blue Ribbon the perfect beer in age, purity and strength.

When Ordering Beer, call for Pabst Blue Ribbon.

LABOR LEADER SCORES MAINE CONGRESSMAN

Charges Him With Opposition to Labor's [illegible] Legislative Matters

[illegible] is a member of a [illegible] Seamen's Marine and [illegible] and I charge him now with [illegible] a bill for this [illegible] of s[illegible]

[illegible] such an agreement. Congress passed a law providing that a seaman could only turn his wages over to his wife or relative.

"I charge Mr. Littlefield with champion[illegible] [illegible] for the reestablishing of the [illegible] system. We all understand what is meant by the ship subsidy bill. How [illegible] that you would [illegible] the Navy of United States? Mr. Littlefield championed the subsidy bill which provides that a man [illegible] with a ship master [illegible] to service in the Navy.

"Did Littlefield sign such a bill?" asked a man in the [illegible]. "No," replied Mr. Gompers. "He doesn't sign bills. He is not President. He championed such a bill and [illegible] against it.

"I charge the Hon. Charles Littlefield [illegible] with trying to inject into [illegible] ship subsidy [illegible] for consumption [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the Ship Subsidy bill. I [illegible] Mr. Littlefield's bill proposes to abolish [illegible].

"The essence of the question is that the members of Congress should have more consideration for the passengers and seamen than for the expenditure of a little money for pilots.

Gompers Demands Quiet.

There was some confusion at the rear of the room.

"I want quiet," said Mr. Gompers. "I want to say that I had an intimation that there would be an attempt to break up this meeting by friends of Mr. Littlefield."

"There are not enough friends of his here to do it," exclaimed a man in the front row. "No, I know there is not," said Mr. Gompers.

Then the man who had asked about Congressman Littlefield's signing a bill, arose and tried to say something.

"Shut up, sit down," cried a number of voices. The man sat down. Mr. Gompers then referred to the fact that T. C. Plummer of Bath wanted to debate the ques[illegible] [illegible] of merits of the Littlefield election.

"I want to say," said Mr. Gompers in reply, "that I have something better at hand than to waste words with such a [illegible] as Mr. Plummer is."

"[illegible] a letter from Quincy, Mass., which I want to read. The letter was written at No. 3 Edward street. The writer said the Machinists' Union passed a resolution asking him to favor the eight-hour bill for men working in the building of ships. John S. Hyde, vice-president of the Hyde works, went to Washington, sent the petition to Mr. Littlefield and after getting the names of the men employed by him signed to the bill [illegible]

The man who wrote the letter to Mr. Gompers was Charles W. Hanscomb of the [illegible] Workers.

When Mr. Gompers had spoken an hour, several people left the hall. It was very hot and [illegible] Lewiston is not a seaside place. [illegible] those who left were not interested in that phase of his address which referred to shipping.

You have heard that a bill was introduced in Congress to limit the hours of railway men," said Mr. Gompers, "to sixteen in twenty-four. Have you heard a whimper from Mr. Littlefield in favor of it?"

Mr. Littlefield accuses me of declaring the President of the United States is an enemy to home and liberty."

This followed an allusion to Mr. Littlefield's opposition to the bill which made it illegal to obtain injunctions against any person or persons except labor unions. "When Charles E. Littlefield says I, directly or indirectly, assented to any denunciation of the President of the United States, he says that which is absolutely untrue."

Says Bill Was Misquoted.

Mr. Gompers charged Mr. Littlefield with deliberately misquoting the bill favored by labor men in reference to injunctions.

He said he would issue a statement in a few days showing how Mr. Littlefield did the misquoting. "Mr. Littlefield's mind is so warped by dollar marks that he can't see [illegible] liberty," said Mr. Gompers. Mr. Littlefield is so much [illegible] in [illegible] influence that [illegible] against any movement that would favor [illegible] men or furnish them any relief.

Mr. Gompers said he did not know Colonel Mulnall, who is connected with an [illegible] of Mr. Littlefield and that he [illegible] a strike of printers in Po[illegible] also spoke of Charles A. [illegible] who organized the Independent Labor League, which is supporting Mr. Littlefield. Mr. Gompers then read a letter which he said Mr. Harriman wrote [illegible] in which [illegible] said

"Littlefield is an enemy of labor. I can see his [illegible] he has lost his grip on the city of Rockland. He lost it on [illegible] county long ago. He [illegible] defeated in this district very [illegible]

"I have an organization [illegible] the Tigers, 140 in number [illegible] be organized and do the work

Says Cannon Is Tricky

Mr. Gomper then referred to Mr. Cannon, who is "to speak in this district.

"Behind that smile of his," he said, "there is the most consummate trickery of any man in public life, and that trickery is not in the interests of the common people

"Morality demanded that I come here to speak to my fellow men," said Mr. Gompers. He closed by demanding action by men of all classes and especially labor men.

"Bury this man (Littlefield) in an avalanche of your votes," he cried. "Labor seeks to destroy nothing that can contribute to the nation's honor. We want to make this the home of industrial liberty."

Central Labor Union of New Bedford Urges Men to Return to Work.

New Bedford, Aug. 18.—The strike of the street car men inaugurated four weeks ago will probably be declared off to-morrow and as many of the men as employment can be found for will return to work Monday morning.

At a special meeting of the Central Labor Union, held this evening in Weavers' Hall, it was decided that the executive board of the Carmen's Union urge the necessity of calling the strike off, as it is realized that the union [illegible] hope to secure their demands from the management of the railway company.

The meeting [illegible] was held behind closed doors, no one except members of the union or those who had business with it were admitted. T. W. Kelleher presided.

President Crapo of the company said that he had heard nothing about the strike being called off.

SNATCHES TRAY OF DIAMONDS AND FLEES.

Daring Thief Makes Off With Valuable Loot From Concord, N. H., Jewelry Store.

Concord, N. H., Aug. 18.—The most sensational diamond robbery ever perpetrated in this city occurred to-night, when a man seized a tray containing $2,000 worth of diamond rings in Morrill Brothers' store at No. 9 Main street, and successfully made his escape.

The daring thief entered the store while Miss Warner, a clerk, was there alone. He asked to be shown some rings and Miss Warner placed a tray containing 20 diamond rings on the counter for his inspection. The rings varied in value from $50 to $150 each.

Dissatisfied with the stock shown, the stranger asked to be shown more. While Miss Warner was getting another display the thief snatched the tray and darted out of the store into the crowd. Miss Warner ran after him, crying out as she did so, but the thief ran round the corner and escaped.

Miss Warner says that the thief was apparently about thirty years of age, of medium height and weight. He wore a gray suit and a soft, black hat.

TRIAL RACES END; CARAMBA, VIM AND AUK ARE SELECTED

Foster's Boat Wins Two of the Three Last Races in the Best Wind of the Week.

By W. K. SMITH.

Three sonder klasse boats have finally been chosen to represent America in the Roosevelt Cup, German-American races to be held off the entrance to Salem Bay at Half Way Rock in the first week of September under the auspices of the Eastern Yacht Club.

For the past week seventeen of these little yachts have been fighting in a breath of air during the elimination exercises and until yesterday morning the regatta committee was in a great quandary for a final selection. After the races of yesterday afternoon, however, the committee acted quickly.

Caramba, owned by C. H. W. Foster, designed by Boardman and built by the Fenton Company, was the first choice. Auk, owned by Charles Francis Adams, 2d, designed by the same man as Caramba, built by the Lawley Corporation, was the second choice. Vim of New York, belonging to Commodore Trenor L. Parks of the American Yacht Club, designed by William Gardner of New York and built by the Lawley Corporation, was the third choice.

There is no doubt that the committee has made the best selections possible under the circumstances. The weather has been very poor, for out of the six days not one good sailing breeze was obtained.

How the Judges Selected.

The judges were compelled to make their selections from the percentages of the boats on each leg in each breeze that was not fluke. Out of the seventeen that appeared on the starting line for the first trial last Monday there were, it has been proved during the season's racing, several boats that would do better in a breeze, but it was decided to make the selections at the end of this week's racing.

It is to be understood that the best boat cannot necessarily be chosen in an elimination race with the breeze from four to six knots and the course to windward and leeward, but it was figures that talked in this case and it is not improbable that light weather will be on hand during the races with the Germans, in which case the best all around boats will be on hand.

The German representatives believe their crafts to be the better ones in a good sailing breeze. They have been following the races daily with great interest, and have been sailing their own boats for the past two weeks in the prevailing winds to get familiar with the kind of winds we serve over here.

For the first time in the trials the lee rails of the little boats were almost awash as they lay off on their windward work yesterday afternoon, and it seemed to the tired, though still enthusiastic, spectators and the sun-burned, worn out skippers that new life had come to them when the cooling air began to blow up about seven knots.

Grand Finale for Caramba.

The Caramba had the honor of winning the last two races of the series. The Vim was first in the two previous ones. The Auk has shown up so well in every race where there was any air moving that she was long ago picked as a most probable choice.

The three German boats are now lying in the harbor. The Tilly VI., the latest arrival, was towed down from Boston yesterday afternoon. She got here Friday from the other side. The little fleet is now complete, and is composed of the Gluckuf IV., the Wannsee and the Tilly VI.

Chairman Howard of the regatta committee, announced the satisfaction of the body in whose charge the final selection has been left when he said last night: "One good breeze is all that could be wished for in making our selections. We have chosen the best boats that have crossed the line this week, and of course believe they will be successful in keeping the cup on this side."

The first race of the day, four miles windward and leeward, introduced the two-minute allowance start and was won by the Vim. The wind was very light from the southwest, steadily increasing and promised to be a nice try out for the light weather boats before the day was out.

The Caramba was first across the line. She lay off on the port tack. The Spokane, ten seconds later crossing, chose the same lay, running over at the leeward end. The Bonidrel, at the weather a minute later, fell into a flat space before filling away, losing some seconds by the incident.

Spokane More Fortunate.

The Spokane was more fortunate, as she picked out a streak to get away in. For half a mile or more the former held the air, then she lay over to starboard as the others had done.

On four hitches Caramba had reached the first mark, 85 seconds ahead of the Sumatra. The Vim turned third and had crept up on both leaders by many seconds. The Spokane, Bonidrel and Auk filed away in order. All broke out their spinnakers to starboard and the run home began.

The air by this time began to give evidence of shifting to the southward. On only a two-mile run the change of air would make a material difference with the last boat. The Bonidrel, farthest to leeward, shifted her sails to port. The Vim was coming home in leaps and bounds. She changed her boom immediately, and the others followed suit. There was no chance for the others; they all crossed pretty well sprinkled, taking the allowance start into consideration. Summary:

First Race—Two miles to windward and return:

Yacht and Owner.	Start.	Finish.	Elapsed time.
Vim, T. Park	10 41 47	11 43 24	1 01 37
Caramba, C. Foster	10 40 19	11 42 20	1 02 07
Sumatra, F. Skinner	10 40 28	11 42 53	1 02 25
Spokane, F. Clark	10 41 03	11 43 55	1 02 52
Bonidrel, G. Wright'n	10 40 57	11 45 11	1 04 12
Auk, C. Adams 2d	10 42 00	11 46 26	1 04 26

Wind Increases.

When the second race started the wind had increased to a seven-knot breeze when the whistle blew at 12.25. Two boats, Auk and Bonidrel, were late in getting over the line. The Caramba was the first over and home. All lay off to port again. A big schooner lazed through the middle of the starting line and drove the little fleet to leeward.

The Caramba, Sumatra and Vim decided to hold their course, while the Spokane lay off toward Gloucester. After fifteen minutes all came about on the starboard hitch, the Vim appearing to have gained considerable on the two boats which led her across the mark at the start.

The Caramba reached the windward mark in the lead. She had increased her lead on the Vim. The Auk made excellent time on her two long hitches.

On the second leg, a broad reach, the ballooners were broken out when they turned in the following order: Caramba, Vim, Auk, Sumatra, Bonidrel and Spokane.

On the way home there was nothing in sight but the Caramba. The Auk outran her, but there was no hope to pull down the great lead Foster had made. Summary:

Second Race — Triangular; two miles to a leg:

	Start.	Finish.	Elapsed time.
Caramba	12 25 00	1 [illegible]	1 0[illegible]
Auk	12 27 00	1 [illegible]	1 08 16
Vim	12 26 1[illegible]	1 [illegible] 07	1 08 22
Bonidrel	12 27 00	1 [illegible] 40	1 08 40
Sumatra	12 2[illegible]	1 [illegible] 28	1 08 [illegible]
Spokane	12 2[illegible]	1 [illegible] 34	1 12 0[illegible]

Last of the Trials.

The third race, a beat and a run of four miles, course southwest by west, finished the elimination trials. The Caramba then crossed the line a winner, followed by the Auk and Vim. The Spokane, Sumatra and Bonidrel crossing in respective order.

A long hitch on the same port tack and a short one opposing were necessary to make the flag. Spokane crossed first, sung under the weather mark. She [illegible] on port tack and the rest did likewise, the Caramba and Bonidrel two and eight seconds lated.

There was no hesitation on the part of the Caramba. She began to point higher a trifle, and got more speed out of her wind. She soon opened up on the rest of the fleet. Then the tack to port began. When the leader came about she was far enough in the lead to cross the other's bows. She had plenty of time to spare, including the 25 seconds she had over the Auk. They reached the mark in the following order: Caramba, Auk, Vim, Spokane, Sumatra and Bonidrel.

On the run back the Bonidrel was the fastest moving boat, with the Sumatra next in order. The Caramba and Vim were next, with 22 seconds separating them. Summary:

Third Race—Two miles to windward and return:

	Start	Finish.	Elapsed time.
Caramba	2 1[illegible] 08	3 06 57	55 49

POOR BACKING FOR GOOD.

Before a crowd of 400 fans at Franklin Field yesterday afternoon, the Lamberts of Roxbury went down to defeat before the Roger Wolcotts of Dorchester by the score of 6 to 1. A. Good was in the points for the Lamberts and pitched fine ball, but was given ragged support. This game was the first of a series of three to decide the championship of the State. The features of the game was the playing of Brodie and Gallagher for the Wolcotts, while Banks, L. Good and Russo excelled for the Lamberts. Score:

COLLINS WON BIKE RACE AT REVERE.

In an exciting finish Elmer Collins of Lynn won the hour bike race at the Revere track last night, defeating Will Stinson of Cambridge and Menus Bedell of New York.

The winner covered 80 miles 2 laps, Stinson 87 miles 7 laps and Bedell 86 miles in the hour.

Collins led from the start. Bedell passed Stinson in the tenth mile and tacked on behind Collins. He tried to pass Collins after riding a couple of miles, but was shaken and at the same time his motor broke a roller support and he went along unpaced and lost a mile to the other pol.

In the last five minutes' riding Stinson pulled up on Collins and then began a terrific ride to the finish. Stinson could not stand the strain and was shaken from his motor, while Collins ended up the hour riding in superb form.

In the ten-mile amateur race several of the riders were thrown on the track and severely bruised and shaken up. A. F. Connors won, with A. R. MacLaren second and F. Gyth third. Time, 26.17.

MISS SEARS WITH MISS FENNO WON

Newport, R. I., Aug. 18.—In the final match of the Woman's Championship Doubles to-day, Miss Marion Fenno and Miss Eleanora Sears defeated Mrs. Barge-Wallach and Miss Edna Barger in straight sets, 8—6, 6—4.

It was the most brilliant tennis ever seen at an amateur tournament for women, and brought out a distinguished gathering of the wealthy cottagers.

Miss Fenno played a remarkably steady and consistent game, which, with the spectacular and erratic work of Miss Sears, was too strong a combination for the defeated team.

CLIFFORDS WON.

The Cliffords defeated [illegible] Mansfields yesterday at Dean's Field [illegible] Point, 11 to 5. Batteries—Cliffords, [illegible] and Conley; Mansfields [illegible].

BEALS WRIGHT WITH STILLMAN BEATEN IN LAST ROUND.

Southampton, L. I., Aug. 18.—Larned and Clothier won the final round in doubles of the tennis tourney to-day, beating Beals Wright and Stillman in straight sets. [illegible]

Final round: W. S. John[illegible] Watson, Jr., 6-2, 6-3.

BURKETT AFTER FRANCHISE

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 18.—Jesse Burkett, manager of the Worcester baseball team, has written friends here to know what the owners of the Wilkesbarre team want for the New York State League franchise. "Duke" Farrell of Marlboro, Mass., would also like to get the team.

28,000 FANS SEE CUBS DEFEAT GIANTS.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Before a crowd that [illegible] every available space in the National League grounds here to-day, the New Yorks went down to defeat before the Cubs. Great applause, some gentle and some satirical, greeted the New Yorks as they came from their bus. A royal welcome was given the Cubs, and it was evident that the mighty throng expected a Chicago victory. Both teams went through their practice stunts in snappy fashion. Each manager had a bunch of pitchers warming up but finally decided on Brown and Mathewson as the firing artists.

"Three-Fingered Brown" proved the same enigma to the Giants that he has been [illegible]. They could do nothing with his curves and the sum total [illegible] was two. On the other hand, the local [illegible] took kindly to Mathewson's [illegible] second and sixth innings. Chicago was first to score, making two runs [illegible]. With two out and two on, McCann muffed Kling's foul fly and then [illegible] Chicago catcher's liner to centre, [illegible] Steinfeldt and Tinker with the [illegible] of the game.

The [illegible] got one in third on Strang's [illegible] Seymour's [illegible] and scored [illegible] in the sixth on Seymour's [illegible] errors. In their half of [illegible] the Chicagos bumped Matty [illegible] hard. A two-bagger, one for [illegible] singles [illegible] some clever [illegible] the Cubs four runs. [illegible] the Cubs a lead of four runs [illegible] Giants were unable to overcome [illegible] went down to defeat in [illegible] of the present series. Score:

Deshler and Baldwin to Meet at the Lincoln Club

When the referee calls "time" on Tuesday night at the Lincoln Club, Chelsea, to bring together Matty Baldwin and Dave Deshler, every [illegible] points to a crowded amphitheatre to greet the young gladiators.

No match arranged for a decision in the Lincoln Club arena in recent days has created so much local feeling, and the loyal adherents of [illegible] man are imbued with unbounded confidence in the ability of their protege.

To pick men so equally matched is a hard task, and the fact that less than a year ago this pair indulged in a rigorous slugfest seems to insure the club members that on Tuesday night a rattling exhibition will be witnessed.

This [illegible] is a fair one, judging from the [illegible] performances of the men during the [illegible] has gone by since they met in the ring. Baldwin appears to be a wizard in the ring, not suffering one setback or reverse since that time. He has beaten men in New York, Philadelphia and locally, and has shown such marvellous improvement that the sports about here fancy that in a short while he will be able to hold his own with men like Nelson, Herman or Neary.

Deshler is a stumbling block that must be removed ere Matty can climb any higher, and he intends to oust the Cambridge lad from high-class company by knocking him out.

But though Baldwin is confident of victory, so is the lad from the University City. He has been prepared with care and good judgment, and if beaten on the present occasion he will retire for good and all from the ring. But, judging from his determined training, he does not intend to retire just yet.

So that it seems as if royal sport is assured for Tuesday night, and the boys will take the wraps off their bank rolls to support their favorite.

The show opens at 8 o'clock promptly, with the English bantam, Ike Bradley, facing Freddie O'Brien in a six-round bout. The second bout, also of six rounds, is between Billy Clinton of Lowell and Young Cuddy of Lawrence.

Members from out of town can easily secure their trains, as the shows at the Lincoln Club are always over at 10 o'clock.

ROCHESTER WON OUT.

Providence, Aug. 18.—Rochester won out in an eleven inning contest with the Grays to-day at Melrose Park, 5 to 4. Both pitchers were hard hit, and the visitors won out when Loudy swatted the ball to left field for two bases, took third on Moran's sacrifice, and came home on Stillman's single. The feature of the game was a home run drive by Harley to right field.

PILGRIMS WIN SLUG-FEST OVER DETROIT TIGERS WITH WINTER PITCHING

[illegible] Pilgrims [illegible] gave some their [illegible] by defeating the Tigers in the [illegible] between the two teams by a score of 8 to 4, the contest being more [illegible] than a [illegible] did the most [illegible].

The Pilgrims played [illegible] game. In the [illegible] fast as [illegible] in the Hub [illegible] and at the bat they wielded their wagon [illegible].

The Tigers put up a poor fielding exhibition with [illegible] of a wild pitch by "Wild Bill" Donovan who presented them on the start.

Winter Pitched Creditably.

George Winter, who has not appeared in a Hub game for some time, was on the rubber for the Pilgrims and he pitched creditably, except in the seventh inning when, aided by a piece of luck, the Tigers got four runs across the rubber, giving the fans quite a scare, Boston being only [illegible] ahead at this stage of the game.

With [illegible] Coughlin, the third [illegible] of the Tigers smashed a ball to left field, close to the foul line. The ball hit a stone or some other obstruction and shunted across the fair line and up a passageway leading to the bleachers connected with the third base [illegible]. According to the rules, the smash went for a home run.

The delay between the halves of the eighth inning only served to emphasize the report that disaffection exists in the ranks of the Detroit team. Donovan had taken off his baseball shoes, and put on his street shoes and also put on his jacket, giving the impression that he [illegible].

Argument Between Armour and Donovan.

Then an argument ensued between Manager Armour and Donovan, the former insisting that "Wild Bill" go in and finish the game. After much altercation, and much against his wishes, Donovan stripped himself for action. Then a bombardment followed which gave the Bostons [illegible] and cinched the game. It was said after the game that Armour and Donovan had some personal encounter, which was the reason for his refusing to officiate [illegible] box.

The big feature of the game was the home run hit of Ferris in the eighth. The ball went way past the flag pole in centre and clear to the fence, and it probably was as long a hit as ever made on the grounds. Stahl, Hoey and Winter also did good batting for the winners.

The stickwork of Matty McIntyre, the [illegible] fielder, was the stellar piece of work for the visitors.

Neither side was able to do much toward run getting until the fourth, when Boston scored [illegible]. Hayden doubled to left, went to third on a wild pitch. Parent struck out. Stahl fouled to Lindsay. Ferris walked and attempted a double steal with Hayden, who scored before Ferris was caught between first and second.

Four More for Boston in Sixth.

Boston got four more runs in the sixth. Carrigan walked. Winter sacrificed. A hit [illegible] Coughlin. All hands were safe on a fielder's choice on Hayden's grounder to Donovan. Parent doubled, scoring Carrigan and Winter. Stahl doubled, scoring Hayden and Parent. Ferris and Hoey flied to Jones and Grimshaw grounded out. [illegible]

The Tigers came within one run of tieing

Tangle, Odds-on Favorite, Wins Great Republic at Saratoga Race Track

Special to Boston Sunday American.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Nearly a [illegible] on the [illegible] six races here today. [illegible] season of 1906.

It was the Great Republic Stakes of $50,000 which lulled the [illegible] a [illegible] which made the old timers stand [illegible]. [illegible] book house sent in at least $10,000 [illegible] $100,000 came from quality [illegible] and [illegible].

The bookmakers [illegible] business on the race with their strong boxes bulging with money. John Madden's great filly, Tangle, stood a 7 to 10 favorite and attracted [illegible] play from all sides.

It was a great race, with Tangle a magnificent winner. R. T. Wilson's Gallavant at 8 to 1 was second. W[illegible] showed [illegible] Miller had [illegible] for the first half and [illegible] Once straightened out for home Sewell went to the outside and Miller closed strong from the centre with Gallavant. Within a few yards of the finish it looked like Gallavant, but Sewell [illegible] Tangle up and won by half a length.

The Hopeful Stakes went to Peter Pan, an added starter. Peter Pan won handily from McCarter, with Miller up, and ruling 2 to 1, with Pope Joan the Keene [illegible] a strong betting fac[illegible].

BART SULLIVAN IS VICTOR OVER CHAMP

Bart Sullivan defeated the world's champion, Frank J. Kanaly, in the one-half mile match race at the picnic of the Old Club of Ward 18 at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, yesterday afternoon. This was the principal athletic event of the picnic and great interest was centred in it.

The other events resulted as follows: Campbell won the one mile run, with Potter second, Raymond won the one hundred yard dash, with Raymond second, Downey won the broad jump, with Delaney second, Alec McEachern won the swimming race, with Allen second.

SO. QUINCY LOST, 16 TO 0.

Neponset Dorchester had an easy time defeating South Quincy to the tune of 16 to 0 on the Dunbar Avenue Grounds, Dorchester, yesterday afternoon. Newell, the old Amherst twirler, was on the rubber for Dorchester, and South Quincy could not fathom his delivery. The features were the batting of Nagle and Bennett for Dorchester, and the fielding of Spargo for South Quincy.

WOONSOCKET BEATS SALEM

Salem, Aug. 18.—Woonsocket defeated Salem on the Bridge street grounds this afternoon, the visitors proving lively on the sacks and playing fast ball from the start. Barrett pitched good ball for Salem. The score:

By EDWARD E. COGSWELL

All is in readiness for the opening of the Grand Circuit of 1906 at Readville race track to-morrow afternoon. With pleasant weather it is certain that a big crowd will be out to welcome the horses that have this season been busily engaged in making turf history since the beginning of the circuit at Cleveland.

Secretary Charles Jewett has been successful in getting all of the stars in the whole country to enter in the races which are scheduled to be decided before next Saturday evening. Old race track followers declare it is the best entry list ever had at the course located at the foot of the Blue Hills. This insures red hot contests.

Each Heat a Race.

With the progression in the light harness horse sport the directors of the New England Breeders' Association were quick to grasp the forward movement and still keep a step in the lead of all other tracks in the land. It is on this account that every event will be over in three heats, and each heat will be a race by itself.

The purses will, too, be divided three ways and the first three horses in each heat [illegible] receive [illegible] in order 70, 20 and 10 per cent [illegible]. This for example, in the "Blue Hill" stake to [illegible], the total amount of $1,500 is divided in thirds making $1500 for each heat or race, of which the winner will get $1,000, second horse $300 and the third $150.

The "Blue Hill" was first inaugurated in 1896 when Strigathline was returned the victor in 2.15½. The record for the stake is held by Kinney Lou, the winner in 1905 of 2.08¾.

Brilliant Girl Favorite.

In figuring out the possibilities for to-morrow [illegible] the California mare, Brilliant Girl, in Jack Curry's stable, the favorite. It can in no way, however, be regarded a cinch, as opposed to her is Ann [illegible], [illegible] stake this year at Cleveland, Captain Bacon, called by experienced horsemen the fastest unmarked trotter in the country to-day; Czarina Dawson, that last season was a close second to Minnsheet in 2.08¼, and is now coming good, so they say, and a whole bunch more that can tramp on 2.12, or possibly a little better.

Then comes the 2.10 pace, and the American Horse Breeders' Futurity stake for two-year-olds [illegible] is [illegible] a world of attention. Blue Hill, in Henry Titer's string is the [illegible]. He has been a trial in 2.19 [illegible]. It was counted that Rosa the Allen Farm entry was [illegible] almost till she sale [illegible] lameness last week [illegible] Young to lay her up [illegible] two weeks. This makes it doubtful [illegible] she [illegible] the starter. The others in are well known to have plenty of speed.

Ardelle Hard to Beat.

On Tuesday is the "Norfolk." It was first raced in 1896 and the record of the race is held by Morning Star of 2.01¾, made two years ago. It is hard to see how anything in this year [illegible] feat Ed Geers' Ardelle, which has already won all of her races down [illegible]. Argot Boy, Bowen [illegible] and Ed C. have shown they can [illegible] and will keep the "grand old man of the sulky" busy in maintaining his list of victories with Ardelle.

The American Horse Breeder Futurity for three-year-olds has been the talk of horsemen for the past four months. Will it be Gay Bingen, Cochato, Ed Custer, or some dark one, is the question on everybody's tongue.

The "Ponkapog" is booked for Wednesday. This event was initiated three seasons ago, and the record of the stake is held by Ethel's Pride of 2.07¼, last year's winner. On form the race looks like Gold dust Maid in Geers's string ought to carry off the laurels but this cannot mean she will have any walkover, as for opponents she will meet worthy rivals in Mack Mack, Oro, Roberta, Advancer, etc., that can fairly burn up a track.

In the Three-Year-Old Futurity for pacers, there will be nothing to it but Brenda Yorke, though there is bound to be something doing with heats inside the 2.10 notch.

Nut Boy for Big Race.

For the "Massachusetts" Thursday, the pick will be Jack Crabtree's good gelding Nut Boy. Those who know say he can do 2.07 like breaking sticks. Of course, he is liable to get bother in drawing a bad post [illegible] and poor [illegible] thing favorable he has [illegible]. [illegible] Sadie Mac last year. This is its eleventh renewal.

The "Readville" on the same day should be a corker. Angiola is right to an edge. [illegible] will have her weaving cut out by such [illegible] Leonard, Marshoet, Tuesday, Axcellette.

[illegible] is the "Neponset," another stake [illegible] saw the light of day in 1898. The record for the stake is held by Gallagher, of 2.04¾, winner the second year of the event's existence. Then there is the 2.02 pace with [illegible] crackerjacks in as Angus Pointer, Baron Grattan, Joan M., Maude Keswick [illegible] Nervolo.

RHODE ISLAND TENNIS.

Providence, Aug. 18.—The Rhode Island tennis tournament will open September 1, at Agawam Hunt, East Providence, with the State championship matches. In the singles the winner will qualify to contest the title with Jed Jones, the present champion. Winners of the doubles will have to wrest that title from Messrs. Jones and Howard D. Wilcox. Entries are limited to bona fide Rhode Island residents.

Lou Criger a Well Man After Suffering Great Agony and Almost Given Up for Dead

His Return to Baseball Considered Almost Miraculous by Experts. GAINED THIRTY POUNDS IN PAST FEW WEEKS

By Alexander C. Sullivan.

To Dr. A. F. Christian of No. 405 Marlboro street belongs the credit of effecting the greatest cure, as well as the most important to the baseball world inasmuch as it decided whether or not the country was to lose the services of its generally conceded best catcher.

When Lou Criger, the crack backstop of the Boston American baseball team, entered Dr. Christian's hospital it was a question whether the Elkhart, Ind., crack crajack would ever be able to don another baseball uniform. Pluck and a determination [illegible] counted largely in his battle against big odds, which he won.

Criger was as emaciated as a man in the last throes of starvation. He was like a living skeleton. His cheek bones protruded, and his eye had a stare like that which comes to a person about to depart from this life.

Before Criger came to this city for treatment he had been in the habit for several weeks of taking morphine six times [illegible]. He would not take food of any kind. He had an abhorrence for [illegible].

Rounded Into Good Form.

Dr. Christian, after constant attendance at the bedside of Criger for a week or more, got the Boston catcher so that he lost his craving for "dope," and got a relish for cereals and the like. Gradually Criger rounded into form, and it was not [illegible] weeks after the time that [illegible] Dr. Christian's establishment that he was able to walk around and even to attend the ball games. Dr. Christian says that Criger was about as near to death as any man could get without dying.

However, the doctor doesn't absolutely guarantee that the affliction will never revisit Criger. He was troubled with dorsalgia, which is a disease of the nerves. The crack catcher is apt to catch cold and thus bring on the old trouble.

It was only two weeks ago, or since he has been discharged from Dr. Christian's hospital, that Criger caught cold and pleurisy and bronchial trouble was the result. Dr. Christian says that at the time Criger came very near contracting pneumonia.

Criger is an absolutely well man to-day. He says so himself. The Hub catcher even goes so far as to say that he feels better than ever in his life. His normal weight is 142 pounds. He weighed 127 pounds when he first came under Dr. Christian's care. He now tips the scales at 157½.

In Fighting Trim Now.

Criger looks healthier in the face than he did last year or the year before. His eye is clearer and his complexion better than at any time since he has been a member of the Boston American ball team.

As he showed in his attempt to play against the Chicagos Friday, Criger is physically as strong as ever. He has his catching arm in good working order, and his legs are just as willing to respond in his efforts to run as ever before.

Those doctors in the West under whose notice Criger came, and also those doctors of this city, who know his case, say that Criger's rounding into form so early after such a serious illness is nothing short of miraculous. They fail to understand how he could put on so much new flesh and regulate it so that he can throw and run as well as before his illness.

[illegible] by a foul tip in Friday's game and that was the reason he didn't [illegible] after the second inning. He will be back in the game as soon as the injury heals.

When [illegible] regarding the remarkable recovery of Criger, Dr. Christian gave a resume of the case, which included every [illegible] to his discharge from the hospital as follows:

"Criger told me that he first took ill last October 25. He went to a hospital in New York and stayed six weeks without any help. He then went to Chicago, St. Louis and the Hot Springs, Ark. At the latter resort he largely acquired the drug habit to assuage the fierce pain which he suffered, and was finally sent home so ill that hopes for his recovery were hardly entertained.

Taylor Takes a Hand.

"Then it was that General Taylor, whose son owns the Boston American Baseball Club franchise, came to me and asked if I would try to cure Criger. He pointed out that if I failed in Criger's [illegible] it would not injure my reputation as Criger had been given up by all the other doctors who had observed his case. I also said that if I cured him it would [illegible] mean to the baseball world, and particularly to the Hub team.

"Criger came to my place the night of May 25, a very sick man. I examined him and found he was suffering intense pains in the arms, back and legs. So racking were the pains that he could scarcely bear the weight of a sheet over him.

"Moreover, he had got into the habit of taking morphine four times during the day and twice at night. This I stopped gradually. His affliction I diagnosed as dorsalgia. Pain radiated from the fifth dorsal to the point of the scapulae. The pain then shot along the arm to the solar plexus. His arm was [illegible] with neuritis. In addition, he had intense headaches.

"In reply to my questions, he said that he had eaten practically nothing for eight weeks. He had no [illegible] water on his stomach. He was also [illegible] so badly that he [illegible].

Thought He Would Die.

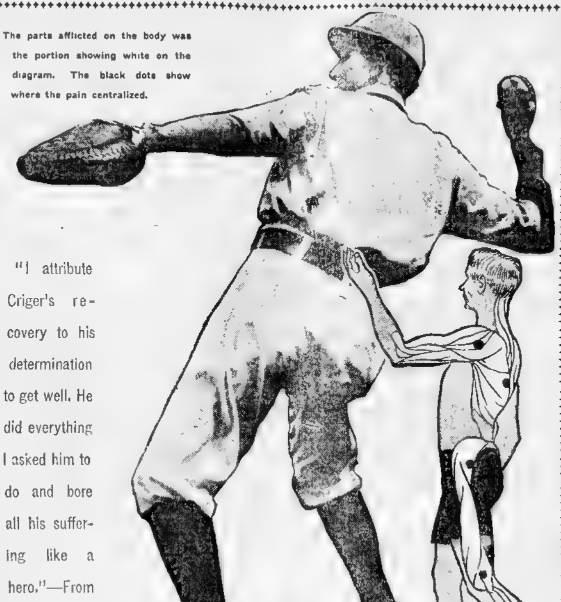
"His case was certainly not very promising, as he didn't seem to have vitality enough to last till a change could be made. I watched him several nights in succession, and gave him special treatments once and twice a day.

"After three days he showed improvement. In nine days the pains had entirely left his body. Gradually he began to eat, and then he became able to sleep nights. In three and a half weeks he was able to go out [illegible] hours a day. Five weeks from his entrance he left the hospital, but came back for an occasional treatment.

"I attribute Criger's recovery largely to his determination to get well. He did everything that I asked him to do and bore all his suffering like a hero."

It [illegible] Dr. Christian also cured ex-Governor Brackett of Massachusetts, who suffered from a disease similar to Criger's.

The parts afflicted on the body was the portion showing white on the diagram. The black dots show where the pain centralized.



"I attribute Criger's recovery to his determination to get well. He did everything I asked him to do and bore all his suffering like a hero."—From interview with Dr. Christian.

TENNEYITES, WITH YOUNG PITCHING, BEAT REDS IN 10-INNING CONTEST

Cincinnati, Aug. 18.—It was a contest between Pitchers Young and Wicker to-day. The game went an extra inning with the Bostons the victors in the tenth. Howard's double with the bases full won the game.

The Bostons opened up on Wicker viciously at the start of the game. Bridwell and Tenney died meekly enough on a pop fly and a strike out. Then Brain beat out a high bounder to Kelley who played short because Corcoran injured his finger yesterday. Brain tried a steal and Schlei's throw had him beat but Kenny neglected touching "Davy." This was good for a run as Brown floated a single to centre enabling Brain to score. Howard also singled to centre, but Smoot's fling caught Brown at third.

Huggins bunted in the Red's half and Brain failed in an attempt to field it from a sitting posture in the grass. Later "Hug" failed to steal and Kelley and Jude both hit soaring flies to Dolan.

Again in the third, Deal beat out an unlooked for bunt and Siegel sacrificed. Brain, however, got Wicker's short fly and doubled Deal at second.

In the fifth, with two out, Young surprised himself with a single over second and Bridwell lifted a Texas Leaguer over Huggins. Tenney swung hard three times but missed the ball.

The Reds moved up even in their turn. Delehanty singled to Bridwell and Smoot pushed one past Tenney and Delehanty reached third. Schlei stung the ball straight to Howard, forcing Smoot, but Delehanty scored.

In the eighth the Reds handed the Bostons a run. Bridwell singled to centre. On Tenney's bunt, Deal would have thrown "Brid" out at second, only Kelly failed to cover the bag. Brain pooped to Smoot. Brown forced Tenney, Kelly to Huggins, but the latter threw badly to first, allowing Bridwell to score. Score:

PITTSBURG 7; BROOKLYN 2.

Pittsburg, Aug. 18.—Pittsburg took the first game of the series from the Brooklyn Superbas this afternoon by the score of 7 to 2. The game was too one-sided to be interesting, but it was fast and well played.

Sam Leever did the twirling for the Pirates, and although he was touched up safely seven times, he kept the bingles well scattered and was never called upon to exert himself to any extent. Score:

FIELD DAY IS HELD BY THE FORESTERS AT WORCESTER.

Worcester, Aug. 18.—Fast time and spirited contests marked the field day of the Foresters here this afternoon at the Oval. The 100-yard dash was [illegible] interesting, and was run in two trials, a semi-final and final heat. In the first heat W. C. Prout of Boston and C. W. Faulkner of Boston fought it out and beat out a fast field. The second heat also produced a stirring finish between Shea of Worcester and F. W. Kelley of St. Alphonsus A. A., Boston, Shea winning by a narrow margin.

The semi-finals had J. J. McGee, Worcester, and H. P. McCarthy, Worcester. This brought into the finals the six men, and produced one of the fastest heats ever run on Worcester Oval. Shea, starting from the 2½ yard mark, beat out J. J. McGee, 7½ yards, and Prout, who was on the 4½ yard mark. The men came up abreast almost to the tape, when Shea by a fine burst of speed crossed in ten seconds flat.

The Summary:

40-yard run—Won by W. C. Prout, Boston; J. J. McGee, Worcester, second; M. Lacy, Worcester, third. [illegible]

[illegible] Won by J. F. O'Donnell, Ancient Order; W. H. McGecker, St. Alphonsus A. A.; second; H. W. Dixon, Worcester, third. Time—[illegible].

Teddy Beats Yellow Boy in Close Speedway Race

Another of the famous weekly matinees of the Dorchester Driving Club was held yesterday afternoon over the Franklin Field Speedway, and despite the heat a large attendance turned out to see the sport.

Though the Marshfield Fair coming this week there were many of the club members was [illegible] in the matinee as they were saving their horses to capture the cash hung up for the pacers at the annual festival on the Cape.

Still five races were decided, and there were quite a number of very interesting heats before the winners were called out by the judges and given blue ribbons.

Teddy Beat Yellow Boy.

The hardest battle was in Class D between Teddy and Yellow Boy. It seemed like the one having the pole just gained advantage enough to win the heat. Teddy being the lucky one in the initial heat brought him out the victor, as in the races at Franklin Field the contestants reverse their pole positions in every heat.

[illegible] pretty contest was between W. W. Saylor and Hazel D. The latter raced well but breaks at the wrong time lost her the heat of the summary. This is not remarkable considering that she has two fouls, the last only weaned in the past Spring. Henry Berry was a happy man, though, over the nice way that W. W. Saylor behaved.

The remaining races were won in straight heats, though J. M. E. Morrill, owner of the trotting mare, Helvetia, declared that never again would he race against a pacer, Sunrise being that sort of gaited proposition. If the Dorchester Club cannot scare up a trotter to match against Helvetia Mr. Morrill intends keeping her entirely out of the matinees in the future, unless he changes his mind.

Judge's Fine Work.

A noteworthy feature of the afternoon was the fine work of Starting Judge Joseph Swenderson. While it was his initial appearance [illegible] critical audience, yet so [illegible] and send away the horses head and head, that it was one of the principal topics of conversation [illegible] crowd dispersed after the races. JORDAN MARSH WINS CLOSE GAME WITH SIEGEL NINE.

In the first of a series of games for the dry goods championship of the city, Jordan Marsh defeated Henry Siegel Company by the score of 3 to 2 at the Locust Street Grounds. It was one of the most exciting contests seen on local diamonds this season. Inning after inning the teams ran side by side, both teams getting men to base in nearly every inning, only to have them retired by fast fielding or die in a futile attempt to steal.

Jordan's playing was erratic; brilliant at times and then poor; the base running was lurid, no less than three excellent chances to score being thrown by stupid head work.

O'Neil was in the box for the Jordans and pitched steady, consistent ball in spite of the discouraging misplays on the part of his teammates. He plugged along courageously and had his reward in the ninth.

Grimes, the ex-Dartmouth crack, was in the points for Siegel, and pitched splendid ball, seemingly having the heavy hitting Jordanites at his mercy in the critical stages.

Siegel was the first to score by an error and a two-bagger. Jordan tied the score in the third.

Madden, the first man up, beat out Andrews' throw, advanced to second on Grimes's wild pitch, and romped home on Marx's clean single to right. Siegel drew into the lead in the sixth, with a batting fest. Andrews rapped for two bags, Fay and McManus following with safe taps, Andrews scoring.

For three innings that run loomed as large as a mountain. Then came the [illegible]. Glynn redeemed himself with a two-bagger. O'Neil followed with a scorching single that was too hot for Grimes to hold. When, with none out, Flanagan came to bat the excitement was so intense that the crowd escaped from police restraint, and surged around the diamond, yelling and cheering like mad. With two strikes called on him, he swung on the ball squarely and planted it in right garden, scoring Glynn and O'Neil and winning the game. The score:

BASEBALL PILGRIMS BEAT TIGERS 8 TO 4 RACING TANGLE WINS GREAT REPUBLIC BOXING BALDWIN READY FOR DESHLER GOLF

Wonderful Progress of the Maxwell-Briscoe Co.

INTERESTING DETAILS ABOUT THEIR TWO NEW VANDERBILT CUP CANDIDATES.

BY ALEX. SCHWALBACH.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Cosmopolitan New York, the motor metropolis, the greatest motor market in the world, does not make many of the cars that are sold there. This is because ground values and rents are high and labor costs are also badly demanded. Besides all of this the motor manufacturing industry needs lots of elbow room, for automobiles are big things, and also because our city streets are not suitable for testing grounds.

One big metropolitan concern is the Maxwell-Briscoe Company, located in this pretty and historic town just twenty-five miles away from New York by either railroad or motor car on the highway. Tarrytown must, of course, be considered a suburb of New York, because of its proximity as already noted.

Colonel Pardee, their jolly, rubicund, silver-haired representative in New York, graciously offered me one of their cars for a trip to Tarrytown. An hour after I started from Central Park I was at my destination, after a lovely ride along the banks of the scenic Hudson.

The big brick factory of the Maxwell-Briscoe [illegible] end of Kingsland Point, which juts out into the [illegible] River, [illegible] three miles wide here opposite Nyack. The fine old Philipse Manor grounds are so tremendously large that [illegible] ask how [illegible] the place was [illegible] famous old Kingsland mansion facing the river is used for the offices of the company, the mansion being surrounded on all sides by a dense growth of pine and oak trees to the water's edge.

J. D. Maxwell and Benjamin Briscoe, the heads of the company, are a pair of interesting men. They [illegible] together like the Siamese twins [illegible] has always regarded [illegible] and Pythias part of the industry. Maxwell is a ruddy, tawny blond, while Briscoe is the darkest of brunettes, but both are sturdy, active men.

Vanderbilt Cup Cars.

The first man I met as I dismounted from the car in the shop yard was Mr. Briscoe himself. He did not know of my coming, but like Josiah Allen's wife, "was not surprised," but cordially invited me in, before I did anything else, to see the two big Vanderbilt racers which they are building for the American elimination trial for a place on the Vanderbilt team.

One of the cars has a big vertical eight-cylinder, seventy-five horsepower motor, produced by coupling together two of their thirty-six horsepower vertical motors such as they use on their new four-cylinder cars. This motor, which was on the testing block, was ready to mount on the frame of the car, which was ready for it, the whole chassis being almost ready for the road. Only one commutator and one carbureter are used, experiments having shown that it was difficult to make two separate ones synchronize. The other Vanderbilt racing car is a twelve-cylinder, horizontal double-opposed motor and develops 100 horsepower. Both of these motors will be hung in the frames from a three-point suspension, typically Maxwell. The chassis will be fitted with heavy wire wheels, which have already been built, and every separate part has been duplicated so that during the tryout of the cars a new part will be ready for use if needed. Just which one of these cars will be used the road tests will determine in a few days. The construction of these two racing monsters—and they are really the biggest racing cars ever built—has proceeded rapidly, but with infinite care and prodigious cost. The two big crank shafts, with their wide bearings, costing $500 apiece to produce, and every part of the car, have been made in their own shops and tool rooms.

For the Vanderbilt race they have leased a large plot of ground directly opposite Krug's Hotel on the Jericho Turnpike for the accommodation of their cars. Here will also be installed a complete shop and working outfit and quarters for their men. The building will be of frame construction covered with corrugated iron, bearing, of course, the famous Maxwell ad. Mr. C. W. Kelsey, their hustling sales manager, is down on the ground now superintending the construction of the building.

Designer Maxwell Talks.

After luncheon in the office I had an interesting talk with Mr. J. D. Maxwell, the designer of the cars and after whom they are named. While the concern is not old in years, as things go in this young industry, it must be borne in mind that Mr. Maxwell had primarily a most extended designing and engineering practice covering a period of over ten years in the automobile industry. He said that the concern was founded on a two-cylinder horizontal opposed motor designed by him, but that they had since added to their line a fifteen horsepower motor of similar construction, and that their odd prices of $780 for their runabout and $1,150 were arrived at in a peculiar way. Originally they had intended to sell both cars for less, but as the building of the motors and complete cars progressed, both labor and material added extra cost, and hence the cars were built up to the prices that they now sold them for.

While on this subject I asked Mr. Maxwell how about prices for next year? His answer was positive and to the point, that they could not possibly reduce their prices even to meet competition, because if they did they would do so at a loss and have to quit the business. Quantity of production was what made their price low, they having produced over 3,000 cars.

Their stamped and sheet metal body, an original feature of their own, and which like the Maxwell motor was one of the corner-stones of the company, they would always retain because it could not be shaken to pieces and was fireproof. The new model runabout, which they called the "Speedster," Mr. Maxwell said, was of the same general construction as their first motor, only they had raised the compression slightly and made the whole car lighter, which, however, added a little to the cost.

At the last New York show Mr. Maxwell said they had exhibited and demonstrated a four-cylinder 36 horse-power car with a vertical motor such as they are now turning out. Mr. Maxwell said they should have turned out these motors in large quantities before now, as they had a big demand for them, but they were too busy on their other types and could not produce them. They had, however, kept plugging away at the parts for them, and when they made their public debut in the A. A. A. tour, with their other models, they had scored most decisively by winning the Deming trophy, the winning car being driven by Mr. C. W. Kelsey, who, while he is in their employ as sales manager, must still be considered an amateur driver.

The Four-Cylinder Car.

I asked Mr. Maxwell if, when their four-cylinder cars were fairly under way, whether they would still continue to make the two-cylinder car. He said he saw no reason why they should not. The demand for them was always increasing, and so long as there was a demand for them they would certainly make them. "Why," said he, "in mid-August we are now employing 550 men in this shop alone, our warerooms are empty, we needing no storage room for our completed cars." Mr. Maxwell said they had placed their two-cylinder motors across the front of the car, where it was most accessible, and that the great point in favor of this type of car to the American buyer, a nation of buggy riders, was its first low cost, its perpetual low cost of maintenance, and the rest of it was best expressed by the catch-line used in their advertising here. They had always believed in public competitions and especially daily newspaper publicity as to the results thereof, and pointed to a cabinet full of trophies, on top of which rested the handsome Deming trophy, as the result of their racing, which says that "Maxwell Cars Are Perfectly Simple and Simply Perfect."

[illegible] that while this was [illegible] the Vanderbilt [illegible] Mr. Maxwell said that [illegible] expansion of [illegible] employed in the [illegible] about 1,000 men. In Pawtucket, Providence, R. I., they built their runabouts. In Tarrytown their touring cars and their new [illegible]-cylinder product, while at Chicago they merely assembled their parts for their Western trade, so as to save time and freight charges. Their cars were sold largely all over the world by their agents, they having exported over 200 cars this year. In the big cities of this country, they practically maintained branch houses of their own, because, while these branch houses were all separate incorporated companies, they bore the Maxwell-Briscoe name, and they owned the controlling interest in them.

The matter of increasing their facilities was answered by Mr. Benjamin Briscoe, who is the delegate to the American Motor Car [illegible] this firm is an active member. Mr. Briscoe said that if Tarrytown had a [illegible] history they had pretty [illegible] the town [illegible] industry [illegible] families had filled North Tarrytown to overflowing, and [illegible] visited the town and their activity, Tarrytown might now [illegible]. Their influence in securing better roads locally had [illegible] the town having ably responded to their demands, but just what they would do in the future as to increasing their facilities here he was at present unprepared to say.

Getting back to the question of construction again I asked Mr. Maxwell if he had [illegible] the six-cylinder proposition as he had the eight and twelve-cylinder idea in his racing cars. He said he had gone deeply into the matter and that any one could see that six-cylinder cars will be largely used hereafter, but not, he said, for ordinary town and touring use. The time will come, he said, when big enclosed palace cars on our highways and roads will be as familiar a sight as they are now on railroads. Our wealthy men will own them and take them from place to place in them. Big dealers will also own them and rent them out for touring purposes, but just when this time would come only time itself could answer. A man should be able to charter such a car for his family use, so he could follow the sun south in the Winter or north in the Summer time, and these big cars, he said, will undoubtedly have six-cylinder motors.

The four-cylinder motor, at least up to 40 horse-power, Mr. Maxwell said, is now the standard, and he believed it always would be, around which the others would always revolve, but above that the six-cylinder motor would come into vogue. He questioned very much, indeed, whether the eight-cylinder motor would ever become popular because of the inherent difficulties of its construction and operation. Nearly all the big eight-cylinder motors, excepting one or two, his own included, he laughingly said, had had some difficulty in the hands of the maker, which difficulty would probably be increased in the hands of the user, and that for mechanical reasons which had been well covered before, the six-cylinder motor was better for all-around use.

Roads, Not Cars, in Fault.

Comfort, he said, was one of the paramount questions of the day, but the question of comfort was somewhat unfair to the maker. Users of motor cars should look to the Highway Commissioners and road makers for comfort, who had illegally obstructed the roads by bumps and depressions, and the dust problem was one that might easily be mitigated by the use of tar or oil. Automobiling, he thought, was an active outdoor exercise, and to make it too effete and refined would take away a part of its vigorous effect. Anybody, he thought, could add comfort to a car with heavy body and massive upholstering, but all of which added to the enormous burden on the chassis and power plant. He thought it was better to add some sort of a friction shock absorber to the springs, but that after all the best shock and vibration absorber was the pneumatic tire, which removed the vibration at the point of contact namely, between the ground and the tire. Mr. Maxwell said it had been the dream of inventors for years to do away with the pneumatic tire and substitute spring wheels and other devices. Better, he thought, to think of building good roads, because in ten years we would have good roads all over the country due to the influence of the automobile. He said: "I have always believed in big tires for our present type of roads, but their first cost and their cost of replacing is almost prohibitive, besides the room a big tire takes to carry on the car, and after you have carried an extra tire for a long time on the car, one-half of its wearing life is gone when put to use, and tire troubles then begin."

I put the pregnant question of motor business wagons to him. Mr. Maxwell said that they had been so busy building pleasure vehicles that they had only built one truck and which they had at the Vanderbilt race last year. It was the same construction as their regular chassis, but having heavier wheels and solid rubber tires. They had used it every day since, doing the work of three teams, and for which they had previously paid $1 per ton for hauling. The big truck pulls from ten to twenty tons per day from their factory to the railroad yards and steamboat wharf, the operators being only a driver and helper, and in their busy times the truck had worked fourteen and fifteen hours a day, but that owing to the goods roads they had built for its use the tires on it were as good as ever, showing, Mr. Maxwell said, conclusively, that a motor truck needs good roads for good traction and not a rough cobble-stone road as our city road makers produce, because they thought the horse needed a rough foothold for his iron shod feet. Tarrytown [illegible] had a few sharp hills and grades to surmount, but the big truck never got stalled, because they used an extra car at times as a tractor to help it up hill.

Summing it up, Mr. Maxwell said that the motor business wagon problem would not be hard to solve when the time comes, because the extensive use of the pleasure automobile has already educated the head of every big mercantile house in its use. Hence he had confidence in the motor vehicle's ability to do the work and already [illegible] driver himself, he of course, realizes that there are others who can drive also, even the meek and humble horse truck driver if he is educated to it.

Mr. Maxwell said that the future of the whole automobile industry was certainly secure and that all it needed was confidence, capacity, credit and capital, all of which the big makers had, and that the other built-in promoter fellows who attempted to do a cut-throat business would soon find that they were without a market, without an organized selling force and agencies to compete with the established big makers or the business of the world.

LEOMINSTER IN 14th.

Leominster, Mass., Aug. 18.—The best game of the season was played here today between Leominster and Newton. The score was tied in the ninth inning and they were obliged to play fourteen innings before the winning run was made. English and Driscoll played an exceptionally strong game. Collins and Sullivan excelled for their team. Score:

the score in the seventh. Lindsay and McIntyre singled, the former scoring on Crawford's long fly to Hayden. Schaeffer singled to right. Coughlin got a lucky home run, the ball bounding into the pavilion bleachers, scoring McIntyre and Schaeffer ahead of him.

The Bostons scored three in the eighth, which wound up the run getting for both sides. Hayden walked, and was sacrificed by Parent. Stahl singled, scoring Hayden. Ferris knocked a homer, scoring Stahl ahead of him. Hoey singled, but was forced by Grim, Schaeffer to Lowe. Coughlin threw out Morgan. The score:

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Jones hit the first ball pitched by Winter for a single to left.

* * *

The Tigers got two hits in the first but couldn't get a man beyond the initial sack.

* * *

It looked good to see Bobby Lowe, the old Boston National second baseman, covering shortstop.

* * *

Hoey fouled twice to the grand stand on his first time up, then got three balls, and finally sent a long fly to Jones.

* * *

"Wild Bill" Donovan tried hard to sacrifice Schmidt in the third, and struck out on three fouls, the last an attempted bunt.

* * *

A fan got out of his seat in the grand stand to dodge a foul from Crawford's bat in the fourth, the ball striking him on the head.

* * *

Coughlin ran after a foul from Hayden's bat in the fourth, but lost it, as he slipped when almost under the sphere.

* * *

Boston did not hit safely until Hayden doubled to left in the fourth.

* * *

Hayden and Ferris tried the double steal in the fourth, Hayden scoring before Ferris was run down between first and second. It was a clever piece of business.

* * *

"Wild Bill" had two strikes on Hayden in the eighth and then gave him his base on balls.

* * *

Hobe Ferris's homer in the eighth went away past the flag pole in centre field.

* * *

Coughlin's homer in the sixth was a fluke. The ball went fair and shunted into the pavilion bleachers, which is foul territory.

* * *

Winter had perfect control, not passing a man.

ST. LOUIS, 9; ATHLETICS, 4.

Special to Boston Sunday American.

Philadelphia, Aug. 18.—St. Louis won today's game here by scoring runs in bunches of 4 and 5 each. They got a quartette in the fourth on 4 hits and errors. They knocked Dygert out of the box in the ninth, scoring 2 runs on a pass and 4 hits. Waddell took Dygert's place. An error and a force out sent in 3 more runs. Petty was very wild in the fourth and Powell took his place. After Jack got warmed up the Athletics were helpless. Score:

CHICAGO, 10; NEW YORK, 0.

New York, Aug. 18.—For eight innings today it was a pitchers' battle between Chesbro and Walsh, with honors even. In the ninth inning the Chicago Americans fell on Chesbro and hammered his curves to all corners of the field, which, aided by loose fielding on the part of New York, gave the leaders nine runs and the game. Doc Newton, the big left-handed pitcher of the New Yorks, was suspended by Manager Griffith today for insubordination. Score:

TOM KEENE BEATS LOUIS GUERTIN AT OAK ISLAND.

Some lively Gaelic sport was on tap at the Clan Na Gael field day at Oak Island Grove yesterday, with track games, hurling and football on the card.

Some of the events were those postponed from July 4 when the rain stopped them. The management was all at sea trying to run off the different events and the professional athletes had a strong kick coming [illegible] they were treated.

They were told that the prize moneys would be cut in halves, and to cap the climax several events were called off.

Tom Keene, the fastest professional sprinter in America, who has run in races abroad, was very emphatic in his denunciation of the action taken against the athletes.

The first bit of sport was the ball game of six innings between the Holy Name team and the South Boston team. They are hot rivals and it was a close contest, with the Holy Name being a victor, 6 to 4.

A half dozen sprinters toed the mark in the 100-yard dash, the first track event, with Tom Keene and Louis Guertin the pets.

1906 Ardennes, Ardennes Circuit	3.0	Duray (Dietrich)	[illegible]	[illegible]

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Duray's recent work in the Ardennes circuit, when he traveled at the rate of seventy miles an hour for the 3.6 miles of the course, establishing a new world's record, has moved the knowing ones to get to work with pencil and paper, calculating what speed will be made by the big men in the coming Vanderbilt. There can be no question but what the average miles per hour in the latter event, both the trials and the finals, will be greatly in excess of the 61.51 miles, the record created last year. This idea is borne out by the fact that the foreign drivers will handle virtually the same great racing machines they have used in recent European contests of international character, that the racing machine of today is much speedier, and fully, if not more, reliable, so far as reliability is concerned, as were the machines which created the records of last year and the year previous.

High Speed Expected.

There is a strong impression [illegible] of the Americans that [illegible] Vanderbilt, which means [illegible] out of the American cars [illegible], will show a much greater degree of speed than previously. Not only that, but all the cars will go the entire distance of the race, making the trials a veritable preface to the great event of the year. It is true that the American manufacturers have exhibited a much greater interest in this road event than ever. They have done their utmost to produce machines that will stand in comparison and speed with the foreign product. The success of the Locomobile last year, in both the trials and the final, was such as to prove positively that American cars have a right to enter into competition with those from abroad. It likewise proved a good thing for the domestic manufacturing interests, as it was the incentive which made others endeavor more strongly than ever to bring out racing machines that shall be of value in the coming contest.

Two Thomas Cars.

E. R. Thomas, who had a car in the trial of a year ago, and who, by the way, is a member of the racing commission, has certainly gone to considerable trouble in the production of two machines that shall carry his colors in the contest. He has had built a special manufacturing plant in Buffalo, where the two machines have been constructed under the eagle eye not only of his own [illegible] but [illegible] the great French driver. This famous operator has made several periodical visits from La Belle France to superintend the construction of the two machines, which are already completed and which will be given a tryout in the very near future. [illegible] will drive one [illegible] himself, and another famous French operator will handle the wheel on the other. Mr. Thomas is not making any claims for victory as yet, but it is pretty well understood that the Thomas forces are expected to make an enviable showing in both the trials and the finals.

The Maxwell Briscoe people have likewise gone forward with a determination to produce a machine of speed and ability, having completed a four and an eight cylinder car which will be driven by a Philadelphian. The Locomobile people have all but finished their racing machines and the same is also true of the Pope Company, which may have two cup claimants. The Frayer-Miller people will have no less than three representatives in the trials, while the Mathesons will be satisfied with two. There is not a single steamer entered despite the fact that it was generally noised around that two machines, designed and constructed on much the same lines as the one driven by Marriott at Ormond last year, were constructed for this contest.

Oldsmobile Racer.

Another car which will bear watching will be the Oldsmobile racer, built for this contest and will be driven by Keller, a man of experience and nerve. Then there are the two great Wayne cars. All these machines are credited with being capable of showing at least eighty miles an hour while many of them are rated far above that speed.

There is no question but what the trial heat, if such it can be called, will prove fully as interesting as the final. It will have an advantage over the final in the fact that it will give to the student an opportunity to see just how the American cars compare one with the other, while the final permits an international comparison.

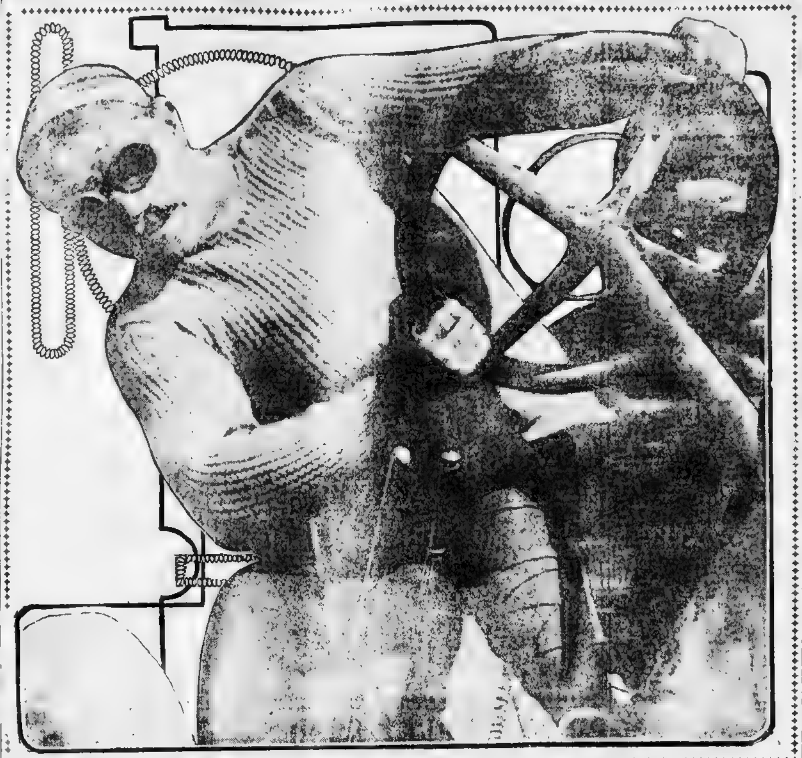
The records of the big motor races of the past two years show a gradual increase in the matter of speed. The last event produced an average of eighty over 50.1 seconds per mile. This, of course, does not equal the famous straightaway records made in Florida. It is not to be expected that such work would be produced in a road contest, where one has to take a chance of suffering all sorts and kinds of mishaps. A difference of eight and a fraction miles is shown between the time made by Duray in this, his latest race, and the time made by Hemery in the Vanderbilt of a year ago. No such difference is, however, shown in the time of Lancia in that event and the work of Duray in the latter. Hemery won the contest. Had Lancia not met with the mishap which he did in the Vanderbilt there is reason to believe that the average time for that event would have been much better, as he was almost one [illegible] ahead of the troublesome Frenchman at the time of his accident. Still, that is another story.

Speed In Plenty.

In the final of the coming Vanderbilt will be found all but one of the international race winner and record breakers of the past two years, the absentee being Thery. This means that there will be speed in plenty, that there is every chance of the records going by the board. Duray's latest performance will of course make him a strong favorite in the coming event, as will also Szisz, owing to his recent performance in the Grand Prix, the successor of the famous Gordon Bennett. Pitted against these men will be Raggio of Italy, Lancia the fearless and daring, Hemery the sulky and Heath another record holder and race winner. These comprise the latest record-breaking contingent, but do not by any means include all the big men who will do battle.

No field has ever contained a greater number of famous and daredevil drivers than will the Vanderbilt. Those who are familiar with racing affairs are fully satisfied that the coming big contest will assume greater speed proportions than any that have gone before. It is freely stated that 70 miles an hour will be exceeded, which means that an average greater than a mile in 50 seconds must be maintained to land the coveted record.

DURAY, WINNER OF THE 1906 ARDENNES CIRCUIT, TAKING A SHARP CURVE



PRICES OF AUTOS MAY ADVANCE

Those who are waiting for a fall in the price of automobiles before placing their order for the same, are doomed to wait considerable time if the present indications can be considered as significant. Instead of a [illegible] being announced, there is every reason to believe that there will be [illegible]. No less than [illegible] the best known manufacturers have virtually announced an increase of from $200 to $500 in the price of their cars for next year. One at least contemplates [illegible] great advancement, [illegible] this particular [illegible] or will advance his [illegible] [illegible] in the [illegible] are not to be repeated [illegible] industry just yet awhile.

LABORATORY IN EDISON'S AUTO

While his fame rests almost entirely upon his work in the electrical field, Thomas A. Edison has long been a consistent user of White steam cars. His recent journey through the South in search of cobalt was made in two of these cars. He occupied one with his son Charlie, and in the other rode two of his laboratory assistants.

The tonneau was removed from this second car and a platform was built in place thereof. On this was carried a complete camping outfit, so that the party were enabled to put up for the night at any point desired. There was also a complete laboratory equipment, so that analysis of mineral deposits could be carried out on the spot.

NEW FREIGHT CARS FOR AUTOS

As a result of some good work on the part of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association, most of the railroads are now building their freight cars with wider doors than usual. This is going to be a great benefit to motor car manufacturers in shipping machines, which in many cases heretofore, have had to be stripped and "knocked down" in order to be put in the freight car. The new freight cars which [illegible] being built especially those [illegible] for carrying automobiles, will have doors from six to seven feet wide.

MANY EARLY AUTO SALES

This is to be a season of early deliveries and early sales. FAST TIME CROSS THE CONTINENT

From the City Hall, San Francisco, to Herald square, New York, in fifteen days six hours, by automobile, is the remarkable record ride accomplished by L. L. Whitman in a six-cylinder Franklin car of 30 horsepower. The performance was seventeen days eighteen hours from the best previous record from coast to coast. He reached New York five minutes before midnight Friday night.

SHOCK ABSORBERS ON BIG TRUCKS

There seems to be no limit to the number of uses to which shock absorbers are being put. A few weeks ago it was a big sight seeing the bus that made the experiment with success; then they were placed on the White steamer ambulance in Philadelphia and last week one of the largest express companies in New York equipped one of its big ten-ton truck with a view of ascertaining its value for commercial vehicles.

LOOKING FOR NEW TOURS.

Augustus A. Post of the touring committee of the A. A. A. is at present touring in the South with a view to laying out a tentative course for the tour a year hence. Despite the severe, and it might be said at times unjust, criticism which was heaped upon the committee and its members, Mr. Post is still enthusiastic in his labor of love.

A. P. UNDERHILL'S TOUR.

A. P. Underhill of the Reed-Underhill Company has returned from a trip through the Knox factory at Springfield, and rather an extended tour through New York State.

NEW AEROCAR HAS ARRIVED IN THE HUB.

The new Aerocar runabout of which so much has been heard of late, arrived in Boston yesterday, being received by the Imperial Automobile Co. It appears as the [illegible] the development of the present [illegible] of a modern high speed gentleman's runabout. Its form and colors are selected and blended to satisfy the most refined taste. The operation of it is as simple and soft as can be achieved at the present state of the art. The upholstering of the seats and the form of same affords a [illegible] and [illegible] ease of [illegible] [illegible] of riding [illegible].

[illegible] high gear, it is [illegible] spark [illegible] will give range from eight to fifty or sixty miles, according to road conditions, by just touching [illegible]. Quick [illegible] situations [illegible] the speed of the car can be made by simply operating the clutch pedal, which, being thrown in the next notch, [illegible] [illegible] from racing [illegible] a full charge of gas in the cylinders, making it [illegible] to be [illegible] on a hill. The right-hand pedal operates the transmission brake only, and is used as emergency brake in combination with the left-hand pedal. The gear shifting lever is a side lever on the inside of the high side doors, which effectively protect the driver from draught or dust.

The shape of body and hood combined with the mud guard offer a minimum of wind resistance so far achieved in stock cars. The peculiar shape of the rear end of the body also produces air currents which hold down the dust behind the car.

MAKERS PLAN TOUR NEW YORK TO FRISCO

Windsor White's tentative suggestion for the Glidden Tour next year certainly is feasible. His idea is to separate the amateur and the professional, the club man and the maker's man. The makers are to have their own long distance cross country, go-as-you-please run, without a time limit, unlimited repairs, from New York to San Francisco, divided into classes. The first car to finish in each class is to take a prize for keeps, without a string on it. A prominent newspaper man is to furnish the prizes.

The whole affair is to be managed by the makers themselves, through the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers.

For the amateurs Mr. White suggests individual tours from all parts of the country, to be finished within thirty days; also a go-as-you-please affair to some central point like Bretton Woods—a certificate to be granted to each entrant who reaches the objective point.

Once there, Mr. White's further idea is to have a series of hill climbs, high-speed runs of two hundred miles for ten days, making a grand total of two thousand miles. All the tests are to be under close observation, with records that will produce data valuable both to maker and user.

As an alternative objective point, Mr. White also suggests the Jamestown celebration of next year. If these ideas are adopted, the winning of the Glidden trophy will be of some value to everybody, not a Scotch verdict of not proven as this year's grab fest was.

ENGLAND NOT IN RACE.

England will not be represented in the coming Vanderbilt contest, despite all statements to the contrary. Chairman Thompson of the racing board, who returned from Europe last week made the statement that England will remain out of the contest.

AUGUST PLUMPS 'EM

Nature is especially kind in the rounding out, plumping and development of all life at this season—Bright, sensible women realize that "the season is on," for excellent and quick results in the enlarging and plumping of the breasts. Only Dr. Conway's Bustoids Tablets can make them full, plump, voluptuous and entrancing. Dr. Conway: You may call to mind the lady who came to your office July 3, in behalf of another, concerning your treatment for developing the breasts, and who bought a course. Your directions followed fully and now want more for M. O. with this. We are much pleased with results. They are surely developing finely. Send as soon as possible, as she does not want to be without them. Wish you could have seen her when she first commenced—and then, now! Mrs. M. S., Onset Mass., Aug. 7. $1,000 if we can't produce the lady. $1,000 if you can bring us a girl from 12 to 75 we can't restore, enlarge and develop, and make large, full, plump, voluptuous and charming. Call for FREE INSTRUCTIONS. Sealed facts, 4c. stamps. CONWAY SPECIFIC CO., 496 Washington st., Boston.

Labor Day Is In Sight

ONLY two weeks away now. Perhaps it's a little early yet to place your orders, but it's none too early to be thinking about it. Watch for our Special Labor Day Announcement next Sunday, and don't think of ordering elsewhere until you've read it. It will be worth reading.

But in the mean time, if you have already made up your mind to get some of our goods for the holiday, "Old 56" perhaps, or some of our famous "Blue Labels," or maybe one of our $5.00 combinations, why send in your order this week. It's a pretty good idea to order early, before a holiday. And don't forget that we pay express on all $5.00 orders except for Ales, Champagne or Alcohol.

A Bottle of Choice Wine FREE With Every Order

Say!

If you want the real thing in whiskey, try "OLD 56." You can't touch it anywhere for less than four or five dollars a gallon. That's on the level. Try a gallon and see if it isn't. Try it THIS WEEK.

400 BOSTON PILGRIMS SEEK CURES AT THE FAMOUS SHRINE OF STE. ANNE

Sick, Blind and Crippled in the Party of Devout Catholics Under the Guidance of the Rev. Father J. J. McCafferty

Four hundred devout Catholic pilgrims who live in Boston and vicinity are now at the Shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, near Quebec, Canada. Many of them are invalids, who have made the long pilgrimage in the faith that their devotion will be the means of their cure from bodily ills.

Ste. Anne de Beaupre is located on a prairie tract bordering the St. Lawrence river, and opposite the Isle of Orleans. There has been a shrine there for 250 years, and during all that period it has been a Mecca for the devout of the oldest Christian faith. Pope Leo ordered it elevated to the dignity of a basilica, and it is said that thousands of pilgrims have found there that sickness fell away from them like an old garment.

Protestants in the Party.

The Boston pilgrims left this city Friday evening on a special train of seven Pullman sleepers and two coaches, and on arriving in Montreal yesterday morning boarded a steamboat for a two-hundred mile sail up the beautiful river. They are to be gone seven days, according to the itinerary, and the party is under the care of Rev. Father J. J. McCafferty of St. Thomas' Church, Jamaica Plain. In the party are a number of the Protestant faith.

Owing to a limit being set to the number of the pilgrims, several hundred persons who wished to go were disappointed.

The pilgrims were bade farewell by nearly 1,000 friends and relatives who assembled at the North Station and breathed silent prayers for the healing of the sick who had the faith to make such a long journey. Some of the pilgrims were blind others were paralyzed and not a few were cripples.

Priests Bid Farewell.

Among those in the throng which saw the party depart were: Rev. Father William F. Tooley, Rev. Father Neil Paul Brennan, Rev. Father Saunders of Somerville and Rev. Father Kennedy, S. S. J., of Montreal. Among the pilgrims were: Miss Nellie Dougherty, Jamaica Plain; Miss P. Buckley, Forest Hills; Miss Jessie MacDonald, Miss Nellie Macomber, the Misses Edgeworth, Miss Margaret Fuller, Miss Ann Gleason, Mrs. Fallam, Mrs. Josie O'Connor, Frances Mark Anthony, Miss Mary McNally, Mrs. Mary Ryan, John Connors, Mrs. Holmes English, Mrs. Margaret McGuire, Miss Elizabeth Boyle, Mrs. Nellie Berrane, Miss Ann Waters, Mrs. Agnes McHugh, Mrs. W. A. Vernon, Miss Kate Buckley, Mr. William Flemming, Jamaica Plain; Mrs. Nora Fitzgerald, Medford; Miss Grace S. Mansfield, Mrs. J. Gardiner Barnet, Miss Julia Dunther and Dr. O'Keefe, East Boston; Miss Nellie Kelley, Miss Sarah Doyle, Miss Nellie Kelley, Henry Doyle, George O'Neil, Michael Riley, Roxbury; Mrs. Josephine Cox, Mrs. Agnes Kane, Mrs. John A. Brennan, Medford; Miss Margaret Gleason, Miss Mary Hurley, Miss Margaret MacSweeney, Concord; Miss Mary Devlin, Salem; Mrs. Nora Fitzgerald, Medford; Mrs. M. Hussey, Woburn; Mrs. Julia E. Connor, Lynn; Miss Margaret Tracey, Gloucester; Miss Rose Hand, Randolph; Mrs. Maud Macearty, Miss Margaret Whalen, Woburn; Miss Mary Cary, Lynn; Mrs. Ellen Esther Tooley, Roxbury; Miss Anna Dolan, Mrs. Hannah Sullivan, Watertown; Mrs. Mary E. Mahoney, Medford; Mrs. Nellie Hurlihy and daughter Annie, East Cambridge; Mrs. Pierce D'Connor, Allston; Miss Mary Donovan, Boston; Miss Ann Cronin, Boston; Miss Mary Nicholly, Jamaica Plain; Mrs. Mary Maher, Boston; Miss Kate Buckley, William Macormack and daughter, Abbie, Jamaica Plain; Miss Rose Cannon, Roxbury; Miss May Donovan, Boston; Mrs. Alice Costlo, Lynn.

The Pilgrim of St. Anne's, whose faith brings cure for physical ills at famous shrine; adored relic, the old church, and picture of Rev. J. J. McCafferty, who conducts Boston party.

Three Days' Devotion.

Today at the shrine the Pilgrims will begin the "Tridium," or three days' devotion, conducted by the Redemptionist Fathers. Sunday, Monday and Tuesday will be spent at the shrine. On Wednesday school at Cliff Haven.

the pilgrims will start for home by rail. They will pass through Quebec, stopping at Montmorenci Falls, and leaving for Boston Thursday morning over the Green Mountain route. They are due here at 7:30 o'clock that evening. Some of the party will not return so soon, their tickets being good for ten days, with stop over privileges at Burlington, which will allow time for a visit to the Catholic summer school at Cliff Haven.

ROOSEVELT HAS MADE LAST RACE FOR THE PRESIDENCY

—CONGRESSMAN LONGWORTH.

Declares Father-in-Law's Mind Is Irrevocably Settled —Cannon Boom Not Taken Seriously.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 18.—Any doubt as to the administration and the great reforms to the determination of President Roosevelt not to be a candidate for another term, or hope on the part of Republicans that he may be induced or forced to make the race again, were removed today by a statement made by his son-in-law, Congressman "Nick" Longworth, who, with Mrs. Longworth, arrived in this city at noon. While talking of his own plans for re-election to Congress, Mr. Longworth was asked:

"Do you think there is any prospect of President Roosevelt being induced to stand for re-election?"

"None whatever," he replied. "No possible combination of circumstances could arise which would lead to accept a third term. His mind is settled irrevocably on the matter.

"The President is in excellent health. He is anxious that the party should carry Congress, for it would be an encouragement that he legislation that he has inaugurated and in which he was loyally supported by the House.

Congressman "Nick" does not consider the Cannon boom for President seriously, but regards it as a complimentary demonstration.

WARD 18 DEMOCRATS PLAN BIG OUTING

A great outing under the auspices of the Ward 18 Democratic Club will be held at Faxon's Grove, Quincy, today. This club has already endorsed the candidacy of District Attorney John B. Moran for Governor and intend to launch his boom today before the crowd at Quincy.

Councilman Thomas J. Fay and Daniel J. Cahey, Jr., both candidates for representative, will be present and speak. A delectable and a New England boiled dinner will be served during the day.

DORCHESTER WOMAN COMMITS SUICIDE IN CALIFORNIA.

Miss Mary E. Reddick, or M. G. Jewell, Took Carbolic Acid at Pasadena; Unbalanced by Inability to Get Work

A woman who said she was Miss Mary E. Reddick of Dorchester, committed suicide yesterday in the Y. W. C. A. rooming house at No. 280 Grant street, Pasadena, Cal., by drinking carbolic acid, according to despatches from that city last night.

Among her effects was found the name of M. G. Jewell, Dorchester. It is thought this possibly that is her right name.

Miss "Reddick" was a stenographer and her inability to obtain work had preyed upon her mind until she was considered partly demented by people in the house. Believing she would carry out threats made to kill several persons an officer was sent for to take charge of her yesterday. When she saw him coming she rushed up to her room and swallowed the poison, declaring she would never be taken alive.

None of the families by the name of Reddick in Dorchester could throw light on the identity of the suicide. Neither name given appears in the Boston directory.

MANY SUBURBAN TRANSFERS RECORDED

The moderate activity which has prevailed in the real estate market all Summer continued unchecked all the week. The pleasant and comparatively cool weather helped to increase the number of sales. Farms were the most active, although the various other classes of dwelling were not neglected.

Through the office of the Edward T. Harrington Co., the well known Nathan B. Abbott farm in Andover is sold. It is located on both sides of Ballardvale and Sunset Rock roads, and contains 110 acres, one quarter of a mile west of the Boston and Lawrence State road. The stock a large herd of cattle, tools and furniture are included in the sale. There is an attractive house of sixteen rooms, the stock barns and outbuildings, a farmers' house of twelve rooms. The estate was sold for John B. Witham, a Marblehead shoe manufacturer, who has owned the property for twenty years. The purchaser is the Rev. Edward Sturges, a Bostonian, who has just returned from Switzerland. The estate is assessed for $12,000. This is one of the most important sales made in Andover this season. The farm is in close proximity to many other beautiful estates built or now in process of completion.

Hub Men Purchasers.

Breck's Real Estate Agency reports agreements signed for the sale of the Ada M. Woods estate, situated on Washington street, Hoblsion, Mass. There are ten acres of land, with large house and stable.

Deals in Somerville.

The estate at No. 29 Auburn avenue, East Somerville, is reported sold through the office of Edward T. Harrington Company. The property consists of a cottage house with stable adjoining, and a lot of 4400 square feet. The grantor is James Tucker, and the purchaser, W. A. Dunham, buys for investment. The same firm also report the sale for the Cape Ann Savings Bank of the estate at 23 Henderson street, North Somerville, consisting of house of seven rooms and lot containing about 2000 square feet. The purchaser buys for improvement.

Large Estate Changes Hands.

P. F. Leland has completed the sale of the Merlin estate in Stowe on the road to Harvard. There are more than one hundred acres of land, a part heavily wooded. The buildings consist of the typical two and one-half story farmhouse in good condition, surrounded by century elms, a barns and an ice house. A large herd of cattle and all other personal property were included in the sale. J. C. Taylor, of Somerville, buys for occupancy.

E. S. Burnham has sold his estate, situated on the northerly side of West street, Reading, containing seven acres of land, most of which is wooded. Charles M. Nagoll of Lawrence is the grantee. The property is valued at $1,800. It is the intention of the purchaser to erect a frame cottage on the premises in the near future. Edward T. Harrington Company negotiated the sale.
